The pitiful story of the poor girl's shame and ruin has a moral. It speaks for itself; otherwise the story might have remained untold. Let those who need the moral apply it. The blighted life, the ruined hopes, the outraged name of this girl,—once one of the fairest and happiest in this neighborhood, speak in trumpet tones a warning to the giddy trifler who venture to tread on the perilous ground of impropriety; or who give to pious professions any greater confidence than is justified by conduct corresponding therewith.

The above is from the Cornwall Freeholder. The same paper gives a report of a meeting of the Board of School Trustees, called by the Chairman, for the purpose of considering a Communication he had received, accompanied with a resignation from Mr. Augustus C. Hay as Teacher of the head department of the Common Schools in Cornwall. A petition was also laid before the Board by the Chairman signed by upwards of 30 parents and guardians of children under Hay's charge, praying that the resignation of Mr. Hay be not accepted. In amendment it was moved that the re accepted,—amendment lost and original motion carried, four to two. Curious Characters and strange Trustees, parents and guardians in Cornwall, who will keep a School Teacher in the head department of their School, when a jury has declared guilty of the seduction of one of the pupils of the School. Morality must be at a discount there. The villain deserves the pillory and the penitentiary if the facts of the case are as represented. And his cousin, Faulkner, who seems so utterly lost to shame, should be proscribed from society. A more wicked and filthy case we do not remember of coming across, and yet thirty parents and guardians of the youth want the wretch continued, and School Trustees wish him retained. Tell it not in Gath.

The Educational Department.

Last week we referred to the conduct o the Department in not sending, before this, the Grant for the Common School of this Town, that in place of saying the reason for the delay when written to by the Treasurer, the envelope of his letter was sent back with unpaid postage 1½ Cents and a printed copy of the new postage law.—On the 10th instant, the Town Treasurer received a letter from the Chief Superintendent notifying him that the money had been paid to his agents in Toronto. An N. B. is appended as follows: "If you have the School accounts for 1861 in your hands please forward them." From which it appears that the school accounts are wanting in the Education Office, and yet the money is sent forward for a dun. There appears to be a screw loose somewhere.

Our former remarks have called forth the following letter:—

EDUCATION OFFICE,
Toronto, 10th Oct., 1862.

SIR,—Referring to a paragraph in your paper of the 9th instant, I have the honor to state that you are entirely in error in supposing that there has been any "culpable neglect on the Department" with respect to the Peterboro' money. The apportionment remained unpaid, because the Treasurers amount was received here in an incomplete state, sent back for correction, and not returned by him. The standing regulations on this subject are as appended on the margin.* A copy of them is appended to the apportionment every year, (as well as to the blank form of Report) and a copy was sent last June to the Treasurer.

Although it is the duty, and the practice of the Department to retain the Grant until the information required by law has been furnished, the money was paid on the 7th instant in consequence of the urgent need of the Board as expressed in the in the Treasurer's letter of the 3rd instant, at the same time that officer was again requested to forward the accounts.

You are also in error in stating that "Dr. Ryerson has the (Peterboro') money lying in the Bank at interest." No money at the credit of the Head of this Department has drawn any interest for the last seven years.

I have the honor to be,
Sir,
Your ob'd't servant,
T. GEORGE HODGINS,
Dept. Superintendent.

To the Editor of the Peterborough Examiner, Peterboro.'

*NOTE.—The School Moneys apportioned to the various Cities, Towns, and Villages, as per the foregoing statement, are payable to wherever Bragg declines the towards Cumberland Gap. It is reported that many tunnels are falling in there now, and otherwise Bragg may find the roads over which the rebels must pass to leave the State.

Washington, Oct. 17.

When Gen. Prentis, one of the returned British prisoners, was speaking to-night, some one in the crowd inquired what the rebels think of Lincoln's emancipation proclamation. He replied that many of the officers with whom he conversed blasphemously condemned it, saying it was damnable and never could be enforced, but he (Prentiss) responded to them, "If you say you never can be conquered and that you are bound to whip us, what harm can the proclamation work." He would declare everywhere that the proclamation would do more to end the rebellion than all the battles fought.

Washington, Oct. 19.

The Star has the following special despatch:—

Harrisburg, Oct. 18.

Our information to-day is more encouraging than it was yesterday. The Republican candidates in three closely contested districts, will get certificates of election, though their Democrat competitors may try to contest their right to seats before the House.

The congressional delegation will stand 13 Republicans to 11 Democrats. The Republican majority in the State legislature will probably be five or six on joint ballot. The Democratic State ticket is probably elected by a small majority.

Cincinnati, Oct. 19.

After capturing our pickets, the guerilla Morgan dashed at Lexington yesterday morning, at the head of 1,500 men.

Before surrendering, our troops made a gallant resistance, killing and wounding several.

Our loss is 6 killed and 125 prisoners. They were immediately paroled. 250 of our cavalry succeeded in escaping.

To-day, while between Versailles and Frankfort, he was suddenly met by about 2,500 men of Gen. Dumont's cavalry, when after a short fight the rebels were routed, and scattered in utter confusion.

HEADQUARTERS UNITED STATES' FORCES, Nashville, Oct. 9.—Gen. Negley's official report:—Maj-Gen. S. R. Anderson, Brig-Gen. Forest and Gov. Harris have been rapidly concentrating a large Confederate force at Sarergne, 15 miles east, with the avowed intention of assaulting Nashville. Deeming it a favorable opportunity to check his project by a sudden blow, a concerted movement was made on the night of the 6th inst. A force of 400 infantry, 400 cavalry, and 4 pieces of artillery, under command of Gen. Palmer, was sent via the Murfreesboro road. At the same time 1,800 infantry, under Col. Weller, marched by a circuitous route to the south of Sarergne. The enemy's pickets and videttes were in considerable force on the roads and skirmished with our advance 10 miles, enabling their main force consisting of one regiment of infantry, the 32nd Alabama, one steel rifled cannon and 3,000 cavalry, to assume a position forming their lines in anticipation of the entire force advancing on the Murfreesboro' road, which was part of our object. The enemy commenced action by opening fire with three pieces of artillery, at a distance of three hundred yards. This was soon silenced by a shell from one of our guns, exploding their ammunition chest. At the moment the enemy were directing their movement against the right flank of General Palmer's force, Colonel Miller's infantry arrived, advanced in splendid line and delivering a well-directed fire into the enemy's ranks which was followed by a skilful deployment right and left to cut off their retreat. The Confederates held their ground for thirty minutes then fled in the wildest disorder, leaving 175 prisoners in our hands, among whom were two Lieutenant-Colonels and a number of line officers, three pieces of artillery ordnance and Quartermaster's stores a large amount of provisions, camp equipage, personal effects and regimental colors, and two railroad cars, which we destroyed. Their defeat was complete. Their loss in killed and wounded was about 80.

The conduct of our forces and men was highly meritorious with numerous instances of individual bravery and efficiency. A report in detail will be forwarded at the first opportunity.

Our loss was 5 killed, 9 wounded, and 4 missing.

JAS. S. NEGLEY, Brig. Gen.

Philadelphia, Oct. 20.

The Washington Republican of to day says a refugee who came into Gen Seigel's headquarters at Amesville, Culpepper Co., Va., reports that there is the greatest consternation imaginable among the whites in that section in consequence of an apprehended negro revolt. Seventeen negroes, most of them free, had been hung—one pair of Northern newspapers having been found among them, containing President Lincoln's proclamation to liberate the slaves. It is said that the negroes of the different counties around Culpepper are all engaged in a conspiracy for a general insurrection.

Fortress Monroe, Oct. 19.

The Petersburg Express of the 15th says 2,000 Yankee prisoners are expected to arrive in Petersburg for the North.

The Richmond Despatch of Oct. 16, says:—We infer that the Federals will soon make a desperate effort to force ironclads past Drury's Bluff. Forewarned, let us be forearmed. A battle observed in Pennsylvania on the 14th inst, which Kentucky will mourn for many years. The Federal loss was heavy. Prentice says it was a drawn battle. The Confederate forces fell back six miles.

The Richmond Examiner of the 17th, claims the victory at the battle of Perryville, it says the Federal loss is killed and wounded and captured was over 20,000. The Confederate loss was 5,000.

Deaths.

Peterboro', 17th Sept., 1862. 38

FINKLE & LYON

SEWING MACHINE COMPANY,

538 Broadway, New York.

TO parties little acquainted with the Finkle & Lyon Sewing Machine the careful perusal of the Company's Circular is specially recommended. This circular can be had on application. It is very specific, and will be found highly instructive, having been prepared with much care and we will abide by all statements therein made.

The following his quotation is characteristic of the entire Circular:

"This Machine is better adapted than any other Sewing Machine in market to the frequent changes and almost endless variety of sewing required in a family; for it will sew from one to twenty thicknesses of Marseilles without stopping, and make every stitch perfect. Will sew from the finest gauze to the heaviest cloth, and even the sinnest harness leather, without changing the feed needle or tension, or making any adjustment of machine whatever."

Thus have we successfully overcome the most difficult point in the Sewing Machine art. It was no ordinary triumph. Defiantly can we now say, "No other Machine compares with it in this respect." Hence, have we uniformly—almost without exception—taken the highest premium, whenever the Machine has been properly exhibited in competition with other first class Sewing Machines. Hence it is that we are able to offer the following guarantee, viz.: "We warrant every Machine we sell to give better satisfaction than any other Sewing Machine in the market, or money refunded." We never sell a Machine on any other terms. The guarantee is as reliable as the note of any business man in the land. For more than five years have we relied upon such facts for the reputation of our Machine; and without a single travelling agent in the field, there is scarcely a neighborhood on the continent where the Machine is not favourably known. We prefer such a reputation to one based on mere "talking points," as they are technically called in the trade. Hence we make but one kind of stitch, viz. the lock-stitch, alike on both sides, requiring only one thread of the kind of silk or thread.

N. B.—Local Agents wanted in every county throughout the West. ☞ Special inducements offered.

ANNUAL MEETING
INVESTIGATION REPORT - - - DECLARATION OF BONUS.

THE thirty-sixth annual Meeting of this Company was held within the Royal Hotel, Aberdeen Friday, the 18th April

Alexander Stronach, Esq., of Dramallan, Chairman of the Ordinary Directors, in the Chair. There were submitted to the meeting—

1.—Report by the Directors, which, on the motion of the Chairman, was cordially and unanimously approved of and adopted.

2.—The Balance Sheet for the past year, with detailed states relative thereto, duly certified as correct, in terms of the Act of Incorporation, by the Chairman and Manager, and also by the Auditor.

There was also laid on the Table the various Valuation States in connection with the Quinquennial Investigation into the state of the Company's affairs, as at 31st January, 1862.

The following particulars derived from the Balance Sheet and States before-mentioned, show the result of the operations of the Company for the past year:—

Amount proposed for Life Assurance during the year, contained in 1189 Proposal	£454,835 0 0
Amount of Proposals accepted, and for which 981 Policies were issued	350,980 0 0
ANNUAL PREMIUMS or said Policies	11,170 1 0
CLAIMS BY DEATH including BONUSES on PARTICIPAT ON POLICIES, and after deducting Sums recovered from other Offices under guarantees	23,990 1 0
TOTAL SUM Assured under 4,758 current LIFE POLICIES	1,956,940 0 0
TOTAL ACCUMULATED FUNDS	373,863 3 2
TOTAL ANNUAL REVENUE	96,756 4 4

With reference to the recent investigation into the state of the Company's affairs, as at 31st January last, the Report Stated that both the principles of valuation and the details thereof, had been submitted to James John Downes, Esq., Actuary to the Economic Life Office in London, a gentleman well known as one of the highest authorities on such subjects in the kingdom, and had received his entire approval, as having been made on just and sound principles, and accurately carried out as certified in his report to the Directors, which formed part of the Appendix to their Report. This step the Directors considered could not fail to give the utmost confidence—both to the shareholders and the Policyholders—in the soundness and correctness of the valuation.

During the Quinquennial period, the claims by death, including the bonus additions which had been paid, and which had been considerably under the number that might have been expected from the Mortality Tables on which the Office rates are based, amounting to £93,975 8s 6d.

In valuing the Policies, each had been separately calculated, and net premiums had only been used, thus leaving a surplus of annual revenue of £11,427 18s 7d., to meet future expenses and to form a source of profit for next investigation. The total amount of claims by death paid since the commencement of the Company, was £217,824 4s.

The Securities held by the Company were in a satisfactory position, and had been recently carefully scrutinized in detail by the Directors.

In conclusion, the Directors congratulated both the Proprietors and the Assured on the high position which the Company now occupied in the estimation of the public, and on the encouraging prospect of its business operations for the future.

DECLARATION OF BONUS.

From the profits realised on the Life business, a retrospective Bonus of £1 7s 6d per cent per annum for the Quinquennial period was declared, on the sums originally assured under all Participating Policies, increased by the previous additions thereto; also a further prospective Bonus of £1 per cent per annum, on the amount of the Policies with said Bonuses, on all such of said Policies as may become claims by Death previously to the 31st January, 1867.

It will be observed, that this rate of Bonus is equivalent in the case of our older Policies to £3 14s per cent per annum on the original sum assured; that the total additions to the sum assured, now vest d, are equal to 32 per cent on the sum assured: and that as the younger ages the additions amount to upwards of 75 per cent of the premiums paid.

Statement showing the Progress of the Company's Business during the Quinquennial Period, ending 31st January, 1862:

FIRE INSURANCE.

THE following table compiled from the official returns, exhibits, at a glance, the increase of duty paid to the Government by the different Insurance Offices, in metropolitan and provincial, during the year 1861.

THE "ROYAL."

It will be seen, stands as before, at the very head of the list, and maintains a rate of progress very far in advance of all its rivals and competitors. Twelve months ago, we had the gratification of recording the fact that its increase, in the year 1860, had been more than double that of any other company—had exceeded 30 per cent.—of the entire increase of all the London offices combined—and had, also exceeded 36 per cent, of the aggregate increase of the remaining twenty eight provincial offices. We have now the pleasure of inviting the attention of our readers to the testimony of these latter returns, which show that in the year 1861, the increase of the "Royal" was nearly sixty per cent, in excess of the increase of any other company—that there were but three offices which came even within fifty per cent. Comment upon such facts as these would be superfluous. They prove, unmistakeably, the continued advance of the "Royal" in the confidence and good opinion of the public. That advance has been, from the beginning, as remarkable as it has been rapid; and we cordially congratulate the directors and shareholders upon it, because we regard it as the just reward of prudent management, of liberal and honorable dealing, and of undoubted stability.

By JOHN C. GUNN, M. D.,

Author of the old work known as "GUNN'S DOMESTIC MEDICINE."

Also, an APPENDIX, containing a popular treatise on ANATOMY, PHYSIOLOGY, and the LAWS OF HEALTH; the whole making a large octavo volume of

OVER ONE THOUSAND PAGES,

with numerous

VALUABLE ILLUSTRATIONS!

THIS is probably the best, as well as the most thorough and extensive book ever published, as a Domestic or Family Medical Work. Its author is now old in years, and is probably more generally known as a popular medical author than any man living, owing to the great popularity of his former work, the old work, which was one of great value, but in the present advanced state of medical science is altogether behind the times. Dr G. is a graduate of several of the best Medical Colleges in the world, viz.: of Philadelphia, and of London and Paris. He has been a successful practicing physician for nearly forty years; and it can be hardly supposed that any man can be better qualified to write such a work than he is. He has spent most of the time for several years in preparing this work—intending it, as he often remarked, as his last and greatest Legacy to Posterity.

The work contains a description of all the diseases known or common to this country—their causes, symptoms, and character—with plain and full directions for successfully treating them, telling what remedies to use; how to use them, and when; the whole stated in plain and simple language; or whenever any technical or Medical terms are used, they are fully explained; so that the commonest mind can understand them. The remedies recommended are generally of the simplest kind, such as are harmless, yet efficient, and usually such as are easily to be obtained.

Besides the diseases common to both sexes, the work contains a department on the diseases of Females, and their treatment. Also a department on the diseases of Children, which alone is worth the price of the book to mothers and all who have the care of children.

An important item in the work is its Pharmacy, or valuable Family Receipts, there being more than forty pages of Medical Receipts and Compounds, many of which will be found very important and useful in a family.

☞ Remember that this book can only be had of the Agent, when he calls, and is not to be had either of us direct, or through Booksellers.

From the Illustrated Monthly for October.

The Battle Autumn of 1862.

BY JOHN G. WHITTIER.

The flags of war like storm-birds fly, The charging trumpets blow; Yet rolls no thunder in the sky, No earthquake strives below.

And calm and patient Nature keeps Her ancient promise well, Though o'er her bloom and greenness creeps The battle's breath of hell.

And still she walks in golden hours Through harvest-happy fields And still she wears her fruits and flowers Like jewels on her breast.

What means the gladness of the plain, This joy of eve and morn, The mirth that shakes the beard of grain And yellow locks of corn?

Ah eyes may well be full of tears, And hearts with hate are hot; But even peace comes round the years, And Nature changes not.

She meets with smiles our bitter grief, With songs our groans of pain; She mocks with wind and bird and leaf The war-field's crimson stain.

Still in the cannon's pause, we hear Her sweet thanksgiving psalm; Too near to God for human fear, She shares the eternal calm.

She knows the seed lies safe below The fires that blast and burn; For all the tears of blood we sow She waits the rich return.

She sees with clearer eyes than ours The good of suffering born,— The hearts that blossom like her flowers And ripen like her corn.

Oh, give to us, in times like these, The vision of her eyes; And make her fields and fruits and trees Our golden prophecies!

Oh, give to us her finer part Above the stormy din, We, too, would hear the bells of cheer Ring peace and freedom in.

Miscellaneous.

An English Borgia.

The London papers are just now filled with the report of a woman, Catherine Wilson, tried and convicted at the Old Bailey for murder by poison. The particular crime was the murder, the years ago, of a widow lady, Mrs. Soames, who lived near Bedford Square in London. She seems to have been a very monster in crime, a female Palmer, an English Lucrezia Borgia, and like these noted criminals, met cause to a sad end. She is to be hanged shortly. Of her career, the reader can form a fair opinion from the following remarks of Mr. Justice Byles, while passing sentence of death:—

"I never heard a case where it was so clearly proved that a murder was committed, and where the excruciating pain and agony of the victim were weighed with so much deliberation by the murderer. The greatest care was taken during the progress of the trial that nothing should be improperly introduced into the enquiry, and that you should not be prejudiced by the verdict; and there can no longer be any fear that their decision should in any way be improperly influenced, I think it right that the jury should know, and that the public also should know, what sort of a person it is that the avenging arm of the law has at last overtaken. I find, then, that about the year 1852 or 1854 you were employed in the capacity of a servant or housekeeper to a person named Manson who lived at Bourne, in Lincolnshire, and that this person was in the habit of taking colchicum. He made his will in the month of April, and by that will he left you the whole of the little property he possessed. He died in the month of October following. I will say no more about this case except that it is quite clear that at this time you were perfectly well acquainted with the nature and effects of colchicum. In the year 1856 I find that you were living with a young man named Dixon, and that you came to London and went to lodge with him at the house of the deceased. Dr. Whitehouse was called in to attend him. He was not attended upon the proper trial to state any of the circumstances connected with the illness of this person, but I may say to the public that it appears by the depositions that Dixon was suddenly taken ill by the administration of some poisonous substance; and that he died very quickly of excruciating pain, presenting all the symptoms of poisoning by the vegetable poison colchicum; and that he died very quickly of excruciating pain, presenting all the symptoms of poisoning by the vegetable poison colchicum; and that he died very quickly of excruciating pain, presenting all the symptoms of poisoning by the vegetable poison colchicum; and that he died very quickly of excruciating pain, presenting all the symptoms of a galloping consumption, but on his body being opened his lungs were found perfectly healthy. About the year 1857 I find that you went to the house of Mr. Thomas Jennings, who also resided at Bedford, and that you were among the dress-makers employed in the house. On the 15th of [illegible] this unfortunate lady was seized with [illegible] and died in dreadful agony, [illegible] you were present. [illegible] you were present. [illegible] you were present.

Armor Plates Assailed with Shells! Remarkable Gun Experiments.

Perhaps the most remarkable experiments that have taken place with guns of different construction and calibre, and projectiles and shell, occurred at Shoeburyness, England, on the 20th ult. Members of a Government select committee on iron plates and ordnance, and Lords of the Admiralty were present. The first experiment made was with the Rendell gun—a converted 9-inch muzzle-loading gun of 12 tons weight, carrying forty-two pounds of powder and a shell of 250 lbs., the whole weighing twenty-two tons and forged at the Mersey Steel and Iron works, Liverpool.

A target representing part of the side of the Australia, being 24 feet high, was built with 10 inches of solid teak wood. The gun was loaded with a shell of 250 lbs., and a charge of 42 lbs. of powder, and it was placed at the usual distance of two hundred yards from the target. The first shot was a failure. It exploded through the muzzle of the gun, and completely destroyed it for further experiments.

Other trials of still more important character, however, were made with a Whitworth rifled breech-loaded 12 pounder field gun, of 6-inch bore, and a 70 pounder rifled naval gun. The object of these trials was principally to test their penetrating power with hardened flat-fronted solid steel shot. Hitherto the shells which had been fired against armor plates of comparative thickness had been broken in pieces, and it had been held that wrought iron of 24 inch plates were shell proof. The first trial was with the 12-pounder-firing solid flat-fronted steel shot at a distance of 100 yards against plates of 2 and 2½ inches in thickness. In both cases the shot cut their way clear through the plates. The same gun was then loaded with a flat-fronted steel shell, containing 6 ounces of powder and the charge was 1 lb. 14 ounces of powder. No fuze was employed, as Mr. Whitworth stated that the heat generated in the shell when it struck the target would be sufficient to ignite the bursting charge. One shell passed completely through a plate 2 inches thick and an oak backing 1 foot thick, and the other pierced through the plate and burst in the backing, shutter it to pieces. This was certainly a most interesting experiment.

The 70-pounder naval gun was next tried against a target of 6-inch armor plate bolted upon an oak frame nine inches thick, attached by a framing of four inches thick covered on the back with 2-inch iron plates. —The intervening space between the front and back frames was 20 inches, and the entire thickness of iron was six inches. The gun was loaded with a flat-fronted steel shell which weighed 70 lbs., the charge of powder 12 lbs., and the gun was placed at 200 yds. from the target. The first shot passed clear through the 6-inch plate and the timber backing, and struck against the 2-inch back plate, which it cracked, then it burst and shattered the target.

The result of these trials surprised most persons present. The tremendous destructive power of the Hendell gun—the largest wrought-iron cannon in England—was astounding. A huge hole, two feet square, was struck out of the plate by a spherical shot, and the surrounding iron was wrecked in all directions and made a complete wreck. On the other hand, the flat-fronted projectiles of 70 hundredth pounds cut clean holes in the plate without fracturing any of the surrounding portions. The power of great guns to penetrate armor plates has thus been demonstrated, and those present at the trials, it is said, appeared convinced that 6-inch cannon could have pierced through plates six inches in thickness. The London Times which appears to have become the authoritative organ of conservative government shows, remarks that the balance of merit for general purposes lies with the Armstrong gun. But the Mechanics' Magazine asserts that the Hendell gun has successfully accomplished that which Sir Wm. Armstrong, with the whole resources of the nation at his command, has been after numberless trials unable to accomplish." The Lords of the Admiralty have been expending hundreds of thousands of pounds during the past two years in making experiments to see if iron plates 6½ inches in thickness could be pierced with the largest Armstrong guns, and from their experiments, it would appear that they had become almost satisfied that their new iron-clad frigates were invulnerable, and put this Hendell gun, which has smashed the Warrior target to pieces with a single shot, has been lying at Portsmouth in charge of the government officials for six years, during which period all trials with it were pertinaciously refused. The Mechanics' Magazine asserts that three million pounds (about $15,000,000) have been expended uselessly in the construction of Armstrong guns. The Hendell gun, must be of great strength as the charge of powder used was prodigious. For short distances the penetrating and smashing power of spherical shot fired from smooth bore guns is great; but for great distances rifled guns and elongated shot are superior, because the round shot in its flight meets with so much greater resistance from the atmosphere.—Scientific American.

A Remarkable Letter of General Scott.

The following letter, which has been kept locked up in Simon read a remarkable letter, [illegible] States, into Correspondence of the Federal troubles, by Mr. Seward, written on the 3rd of March 1861—(the day before the inauguration of Mr. Lincoln as President)—but which has never seen the light until now. The publication of the letter at this crisis has excited a good deal of feeling and gossip, first, as one not of its contents, and secondly, because it cannot be discovered how Mr. Van Buren got hold of the letter. General Scott avers that he did not authorize the publication, and Messrs. Lincoln and Seward declare that they are equally [illegible] have been freely uttered against General Scott; and the old General, to ward off the sharp edge, has since seemed to be retained a series of private documents [illegible] statements written about the same [illegible] which reflect more patriotic fire on him. When it is remembered that for more than half a year the very existence of the Federal Government may be said to have hung upon the word and will of General Scott, these documents have a peculiar interest, and may assist in an appreciation of [illegible] incomprehensible things in [illegible] history of the war. We subjoin General Scott's letter:—

Washington, March 3, 1861.

DEAR SIR: Having but a day or two the new President will have passed through all personal dangers, and find himself installed as General Secretary of the great Washington, with you to the chief if he Cabinet. I beg leave to report, in writing, what I have before said to you verbally—the [illegible] my private opinion, (and [illegible] General) as to the right disposition of our forces, with reference to the [illegible] Harpers Ferry and [illegible] Virginia. To [illegible] extraordinary [illegible] of the moon, it seems to me that I am guilty of no impropriety in [illegible] the President's field of operations or any of the [illegible] of procedure additional to those [illegible] Inaugural.

1. That all the old and regular [illegible] Department of the United States, [illegible] Mr. Cameron, or the Quartermaster General, [illegible] any fit time [illegible] not of the Union which [illegible] of rebels, if not of the Union which [illegible] thereof; but on the contrary, as early [illegible] of rebels, if not of the Union which [illegible] thereof, but on the contrary, as early [illegible] be absolutely broken off the Union. While [illegible] equally benign measures, the remaining slaveholding States will probably join the Montgomery Confederacy at less than sixty days; when this city, [illegible] a foreign country, would require a permanent garrison of at least thirty-five thousand troops to protect the Government within it.

II. Collect the duties on foreign goods outside the ports of which the Government has lost the command, [illegible] such ports by Act of Congress and blockade them.

III. Conquer the assailed forts by investing armies. No doubt this might be done in two or three years by a young and able General—a Wolfe, a Dundas, or a Hardee,—with [illegible] disciplined men, constituting a third for garrisons and the loss of a still greater number by skirmishers, sharpshooters and [illegible]. The destruction of life and property on the other side would be frightful, however perfect the moral discipline of the invaders.

The conquest completed at that enormous waste of human life to the North and Northwest—with at least $250,000,000, added therefore, and cui bono? Fifteen devastated provinces [illegible] not to be brought into harmony with their conquerors, but to be held for generations by heavy garrisons, at an expense quadruple the nett duties or taxes which it would be possible to extort from them, followed by a Protector or Emperor.

IV. Say to the seceded States—Wayward sisters, depart in peace. In haste, I remain very truly

Yours,

WINFIELD SCOTT.

Hon. Wm. H. SEWARD, &c., &c.,

In the document from General Scott which the unauthorized publication of the above letter has called forth, he dissents upon all demonstration the long and extraordinary efforts he made in the winter of 1860, when the secession movement began, to put the Southern forts and arsenals in such a position of strength that the secessionists would see that their capture, or a successful revolution, was impossible. He shows how for months he urged upon Mr. Buchanan in person and by letter, and through his ministers, the necessity of quick and decided military action, so as to crush the movement in its very inception, and he shows how through the vacillation, imbecility, and treachery of President Buchanan and his Cabinet all his efforts proved unsuccessful. Most of the memoranda and extracts of letters which he has published antedate the above letters to Mr. Seward; but he shows also that even after that date he was still active in military operations against the secessionists, which is indeed a thing known to the whole world.

The letter to Mr. Seward giving above needs no comment; but it will be acknowledged by all who read it that General Scott is a man of extraordinary foresight, and that he had a truer conception of what was meant by war against the Slave States than any other man in North America.

Peterborough Examiner.

THURSDAY OCTOBER 30, 1862.

T E BACK COUNTRY.

There is to the north of the Town of Peterborough an immense tract of land which has of late years been surveyed into Townships, and a number of settlers have gone in to make farms for themselves out of the wilderness. There were but ten Townships in the former County of Peterboro, while in the rear there are twenty-four. Of course many of them are without a settler, but the fact that there is such a large tract of land in our immediate vicinity will induce the intending settler to look in this direction. There is a Government Road between the Counties of Peterboro' and Victoria made to some forty miles back from Peterborough, and it is intended to [illegible] land for farming purposes, and its settlement is but a question of time. At present it is computed that there are 5,000 settlers in this tract. One thing may be safely calculated upon, and that is, if there is good land, it will be settled. The Burleigh Road commences at the rear of the North East angle of the Township of South, and between the Townships of Burleigh and Harvey, and proceeds in a North Easterly direction. After passing through the first [illegible] Township the land in the new Townships begins to [illegible] It is said that [illegible] settlers are finding their way in here also, and that the free grants are all taken up by intending settlers.—There is no doubt but in a short time there will be a large settlement in the North East portion of the County. A glance at the map will convince any one that the natural outlet of this country is through the Town of Peterborough. There is, however, a part of the most promising portion of Government Road which is not yet cut out or made, and that is between Young's Mills and Burleigh Chute, some four or five miles. There is a fair road from the Town to Young's, and a good road from Burleigh Chute both. It requires the immediate [illegible] made to open up to settlement the [illegible] to have communication with the Back Country. A new settlement must have a market for its [illegible] buying and selling. The trade of the Peterborough settlement is finding its way to London, [illegible] Toronto, and a small outlet, via Trent, at Percy [illegible] Belleville. Peterborough [illegible] should [illegible] the trade, legitimately belonging to us, in their direction. Colonel Haultain in a letter to the Town Council last Monday night called the attention of the Council to this matter, and urged the Council to take it up. A Committee composed of the Mayor and Messrs Dickson and Lawson were appointed to confer with the Warden and Reeve of South in relation thereto. This matter deeply concerned the whole County, as whatever tends to benefit the Town tends to benefit the County, and vice versa.—The County Council should take the matter up, and the Township of South and the Town of Peterborough would, we are persuaded, come forward liberally to assist. The Town Council feels disposed to help all it can. It cannot, however, initiate the undertaking, it can only assist the County or Townships in the undertaking.

We beg respectfully to call the attention of our business and our public men to this subject. The trade of this new country should be secured to the Town, and now is the time to make an effort to secure it by providing a communication. It would be but a small matter for the Merchants of Peterborough to make the connecting link we speak of. Money so spent would be well invested. Now is the time to make a decided effort to obtain the connection with the section of our rear country, but if we delay we may rest assured efforts will be put forth to secure a trade we seem by our apathy to despise.

We shall await the result of the conference with the Warden, with interest, and trust that measures will at once be adopted to make the Road.

THE LANCASHIRE OPERATIVE RELIEF FUND.

The Public Meeting advertised to take place was held on Saturday, 18th instant. It was but thinly attended. Several gentlemen from the Townships were present. Resolutions were passed expressive of our sympathy with our suffering fellow countrymen, and a Committee appointed to collect subscriptions.

A very good beginning has been made, and we sincerely hope that an amount worthy of our Town and County will be made up. We find from our exchanges that meetings are being held all over for this very laudable object. In Toronto a short time ago the Treasurer announced at a meeting of the Committee that he had nearly $8,000 on hand.

The Town of Brantford has some liberal souls in it, one especially deserves mention and that is Mr. Cockshut who has given 100 barrels of flour. The Chairman at a meeting stated that this princely donation was but a portion of what Mr. Cockshut had done to relieve the sufferers. Such liberality is worthy of all praise, and he speaks a heart and soul above the ordinary dimensions. Mr. Cockshut is from Lancashire and he feels more interested than many others, yet his donation is magnificent. He prefers to giving flour to money as he considers that the former is more sure to benefit the sufferers than the latter—an idea that is well worth considering. We have heard those refer to the jobbery connected with funds for the relief of the sufferers in Ireland in 1847, and urge it as a reason not to contribute. It is certainly wise to use all precaution that the offerings of the people may reach the objects they are given for, but we fear that sometimes an excess of this kind is gladly resorted to to avoid the exercise of benevolence.

We have little fears but the contributions from this country for the suffering operatives in England will be spent mercedly in their behalf. Very few amongst us but can spare a little to assist the starving thousands in the fatherland.

We sincerely hope that the worst is past with the poor operatives. We give an extract from the London Daily News which holds out the encouragement that a tolerable supply of Cotton is on the way, and there is good ground to anticipate that in a short time England will not be dependent upon the States for its Cotton.

Charleston, Oct. 22.

The gun boats of the enemy anchored below Georgetown and landed their forces. We have driven them back to their gun boats. The Richmond Enquirer of the 20th inst., also says that Gen. McClellan is falling back into Maryland, which move will disintegrate the North. The same paper also contains the following item:

The Yadkin River has risen to unprecedented heights in several towns of Tenn. At Robbinsport, at the latest dates, there had been 20 deaths from it, and most of the people had fled from the place.

Philadelphia, Oct. 27th.

The Baltimore American this morning contains a despatch from Harper's Ferry, dated Sunday evening, announcing the movement of Gen. Pleasanton's cavalry against the Potomac, the people everywhere receiving him with acclamations of delight. From thence they moved forward to Waterford, and it is expected they will reach Leesburg early this p. m. Gen. Burnside's corps crossed at the same point.

We expected to rest at Lovettsville and move forward on Monday morning. The troops on Bolivar Heights are under marching orders, and move forward on Monday. Active movements are on foot on the Upper Potomac.

Fort Monroe, Oct. 25.

Major Hunt informs us that Major Weed, Federal quartermaster officer, is actively and vigorously filling the object of his mission, and in several instances has succeeded in weeding and rejecting, among others, retired officers who have been secretly serving the cause of Jefferson Davis, under the undisguised sympathy of the foreign consuls and British authorities, resident in "Rebeldom," and who claim, at times, the protection of our flag that they may the more successfully carry out their treasonable designs against our Government.

General Rosecrans and staff passed through here to-day en route for his new command. Passengers from Helena report that Generals Cheatham and Holmes are near that place, threatening an attack.—Thirty-five forage wagons and their guard were captured by the Confederates a few days since. General Hindman is again under arrest. The latest information from Corinth says scouts from the neighborhood of Bolivar report Price within four miles of that place. Gen. Hamilton is in command of Rosecrans's division.

THE NEW PAIN-KILLER!

MERRY'S VERMONT LINIMENT.

IN offering to the public this new Pain-Killer, we wish to caution them against buying any humbug that may appear on advertising medium, pretending to possess many of the virtues of this Liniment, and in large bottles at a cheaper rate. We have no advertising medium to puff it, it may be said outwardly for Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Toothache, Headache, Burns and Scalds, Bruises and Scaldings, Sore throat, Lumbago, &c., &c.,

and may be used internally for

Cholic and Colds, Cholera Morbus, Bowel Complaints, Diarrhœa, Wind Cholic, &c., &c.

It has been in use for the last four years, and its extensive manufacture is already unknown by thousands who have used it.

It is composed of ingredients each of which is recommended by physicians, so that the combination of all in one, produces a Liniment or Pain-Killer, unrivalled for its extensive properties.

WARRANTED WHEN USED IN SEASON!

No family should be without a bottle of it for household use, as it is safe if taken internally, and may be relied on in case of accidents, when used externally.

IT IS RECOMMENDED TO USE AT ANY TIME.

A teaspoonful of it taken in a glass of water in the morning, will relieve a bilious attack in a few hours, and prevent a long spell of sickness, when continued for a few days.

TO HUNTERS AND TRAVELLERS.

Try it, and it does not require explanatory remarks, as the opportunities that you have had of testing its virtues have proved its worth, and we will refund the money paid for it.

We only call a few testimonials and leave the rest, which will be every day published in the Canada Farmer throughout Canada. Price 25 cents per bottle.

FINKLE & LYON

SEWING MACHINE COMPANY,

536 Broadway, New York.

TO parties little acquainted with the Finkle & Lyon Sewing Machines the careful perusal of the Company's Circular is specially commended. This circular can be had on application. It is very specific, and will be found highly instructive, having been prepared without much care and we will abide by all statements therein made.

The following brief quotation is characteristic of the entire Circular:

"This Machine is better adapted than any other Sewing Machine in market to the frequent changes and almost endless variety of sewing required in a family; for it will sew from one to twenty thicknesses of Marseilles without stopping, and make every stitch perfect. Will sew from the finest gauze to the heaviest cloth, and even the stoutest harness leather, without changing the feed needle or tension, or making any adjustment of machine whatever."

Thus have we successfully overcome the most difficult point in the Sewing Machine art. It was no ordinary triumph. Defiantly can we now say, "No other Machine compares with it in this respect." Hence, have we uniformly—almost without exception—taken the highest premium, whenever the Machine has been properly exhibited in competition with other first class Sewing Machines. Hence it is that we are able to offer the following guarantee, viz.: "We warrant every Machine we sell to give perfect satisfaction than any other Sewing Machine in the market, or money refunded." We never sell a Machine on any other terms. The guarantee is as reliable as the note of any business man in the land. For more than five years have we relied upon such facts for the reputation of our Machine; and without a single travelling agent in the field, there is scarcely a neighborhood on the continent where the Singer, Wheeler & Wilson, Grover & Baker, Florence, or Howe Machines are favourably known. We possess such a reputation to one based on more "talking points," as they are technically called in the trade. Hence we make but one kind of stitch, viz., the lock-stitch, alike on both sides, requiring only one-third the thread of other kinds of stitches.

N. B.—Local Agents wanted in every county throughout the West. ☞ Special inducements offered.

The Portrait.

BY ROSA VERTNER JOHNSON.

I saw a stately woman pass.
Upon a portrait fair.
And I knew that she dreamed of other days
While soft and warm the sunset's mellow rays
Wove through its golden hair.

That pictured hair! so lifelike beamed.
Its mocking beauty now,
That the evening breeze from the casement streamed
To stir the wealth of clustering curls that gleamed

The painter's high, mysterious art
Had caught the eloquence
Of the sparkling eye; and the gazer's heart
Still through her snowy bosom seemed to start
Beneath its thrilling glance.

She was a fair and queenly one,
In the summer of her years:
But a dark, dark thread through her fate was spun,
And the early bloom of her heart had run
To a harvest time of tears.

She looked as cold and calm and proud
As the moon at eventide;
And she hid her soul from the careless crowd,
As the moon in a fold of fleecy cloud
Its purity will hide.

Amid the gay throng often seen,
With many to admire
Her strange cold beauty, she had ever been
Like that rare gem beneath whose pearly chain
Flashes a heart of fire

And while around that portrait grew
Fond memories the while,
A light seemed kindling in his eye of blue—
A lifelike light, as if the picture knew
She loved to see it smile.

And bliss, half real seemed to spring,
As (heedless of the past),
Her spell- bound heart leaped wildly up to cling
To that unreal, dumb, beguiling thing—
A mockery to the last.

The very shadow of a dream—
Lost! gone for many a year!
Yet did that image still, though voiceless, teem
With memories, which made its beauty seem
Too real and too dear.

The brow, the eye, the lip, were there,
Undimmed, unchanged by time;
And a tear dropped down on the shining hair:
As low she stoop'd to kiss the forehead fair,
Was that lady's love a crime?

How strange that destiny should twine
A coronal for her
Of beauty, and of genius half divine;
Yet blight her life—and leave their light to shine

The petted idol of a throng,
Twas sad that one regret
Should linger in that lady's heart so long,
To chill its mirth and hush life's morning song:
Why had they ever met?

Miscellaneous.

A Mysterious Crime.

The last number of the London Review contains a remarkable story of the mysterious disappearance of Mr. Bathurst, a British Envoy Extraordinary to the Court of Vienna in 1809, and the recent discovery of a probable clue to his murder, which is supposed to have been committed by order of the first Napoleon. We condense the account as follows:—

On Saturday, the 25th of November, 1809, Benjamin Bathurst, envoy extraordinary of the British Government to Austria arrived at the house of the post-master of the little Prussian dominions, and on the high road from Berlin to Hamburg. He was accompanied by a German courier, named Krause. Mr. Bathurst and this courier alighted, gave orders for the immediate continuation of the journey, and, while the horses were harnessed to the carriage, went into the hostelry adjoining the post-office to take some refreshment. The meal was soon finished, but various arrangements, particularly the local verification of passports in the name of "Merchant Koch" and "Fischer" protracted the departure of the travellers until a late hour. It was not till toward nine in the evening that the news at last arrived of the horses being about to be harnessed to the carriage. On receiving this welcome announcement Mr. Bathurst but his room and went into the street, as his servant thought, for the purpose of taking his seat in the chaise. The courier followed in a few seconds, but was astonished not to find his master in the place where he thought him to be. He waited and waited for minutes, for hours, but did not see him make his appearance. The Hon. Benjamin Bathurst has not re-appeared up to the present day.

Krause, the courier, after a fruitless search for Mr. Bathurst, went on to England and reported the mysterious circumstances connected with the case. The family of the missing envoy (among whom was Lord Bathurst,) immediately set to work to unravel the mystery. Mrs. Bathurst at once resolved to proceed to Germany in search of her husband, and on arriving at Perleberg found that the authorities had already undertaken an investigation. The search of the officers had discovered, in a piece of wood in the neighborhood of the town, a pair of pantaloons, which Mrs. Bathurst immediately recognised as having belonged to her husband. These pantaloons were riddled with bullet-holes, but on an examination by competent judges it was established beyond doubt that the bullets had been fired at the empty piece of dress as it was lying on the ground and not while on the person.

Here was another complication of the mystery. A reward of five hundred thalers were at once offered for the discovery of the whereabouts of the missing man, but a month's investigation left the case as dark as before. Meanwhile the English and French press, having become acquainted with the fact of Mr. Bathurst's disappearance, began to discuss the subject. The Times, of January 20, 1810, had the following paragraph in large type, which subsequently went the round of the English papers:—"There is too much reason to fear that the account of the death of Mr. Bathurst, late British envoy to the Emperor of Austria, is correct as to the principal fact. It was stated, as an article of Berlin news, of the date of December 10, that Mr. Bathurst had evinced symptoms of insanity on his journey through the city, and that he had subsequently fallen by his own hand in the vicinity of Perleberg. Information, however, has been received within these few days which forcibly tend to fix the guilt of Mr. Bathurst's death or disappearance, on the French Government." It appears that Mr. Bathurst left Berlin with passports from the Prussian Government, and in excellent health, both of mind and body. He was to proceed to Hamburg to embark for this country; but Hamburg he never reached. At some town near the French territories he was seized, as is supposed, by a party of French soldiers. What happened afterwards is not accurately known. His pantaloons have been found near the town where he was seized, and a letter in them to his wife, but nothing else. The Prussian Government on receiving the intelligence evinced the deepest regret and offered a large reward for the discovery of his body. No success however has yet attended the offer."

From what source the Times received this information is not stated; there is, however, reason to believe, from the prominent manner in which the announcement was brought forward, that it was derived from official communication. Such at least seemed the opinion entertained of it in Paris; for the French Government, greatly incensed by the accusation of having kidnapped or murdered Mr. Bathurst, launched for the following reply in the Monitor of January 29th:—

"England alone, among all civiled nations, has renewed the example of paying assassins and encouraging crimes. It appears, by the accounts from Berlin, that Mr. Bathurst was deranged in his mind. This is the custom of the British Cabinet—to give their diplomic missions to the most foolish and most senseless persons the nation produces. The English diplomatic corps is the only one in which examples of madness are common."

This reply, it cannot be denied, was very lame, and tended to foster and strengthen suspicions already extant. Further notices in the Moniteur still more confirmed these suppositions. The French official journals, in a threatening tone, laid it down as a positive rule that Mr. Bathurst must have committed suicide, and the severe displeasure of the government was called upon the heads of those who should dare to think or speak otherwise. Thereupon the German press, who had mildly discussed the subject, became very quiet, sobered down by the remembrance of Palm, the Nuremberg bookseller, shot by order of Napoleon for having published a harmless little pamphlet on the state of the Fatherland.

Mrs. Bathurst instituted a careful search of the neighborhood of Perleberg, employing several hundred men in the work, and finally, despairing what to do next, she went to Berlin, and from thence, in a fit of frenzy to Paris, to see the Emperor Napoleon himself and obtain from him, if possible, the account of the fate of her husband. The Emperor received Mrs. Bathurst with the greatest affability; but solemnly declared his ignorance of the whole affair, and in proof of it, offering his assistance for any further inquiry on the subject. Whether this offer was accepted or declined is not known, but certain it is that it led to no result of any kind. It seemed as if the dark crime of Perleberg would remain a mystery forever.

Not many months ago, however, an unexpected light was thrown upon the affair. It having been necessary to execute some repairs in the citadel of Magdeburg, a wall was pulled down, and behind it, in a small recess, was found the skeleton of a man in upright posture, the hands fastened to the back. Many were the speculations arising out of this discovery, and various the surmises set afloat, until at last the suggestion was started that "the body might be that of Mr. Benjamin Bathurst, long supposed to have died somewhere near Magdeburg." This conjecture seemed to be generally admitted at present among those who have been discussing the matter in Germany as the most probable. At the time of Mr. Bathurst's disappearance the fortress of Magdeburg, as is well known, was in the hands of the French, and became the prison of many unfortunate Germans and other political offenders opposing the sway of the great Napoleon. It cannot be denied that the thick walls of the old feudal stronghold gained with French gold in 1806, and held as a sort of Bastile by the conqueror of the country, were uncommonly well fitted for holding a British ambassador, and pressing from him, by slow torture, whatever tongue will tell in the agony of death. It seems a very probable conclusion, therefore, to submit that Mr. Bathurst's death was the consequence of a crime planned by French brains and executed by French hands.

In fact, an attentive consideration of the whole mysterious affair and all the accompanying circumstances scarcely leaves room for any other explanation than the one now suggested. The French government alone had an interest in the possession, as well as the necessary power for obtaining the person and despatches of the British envoy, and that the Emperor Napoleon was unscrupulous enough to resort to any means to obtain his own ends there are thousands of examples to prove. Not far from the very town of Perleberg, where Mr. Bathurst disappeared, Mr. Wagstaff, a King's messenger, was seized and robbed of his despatches a few years before; and another British subject, Sir George Rumbold, was openly kidnapped at Hamburg, by the same imperial police, in defence of all international law and justice.

The seizure of Mr. Bathurst being of far greater importance, was very likely effected also with much more circumspection. There was no particular difficulty in laying hold of Mr. Bathurst as soon as, in the dark November night, he had quitted the door of the Perleberg Inn; and, after having him gagged, thrusting him into a ready carriage, to be conveyed forthwith to the not very distant fortress. Whether Mr. Bathurst died in his prison a natural death, or whether he was actually murdered by his jailers, is a question, however, which it would be difficult, if not impossible, to decide even if it were proved to a certainty that the recently discovered body was that of the lost envoy. As far as appears from the newspaper reports on the subject, the skeleton found in the wall underwent no examination, but was put in a box and carried off to some cemetery. The discovery of a corpse in a place like Magdeburg is, it seems, an occurrence to which the people are rather accustomed than otherwise, and of which, consequently, no distinct notice is taken. If, as the proverb goes, there is a skeleton in every house, it cannot, perhaps be wondered at that there should be a hundred in a Prussian fortress.

Marriage

Marriage is the natural state of human kind. There can never be lasting good health without it; it is an impossibility except combined with criminal practices. A person may live in good health to the age of twenty-five; but if the marriage is deferred beyond that, every month's delay is the eating out more and more the very essence of life, and the worm of certain disease and premature death burrows the more deeply into the vitals. On the other hand, marriage not later than twenty-five prolongs life. It was for this reason noticed some three thousand years ago, that the ancients dedicated a temple to Hymen, the god of youth." Men and women get older more rapidly when they remain single, and die off more rapidly; the men from falling into dissipated habits and irregularities. The women, true to nature's instincts, and living to her purity, grow less and less vivacious, and by slow degrees settle down in inaction, in feebleness and premature decline.

As long as a man is unmarried he feels himself unfixed, unsettled; and keen business men consider him insecure, because he can any day pack up his trunk and disappear. The most magnificent swindles in Wall Street, those for the very largest amounts, were remarried men.

There has always existed, from very early ages, a general and almost instinctive prejudice against those who remain unmarried after thirty. Lycurgus legislated against celibacy, and Cato outlawed female celibates at 26 and bachelors of 35. It was a creed of the earlier nations, that the souls of those who died unmarried were doomed to eternal wanderings.

In the present state of society, if the daughter should be encouraged to marry at 21 and the son at 25, vigorous health and moral purity would be promoted thereby. Pride and cowardice join in delaying marriages; but let the fearful statistics of the larger cities of the world tell the sad story of demoralization. In Milan, there are thirty-two illegitimates out of every one hundred children born; in Paris, 33; in Brussels, 35; in Munich, 48; in Vienna, 51.

Out of every 100 suicides 67 are single, 33 married.

Of the hopeless insane, out of 182, 98 were single, 74 were married.

Celibacy is a constant cause of premature death. Of one hundred and twenty who are forty-eight years old, eighty will be married only forty single. In one hundred single men, only twenty will live to be sixty years old. Of one hundred married men, forty-eight will live to that. Of a dozen men of eighty years, nine will be married, three single. Not only marry young, but marry out of your family. The effects of marrying cousins, for example, even to the third degree, are fearful to contemplate. Of one hundred and forty-four cousin marriages in Dublin, there were one hundred deaf and dumb children. Dr. Baxton of Liverpool states that in one hundred and nine such marriages each family had one deaf and dumb child; thirty-eight of them had two deaf mutes; in seventeen of them there were three; three had four; one had six; one had seven, and one had eight deaf mutes—that is two hundred and sixty-nine children born deaf and dumb to one hundred and nine cousin marriages. The consanguineous marriages in France are two per cent of the whole population. Of their children, 28 per cent are deaf mutes in Paris, twenty-five at Lyons, thirty at Bordeaux; while as to the Jews, twenty-seven per cent of the offspring of such marriages are deaf mutes, one sixth per cent of christian parents; Jews oftener marrying blood relations.

In England where Bible teaching more than in any other country prevail, and discountenance consanguineous marriages, as well as private profligacy, only six per cent of such children born are deaf mutes, instead of thirty, as when the English do marry relations, they are more distant; and only six per cent of those born are illegitimate, instead of fifty-one per cent, as the direct result of the teachings of that blessed book.—Hall's Journal of Health.

William III. at Kensington Palace.

William III. came here to live. Indeed he bought, and altered,—and added to it. We are not going into any discussion about his character and policy, though we would just say that the adulation which he received in life, and the abuse of him after his death, are but equally remote from truth; but there is a pleasant little anecdote about the Boyne—the hard, stern warrior with his eagle eye and nose—that belongs to Kensington Palace, which we relate in Leigh Hunt's words:—"A lad was heard, one day, at his closet door, while his secretary was in attendance. "Who is there?" said the King. "Lord Bach," answered the little voice of a child of four years of age. It was Lord Beauhaire the son of his Majesty's Lord High Chamberlain, the Earl of Dysart. "And what does Lord Bach want?" returned William opening the door. "You to be a horse to my coach," rejoined the little urchin: "I've wanted you for a long time." William nodded upon his little friend, with an animation which the secretary had never before thought his countenance able of expressing, and, taking the string of the toy in his hand, dragged it up and down the long gallery till his playfellow was satisfied." How one likes that story! It opens a window into poor, William's harrassed breast, which shows there were genial, loving, and fatherly affections there. It is a pity he had not a little boy of his own to play with.

"Religion and Education" in Australia.

A bill for the abolition of State aid to religious denominations, has been introduced by the Government into the New South Wales Legislature, and read a first time. It proposes that endowments shall cease with the death of the present recipients.

A Church and School Lands Bill has, in the same Legislature, placed the Government at issue with a section of its former supporters. These glebe lands were originally granted to the Church of England, but the corporation endowed with them was dissolved, and the lands, in the terms of the charter, reverted to the Crown. A party—especially the party adverse to State endowments of religion—contend that when the Crown resumed the lands the trust ceased; but the other supposition has always been acted upon, with the exception that, by the direction of the Secretary of State, the money has been divided among four denominations, instead of being given exclusively to the Church of England. The non-sale of these lands has in some cases proved very inconvenient to the cause of the settlement, and a demand has arisen for their secularization. The Assembly, in opposition to the Government, passed a bill declaring these lands to be waste lands, but the Council threw the bill out. The Government has introduced a bill recognizing the existence of the trust, but providing for the sale of the land, and the investment of the proceeds in the public debentures. This bill passed its second reading by a majority of two, and that, too, though many previously by their votes denied the existence of their trust; but they justify themselves on the ground of expediency. They urge that, in the face of the opinion expressed by the Crown lay officers, it is vain to hope that the bill they formerly patronized would ever be sanctioned. Moreover, Mr. Robertson, the minister in charge of the bill, promised to eliminate from it the word "religion," so that the funds henceforth, should be appropriated exclusively to education, Mr. Cowper, the Colonial Secretary, refuses to accede to this arrangement, but he will be outvoted. The original charter dedicated the lands to the purposes of "religion and education." Those who abide by the letter of the trust urge, that to cut out the word "religion" is a violation of the trust; but in reply, it is said that it is not more so than has been the distribution of the money among four sects, instead of its being given only to one, as originally intended. A public trust which has already proved so flexible under the pressure of political expediency may, it is argued, again be submitted to modification. Moreover, as the Government have introduced a bill to abolish the annual vote in favor of State aid to religion, it is contended that it would be absurd in the very same session to pass a bill permanently endowing the four great churches, namely:—The Episcopalian, the Presbyterian, the Methodist, and the Roman Catholic.

Miscellaneous News.

DISTRESS IN LANCASHIRE.—Mr. H. B. Farnall, the special commissioner appointed by Government to watch over this distress, in his report of the 29th ultimo, gives us an idea of the progressive character of the dearth. He briefly informs the Central Relief Committee that the number receiving parochial relief when he wrote exceeded that of the previous week by 6,617. The increase in one week in 24 unions is indeed enormous. But the numbers will go on augmenting. The gradual increment shows how unwilling are those poor people to go to the parish for relief. This is the resource of a decent Englishman. And well he might hesitate to apply here. The average dole is 1s. 4d. per head per week; the highest grant is 2s. 6½., the lowest only 11½d. How we have vast temptation set before those laboring men and women to become paupers! If their instinctive dislike of this description of aid did not deter them until every shift had been tried, the miserable sum itself would have been sufficiently repelling. Yet, small is the allowance, it eats the 24 unions £9,061 1s. 1d. for one door relief alone. When it is remembered how poor are many of the householders contributing the indispensable fund, we can best estimate the necessity there is for resources from other quarters. This becomes the more apparent when we take into consideration the vast increase of the applicants. Sixteen thousand and sixty-four persons have been reduced to pauperism within the last three weeks. And Mr. Farnall feels himself compelled to inform the Committee, and through them the public, "that both applicants for parochial relief and for aid from local committees of charity are still rapidly increasing throughout the districts." This is a sad look-out for the winter; but it is one for which we were all prepared. The call upon the national funds has not been forced or sudden; it has come gradually, and extends spontaneously.—English Paper.

—The amount per annum to be realized by the U. S. Government by the income tax on the salaries of members of the Congress is stated at $16,220.

—The law for the abolition of slavery in the Dutch West Indies, in July 1863, has passed the Senate General of Holland by a majority of 45 to 7.

—An average day's work of the railways of the United Kingdom in 1861 was, to carry 500,000 passengers a distance of 750,000 tons of minerals and merchandize, 35,000 live stock, 1,109 dogs, and 679 horses.

Questionable Information and Counsel.

A person who gives his initials as "A. T.," and hailing from Paris, C. W., has been writing a series of letters to Lord Monck on the state of the North American Colonies, and the necessity of the Mother Country doing or enacting something if she desires to keep them. Among several very questionable opinions and utopian schemes we select the following as a specimen of his style and views as a politician. With many of his opinions, however, we agree, but it beats us out how an "old resident" in Canada, as he claims to be, can write so about the "alienation of the Clergy Reserves, and entire separation of Church and State," unless we suppose him under an impenetrable hallucination or infected with an intolerant bigotry. 'A man so far off the track of Canadian questions and politics is as utterly unfit to suggest to Lord Monck or any one else a system of government for the people of these Provinces as we should be to recommend a new constitution for the Chinese.

Canadians are attached to monarchial institutions. They love the fatherland and their beloved Queen. They are loyal to the back bone, but a State Church they have discarded long ago. A very tyro in matters of statesmanship should know that the existence of a State Church supposes that the large body of the people favor such an institution.

No more sure way to divide a people in a Colony than to establish a dominant Church. We devoutly return thanks for deliverance therefrom. And so far as supposing that England did wrong in sanctioning the removal of these evils we consider she deserves the lasting gratitude of all "coming generations" for so doing, Mr. A. T. to the contrary, notwithstanding.

The extract below is from letter No. 4:—

"The innate loyalty of respectable Canadians was thoroughly proved in 1837, when almost unaided, they put down the rebellion. Since then, however, I admit with sorrow, that the British government has done much to undermine the principle of loyalty as a duty, and to lessen the instinctive feeling that treason is a crime unbefitting a christian and a gentleman, by the unwise manner in which she subsequently treated her best subjects—not in showing lenity to the rebels, that was right—but by placing the government in the hands of the seditious while they gloried in their shame; and making old fashioned loyalty a reason for exclusion from Imperial favor! The sanction which England gave to the alienation of the Clergy Reserves and to the entire separation of Church and State, (using the former term in its widest acceptation) in Canada, was another most inconsistent step from which, I fear, generations yet unborn will suffer. Again, the Province has been greatly injured by the greed for ministerial influence, which has led our public men, unchecked by the parental call and wisdom of the Home Government, to throw political power into the hands of the irresponsible masses, until they have not only ruined our municipalities, but, what is far worse, have made the difficulty of maintaining a wise and strong government amongst us much too similar to that which is now destroying the United States. Now, as an old resident in Canada, I declare all this political mischief to have been quite unnecessary to the peace of the Colony, and to have be a therefore the miserable result of an indolent expediency, or disgraceful indifference, on the part of the British Government; whereas, our real causes of complaints should have been carefully examined and remedied, while at the same time the thorough conservation of our British Monarchical institutions should have been gloriously but firmly, made a sine qua non; for this wrong, therefore, the Imperial legislature owes the loyal subjects of Canada all the amends that it can possibly make.

GENERAL SCOTT.

This veteran has been charged with Secession proclivities since the publication by Mr. Van Buren of that remarkable letter addressed to Mr. Seward on the 3rd March, 1861, which appeared in our columns last week. The General in order to put himself right before the public in consequence of the unauthorised publication of the said letter, has published a memoranda of several interviews he had with the President and the Secretary of War, in the latter part of 1860, when the Southern States were preparing for Secession. In the interview on the 12th Dec., of that year, he urged upon the Secretary the importance of manning the Forts Moultrie and Sumpter with a sufficient body of men to hold them, as they formed a sort of a key to Charleston harbor. The Secretary replied that they had the steamer Brooklyn at Norfolk and he proposed putting on board 200 men from a port where they required, to which the General objected, removing them, but urging the reinforcement of the Forts. The President considered there was no danger and urged patience. The General still pressed his plan, but it was not adopted, and the forts in consequence were seen in possession of the Rebels. When the traitor Foote escaped South, he was applauded as the man who defeated the wise counsel of General Scott, and thus enabling them successfully to inaugurate their scheme of secession. The following laudatory remarks on Foote's scheming to overthrow the General's proposition appeared in the Richmond Examiner at the time:—

"The plan invented by Gen. Scott to stop secession was, like all campaigns devised by him, very able in details, and nearly certain of general success. The Southern States are full of arsenals and forts, commanding their rivers and strategic points. Gen. Scott desired to transfer the army of the United States to these forts as speedily and as quietly as possible. The Southern States could not cut off communication between the Government and the fortresses without a great fleet, which they cannot build for years, or take them by land without one hundred thousand men, many hundred millions of dollars, several campaigns, and many a bloody seige. Had Scott been able to have got these forts in the condition he desired them to be, the Southern Confederacy would not now exist."

There is no truer friend to the Union than the hero of Mexico, Buchanan, and his administration were rank secessionists, at all events they were not true men. A few well directed shots, and a few necks stretched at the outset would have saved the nation the horrors it has since and is now suffering from this unparalleled war. Well did the soldier know this, and had he been in the Presidential chair no rebellion such as we now see would have dared show itself.

ANOTHER DISTRESSING DEATH FROM HYDROPHOBIA.

The family of Mr. James Hamilton, of this Town, was thrown into serious alarm, on Saturday last, by the eldest daughter but one, manifesting symptoms of this fearful malady.

About eight weeks ago one of Mr. Hamilton's dog's worried a cat and almost killed it. Mr. Hamilton observing the cat took it up and put it beneath the verandah; it remained there a short time, when Miss Mary Hamilton, the unfortunate young woman, took it up to bring it into the house. In carrying it along it bit her on the back of her hand, and it was with difficulty that she succeeded in getting its teeth out. The cat was immediately killed. Miss Hamilton at once sucked the wound, but unfortunately the day before while taking a pie out of the oven some burned sugar from the edge of the plate got on her finger, and in putting it to her mouth the hot sugar took the skin off her lip.

The doctor is of opinion that the virus was conveyed into her system by the wound on her lip, and not from the hand. Be this as it may, it is certain that it was communicated by the cat biting her. Apprehensions were then entertained of her safety, but as time passed on they gradually subsided. On Tuesday, 28th Oct. last, she was engaged in washing, and complained at night of a pain in her arm like rheumatism. On Friday night she felt thirsty, but on taking some water in her mouth could not swallow it. Her sister, who slept with her, rose and made her some coffee which she drank. She seemed some easier, and next morning spoke quite composedly of her state; she seemed to be aware that death would soon come, and expressed her readiness to meet it as she had committed her soul to the Saviour.

Through the day on Saturday it was rumoured through Town that she had the fits, and many a sigh escaped at the tidings.—She became worse and worse till on Sunday night, about 7 o'clock, death put an end to her sufferings. During the whole of the time she appeared perfectly conscious, and spoke rationally and confusingly of her hope of life eternal through the Lord Jesus Christ.

On Sunday afternoon her Sunday School class at her request visited her. She spoke kindly to each, and gave them her parting advice. Soon after she became speechless, but seemed quite sane.

She was about 17 years of age, much beloved by all who knew her. Her friends now mourn for her, but not as those who have no hope. Her remains were followed to their last resting place by a large number of friends and acquaintances. The family have the sympathy of all who know them; and the prayer has ascended from many that He who has opened up the fountain of grief may be pleased to bind up the broken hearted.

PARSON BROWNLOW.

This embodiment of wickedness and blasphemy has again made himself conspicuous, by delivering himself of one of his filthy effusions, which we copy from the Leader taken from the Knoxville Whig.

We are prepared to hear anything from the lips of this apostate, and consequently we do not deem anything he says worthy of notice, nor should we notice it, were it not that such a man is listened to, and applauded by large assemblages of northern "free and independent" citizens of Northern States. We would venture to affirm that in the whole area of "secesshdom" you could not match this foul smutty wicked wretch, whose blasphemous and hateful deliverances should debar him from civilized society.

He takes England to task after this fashion:—

"Judge Douglass while in his place in the U. S Senate heard a remark from a Southern Senator which he exposed from his place in the Senate, and dared a denial. But he never dared deny it, because he knew Douglass could prove it, and what was that remark? "No matter what the North may agree to concede to us, the South intends to reject anything and everything, because we intend to go out." Who was that Senator? It was that most corrupt and abominable of all old damagogues, that old, tarnished, plundered, dishonored, big-shoulder'd sway-backed, whiskey-rotted John M. Mason, of Virginia. (Laughter and applause.) I know John M. Mason, and I have known him long, and I know him, if he is living to-night, in France and England, as the embodiment of original sin. (Laughter.) He is one of the men whom, associated with John Slidell of Louisiana, our benign government took out of Fort Warren when we were feeding them on wholesome diet, put them on a British vessel, and sent them as ministers plenipotentiary to the Courts of St. James and St. Cloud, to represent Jeff. Davis's Confederacy. If I had been the government, I would have tied an ordinary sized grindstone around each one of their necks and cast them over into Boston harbour, where John Hancock, Samuel Adams, or their friends, a long time ago, threw some boxes of tea. Slidell is a worse man than Mason, because he has more sense. Slidell has lived for thirty years by forgery, false swearing, lying, and stealing, but John Slidell bears on the side of his head a face that the Almighty put there as an advertisement, that no judge of human nature in Europe or America might ever mistake him for an honest man. (Laughter.)."

"When we come forth with 700,000 or 800,000 of the best drilled, hardened, seasoned, best fed, and noblest-hearted fellows that ever constituted an army on the face of the earth. Having our hands in, and having a little experience in the way of fighting, if the Queen of England and her advisers are not satisfied with the way we do business, we will give them a turn. [Laughter.] I am in favour of threshing anyhow. [Continued laughter.] England has been acting dog from the word go. Hypocrisy deception, falsehood, smuggling—that has been her neutrality. I am in favour of declaring war against her whenever this thing is wound up, giving her the devil and rubbing it in. [Laughter.] I sent the Queen of England a message the other day—private and confidential—by a merchant going abroad to London. I told him to go to Windsor Castle, give her my respects, and tell her that I had known individuals in America, and whole neighborhoods, to make a comfortable living by just minding their own business. [Much merriment.] I told him to give the Queen the anecdote of the Dutchman at the battle of New Orleans as it exactly covered the case.

"They had a Tennessee Dutchman at the battle of New Orleans—an honest man, not a professor of religion, not a Christian by profession, but he had learned from his parents that General Washington was a man of faith and prayer, and never went into battle without making it the subject of prayer; and the thought he would do like General Washington. So the boys, hearing some one praying away terribly in the chaparal one day just before the battle, they followed him into the bushes, and they found the Dutchman on his marrow-bones—on his bunkers, with uplifted hands and streaming eyes, and he was praying. Mind the application is to the Queen. He was praying: "Oh, Lord Gott, come down this one time and help us fight on the side of America; but so be Oh Lord, if you can't come on our side, Oh Lord, don't help the British; but Oh Lord you standi off and say nothing and you see one of the damnest fights you ever heard of." [Roars of Laughter.]

"I told him to ask the Queen of England for one to stand off and say nothing, but occupy a neutral position, quit smuggling ships and guns and ammunition and all that sort of thing through to the rebels, quit lying and falsely pretending to be neutral, but stand off, and we would show her, as the Dutchman said, 'one of the damnedest fights she ever heard of.' [Laughter.]"

Canada and England too may learn a lesson from the rude teachings of parson Brownlow. Come when the end of the war may, the Federal States will have a large army of "well-drilled, hardened and seasoned" soldiers. England cannot look upon such an even with complacency. As to the States declaring war against England, we can afford to pass that over without remark. We have no desire to provoke a quarrel with our querrilous neighbors; but shall not shrink from it, if it is forced upon us. In the meantime the reverend politician may continue to delight his audiences by indulgence in such trash.

At a public meeting of the inhabitants of the Township of Otonabee, held at Keene, on Saturday the 1st inst., to consider the best means to be adopted in the Township for contributing to the British Operatives, Relief Fund.

The Reeve, Evans Ingram, Esq., was called to the chair, who addressed the meeting, and concluded by expressing the hope that as the Township was ranked as the first in the County in importance and wealth, it would maintain that position in its relief to the suffering operatives of Britain. He then called upon the member for the County, Col. Haultain, to address the meeting, who gave a great deal of information as to the state of the operatives, and the suffering they were patiently enduring, concluding with a most effective appeal to the sympathies of the meeting on their behalf. The Rev. Mr. Fowler, of Keene being called upon, addressed the meeting, pointing out very forcibly the duty and responsibility that the inhabitants were under of contributing to their relief.

It was then moved by Mr. A. Poe, seconded by Mr. Geo. Reed,—That an expression of the meeting be taken as to the propriety of the Township Council, contributing to the British operatives fund from the funds of Municipality.

The Reeve then called upon those present who were in favour of the Township contributing from its funds to signify the same, when every rate-payer present assented.

William Lang, Esq, then moved, seconded by John Blizard, Esq.,—That the sum of $400 be contributed by the township for the relief of the British operatives, which motion was carried unanimously.

Moved by Mr. Read, seconded by Mr. Bearbell,—That the following gentlemen constitute a committee for the purpose of obtaining subscriptions to the British operatives fund for the Township of Otonabee, viz.: The Rev. Messrs. Fowler and Andrews, Doctor McCrea, Thomas Short, William Lang, E. Ingram, John Blizard, Henry Bawbell, Alex. Campbell, William Armstrong, Thomas Simpson, A. Nelson and Joseph Bowie, Esquires; and Messrs. J. S. Russell, Gerrard Patterson, James Stewart and James Borland, with power to add to their number.

The amount that will be contributed in Otonabee will be equal to the most sanguine expectations of the most ardent friends of the sufferers. This result will be in a great degree owing to the earnest appeals made by Col. Haultain and the Rev. Mr. Fowler. The last named gentleman has kindly offered his services to address meetings in different localities in the Township in aid of the fund.—Com.

A meeting was held on Monday evening at the Town Hall, Monaghan, for Wards Nos. 3 and 4, in aid of the distressed Lancashire operatives.

The greatest unanimity prevailed amongst all present that immediate steps should be taken to canvass the Wards, so that each person in the Municipality might have an opportunity of giving towards the relief of those who have borne the pressure of their altered circumstances with such christian fortitude as to call forth the warmest sympathies on their account.

Messrs. Dobbin and Boland were appointed for Ward No. 3, and Messrs. Hovey and W. Campbell for Ward No. 4

Those present gave cheerfully and liberally: and so far as we can judge of what transpired at the meeting, in addition to having seen Mr. Lockie's subscription list for Ward No. 5, we are of opinion that if the Northern and Eastern parts of the Township act in the same liberal spirit, a sum quite sufficient to compare favourably with any Township of similar size in the County, will have been subscribed.—Com.

The Cornwall School Master.—The Minority of the Board of School Trustees who favoured the dismissal of Hay, the seducer of one of his pupils, have appealed to the Local Superintendent to suspend his certificate. Strange to say that that functionary refuses to interfere. They have appealed as a dernier resort to the Chief Superintendent. Very possibly he may act as the Reverend Local has done, or he may correspond with him to know the merits of the case, and refer the affair back to the locality where it ought to be settled.

A fatal railroad accident occurred on Tuesday morning last, at the Station here. A brakesman named James Phillips, connected with the cars, was engaged at his business, when he tripped and fell in front of a car while in motion, the wheels of which passed in a diagonal manner over his leg and thigh. He lingered till yesterday afternoon, about 4 o'clock, when death put an end to his sufferings. He belonged to Port Hope, and leaves a wife, to whom he was married but a few weeks ago, to mourn his loss.

The Genesee Farmer.—We wish to call the attention of our readers to this most excellent agricultural and horticultural journal. It should be in the hands of every farmer in the country. Now is a good time to subscribe, as the publisher offers to send the remaining numbers of this year free to all who subscribe during the present month. Price only sixty cents a year. If you wish to examine the paper before subscribing, it can be seen at our office, or a copy can be obtained free by addressing the publisher, Joseph Harris, Rochester, N. Y.

"The arrangements which detained Messrs. Sicotte and Howland on Saturday last have been completed, and those gentlemen will sail for England in the course of the ensuing week. Probably from New York on Wednesday."—Quebec Chronicle 1st inst.

So the "threatened danger" manufactured for the Review last week vanishes into thin air. Perhaps our contemporary has been sold by his Quebec correspondent.

Otonabee Ahead.—At a public meeting held in the Village of Keene, on Saturday last, the Township Council voted the sum of $400 for the relief of the Lancashire operatives. Full particulars of the meeting will be found in another column.

The meeting called by the Reeve of Asphodel, for to take into consideration the best means of contributing to the relief of Lancashire operatives takes place in the Town Hall, Norwood, on Saturday next, at 1 o'clock, p. m.

Another Fire.—On Thursday evening last, the stables, &c., in rear of Mr. Thos. Beatty's tavern, were destroyed by fire. It was with great difficulty that the main buildings were saved. Mr. Beatty's furniture suffered considerable damage in being removed.

It is with pleasure that we announce to the public that Joseph Craig, a private in the Peterboro' Rifle Company, carried off the silver cup, which was presented by Mr. Robert Hamilton, hardware merchant of this place, as being the best shot; Captain Poole was next.

Godey's Lady's Book.—The ladies, and others interested, will read Godey's advertisement with pleasure, and we have no doubt but will send him an order. It is without exception the best Ladies Magazine published.

Wm. Henderson, of Clarke, who was tried at the Cobourg Assizes, on the charge of poisoning his wife some fifteen months ago, has been acquitted—the Grand Jury found no bill against him.

☞ The Court of Assizes opens to-day, Judge Draper presiding.

The last Canada Gazette contains the following appointment:—

"Charles John Vinard, Esq., to be Captain of volunteer Militia Rifle Company at Lakefield."

☞ The Celebrated Temperance Lecturer, Mr. John Mollatt, is expected here on the 17th inst., to deliver a Lecture on Temperance. We will give particulars next week.

☞ We hear that a boy named Shields, about 12 years of age, was killed in Emily, on Monday last, by a beam falling on him while he was in the barn.

Moved by W. J. Fowler, seconded by H. Bradbeer,—That the officers of the company consist of a Captain, 2 Lieutenants, Secretary, Treasurer, three Branchmen and 2 Axemen.—Carried.

Communications.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

Mr. Editor,—Would you permit me to set "J. H. T." in a more favorable light before your many readers. He seems to approve of the sentiment, "leave forms to hypocrites," forgetting apparently that without forms there would be no power of godliness in this world. So far as he intends the quotation to apply to me I can easily forgive him, because "Hypocrisy" is the very last vice that any one would impute to me, who knows me. But I am unwilling that any should be led into a very serious error by the inconsiderate use of words. Every one knows that merely abstaining from food is of little avail; yet, in God's sight, it is as useful as prayer or alms, which are useful only so far as they are sincere. At least so the Lord Jesus tells us in the 6th chapter of Mathew, which "J. H. T." would do well to consider. Fasting did more for Nineveh than praying to Stocks could have done. The Apostles when they prayed also fasted. It is a pity that prejudice should blind people's minds against the truth. But the question at issue is not about forms at all; but as to whether the day should be observed for confession of sin and prayer for pardon and amendment, or for thanks-giving. The Ministry of the day have decided to give thanks that we are better off than we deserve. I think we should be sorry that we are not less ill-deserving. I am pleased, however, that they have respected the Lord's Day, for which at least they have my hearty thanks, and the day thus appointed may be kept as every man feels inclined.

I am yours, Mr. Editor,
A True Reformer.

End of the Cotton Famine in England.

(From the London Daily News, Oct. 6.)

The day is sure to arrive when the general inability to believe in a supply of cotton from other sources than the American Cotton States must give way before the facts. That day seems to be near at hand. At the end of last week the cargo s from India began to arrive. Upward of 10,000 bales from Bombay came in during three days, and the quantity from that port actually at sea and at Liverpool was found to be about 397,000 bales; so that Mr. Villiers, whose promises were held to be rash when he spoke of 400,000 bales, appears to be fully justified in the hopefulness of his tone. The next disclosure was, that we have a prospect of a supply, in 1863, of 1 930,000 out of the 4,000,000, which is the largest quantity desired at the ordinary rate of prices. This amount will be just double the quantity used per week for the last three months; and thus it would seem that the worst must be past. At the present high prices, the weekly average taken by trade has been 15,278, and the promised supply, independent of any change in American affairs will yield 31,346 bales per week. The sources of this supply are India, the Brazils, Egypt, Turkey, Greece, Italy, chance cargoes from America, and "other sources." These "other sources" are credited with only 25,000. Considering that the West Indies are included under this head, it is reasonable to hope that the supply may turn out to have been underrated even for the coming season. The reports from Jamaica are in the highest degree encouraging, both as to the flourishing condition of the growing crop and the rapid increase of the area devoted to cotton. In Guiana and Demerara the proprietors are setting heartily to work to procure the requisite labour, which may probably be supplied from the United States. Agricultural machinery, of the highest order, has been sent out to Porto Rico, which is expected to supply a large quantity, not less than the produce of 2,000 acres, next year, and the quality of the West Indian cotton is declared to be scarcely short of the highest rates of American. Already we see that, as time passes on, we find ourselves under the process of being weaned from our obstinate reliance on the Slave States; and from month to month we shall learn to give up the irrational hope of any settlement in America which can restore the old state of affairs.

THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION.

Dayton, O., Nov. 2.

J. F. Ballmeyer, Editor of the Dayton Empire, was shot dead by Henry M. Brown. The difficulty grew out of personal misunderstanding occasioned by the shooting of a dog belonging to Ballmeyer by Brown's son. Mr. Brown gave himself up, and was taken to gaol.

New York, Nov. 2.

A special despatch says that the rebels are making demonstrations towards Manassas, and had run a train from Bull Run Bridge. Gen. Siegel says:—I have sent a strong force to Bull Run bridge to restore the train to the track.

Headquarters Army of the Potomac. Wheatland V. A., Nov. 2-8 P. M.

To his Excellency the President:—

I have just received a despatch from General McClellan, dated Snicker's Gap, 6 p. m., stating that he is in possession of the Gap. When Gen. Hancock arrived there it was held by the enemy's cavalry, who were at once driven out by a column of from 5,000 to 6,000 infantry. The rebels advanced to retake it, but were dispersed by the fire of our rifled guns. The position is a strong one from either side. It is said that General Jackson and General A. P. Hill are in the valley opposite.

General Pleasanton had driven the enemy's cavalry several miles beyond Union at three o'clock this afternoon, exploding one of their caissons and capturing ten of their wounded left behind.

(Signed)

A. B. Marcy,
Chief of Staff.

Fort Monroe, Nov. 2.

The Richmond Examiner, of the 30th October, contains the following:—

Charleston, Oct. 28.

Tidings reached here this evening of the capture in Bull's Bay of the steamship "Anglia," laden with valuable army stores bound to this city. When the "Anglia" left Nassau news had been received that the Yankees had been working night and day on iron clads, with a view of attacking Charleston soon.

The day before yesterday a Yankee gunboat came up the river as far as West Point, making no stay, but gave notice that *they intended to send up a large ves*sel to blockade the river, and stop the rebel trade in oysters. They also thought the people on the Rappahannock river had not yet tasted the terrors of war, and they intended to pay them a visit shortly.

Friction matches sold in Richmond on the 29th at $11 50 per gross.

The Examiner says that the waggon of apples brought out of Kentucky by Gen. Smith, was 40 miles long, and brings a million yards of Kentucky Jeans, with a large amount of clothing, boots and shoes, and 200 waggon loads of bacon, 6,000 barrels of pork, 15,000 mules and horses, 8,000 beeves, and a large lot of swine.

The Raleigh Express says there are many considerations which make it necessary that the Government should take prompt and energetic measures, to hold against the enemy the eastern portion of North Carolina.

The people of this section are already alarmed at the prospect of being overrun by the enemy, and are said to distrust the intention of the Government to hold this country, and to be making preperations to remove their slave property to safer quarters.

The Neuse river is navigable at a high freshet for boats drawing 4 or 5 feet of water, to Smithfield, within 20 miles of Raleigh. It would be improper to say what has already been done to close this and the Tar rivers.

Oswego, Nov. 3.

The propeller "Bay State," Capt. John Brown, with 40 or 50 passengers, left here for Ogdensburg last night. Pieces of that fine boat, and portions of her freight, are now being washed ashore, and it is feared that she has been lost, with all her crew and passengers, in the terrific gale of Sunday night.

Two schooners were driven ashore opposite this city.

Oswego, Nov. 3.

There were only 6 passengers and 16 of a crew on board the prop. "Bay State," foundered off this port. We only learn the name of one passenger, Orley Thompson, of Vermont. The beach for miles was strewn with portions of her cargo and wreck. She was bound for Lake Erie, loaded with merchandize. The vessel was valued at $14,000; cargo probably worth $20,000 or $30,000.

The schooner "Annie Moulton," with wheat, barley, and rye, from Canada, lost her canvas in the gale, off this port last night, and went ashore near Sandy Creek.

The schooner "Mary Ann," with grain, and the "Gazelle," with lumber, both from Canada are ashore down the lake.

Fort Monroe, Nov. 3.

Cannonading was heard up the James River last evening, at ten o'clock. The cause is not ascertained.

Washington, Nov. 3.

Rear Admiral Dupont, in communicating to the Navy Department the circumstances attending the capture of the British steamers "Scotia, Anglia, and Owachila," and the destruction of the "Minbo," says the crew of the "Scotia" were in a state of intoxication, so that they became almost unmanagable, acting volunteer Lieut. Conroy ordered them to be transferred on board the "Restless," and put in irons. The "Anglia" when captured, was almost out of coal, and was sent by Capt. Gordon, senior officer off Charleston, to Port Royal to be supplied. This is the same vessel which attempted to enter Charleston in September, and being headed off, succeeded in making her escape through the darkness.

Boston Nov. 3.

It is reported that Major Gen. Banks will have eight regiments of Massachusetts Infantry, 3 batteries of artillery, and a regiment of cavalry, as part of his proposed Texas expedition.

Gen. Banks returns to New York to-morrow.

Cario, Nov. 3.

Advices from Holly Springs to Wednesday say that large reinforcements from Texas and Louisiana are pouring in.

There is no movement of rebel troops from that place, except Villip'que's brigade to Meridian.

The people of Hernando are said to be moving their slaves and other property into the interior.

The Federal forces at Island No. 10 have again occupied the Tennessee shore, and are now constructing a fort, under the protection of a Federal gunboat.

A despatch from Jackson, Tenn., says that news received at Grant's headquarters yesterday from the South, via Rienzi, confirms the capture of Mobile.

—The Quebec Mercury claims that the Government have effected a reduction in the Customs Department of $12,615 per annum.

☞ As a reprisal upon England for the damages inflicted by the "Alabama," built at Liverpool, the New York Herald says:—

"Our government should at once, in this matter of the Alabama, make reclamation on the English government for all the losses which our people have sustained or may sustain, through the operations of that British-Confederate privateer. It may not be politic to insist upon those reclamations at this time; but they can be fyled by, to be brought to light and urged with the whole power of the nation as soon as we have put down the rebels and restored the republic to its former greatness. When that time comes we shall be much surprised if our government does not, in retaliation for the villainous treachery of England, seize and hold Canada until full and satisfactory retribution be made for this and all other covertly hostile acts which, in our time of tribulation, we have experienced at the hands of the British government."

GODEY'S LADY'S BOOK FOR 1863.

GREAT LITERARY & PICTORIAL YEAR!

THE PUBLISHER of Godey's Lady's Book, thankful to the public which has enabled him to publish a magazine for the last thirty-three years of a larger circulation than any in America, has made an arrangement with the most popular authoress in this country:

MARION HOWLAND,

AUTHORESS OF

"Alone," "Hidden Path," "Moss Side," "Nemesis," and "Mortimer."

Who will furnish a story for every number of the Lady's Book for 1863. This alone will place the Lady's Book in a literary point of view far ahead of any other magazine. Marion Howland writes for no other publication. Our other favourite writers will continue to furnish articles throughout the year.

THE BEST LADY'S MAGAZINE IN THE WORLD, AND THE CHEAPEST!!

THE LITERATURE.

Is of that kind that can be read aloud in the family circle, and the clergy in immense numbers are subscribers for the Book.

THE BEST LADY WRITERS

In America contribute to its pages, and we have some that write for no other magazine

THE MUSIC

Is all original, and would cost 25 cents (the price of the Book) in the music stores; but most of it is copyrighted, and cannot be obtained except in Godey.

OUR STEEL ENGRAVINGS.

All efforts to rival us in this department have ceased, and we now stand alone in this department, giving as we do, many more and infinitely better engravings than are published in any other work.

GODEY'S

Immense Double-Sheet Fashion Plates,

CONTAINING

FROM FIVE TO SEVEN FULL LENGTH COLOURED FASHIONS ON EACH PLATE—OTHER MAGAZINES ONLY GIVE TWO.

Far ahead of any Fashions in Europe and America.

Godey's is the only work in the world that gives these immense plates, and they are such as to have excited the wonder of publishers and the public. The publication of these plates

COST $10,000

More than fashion Plates of the old style, and nothing but our wonderfully large circulation enables us to give them. Other magazines cannot afford them. We never spare money when the public can be benefitted.

These Fashions may be relied on. Dresses may be made after them, and the wearer will not subject herself to ridicule, as would be the case if she visited the large cities dressed after the style of the plates given in some of our so-called fashion magazines.

OUR WOOD ENGRAVINGS

Of which we give twice or three times as many as any other magazine, are often taken for steel. They are so far superior to any others.

IMITATIONS.

Beware of them. Remember that the Lady's Book is the original publication, and the cheapest. If you take Godey you want no other magazine. Everything that is useful or ornamental in a house is found in Godey.

DRAWING LESSONS.

No other magazine gives them and we have given enough to fill several large volumes.

OUR RECEIPTS

Are such as can be found nowhere else. Cooking, in all its variety—Confectionary—the Nursery—the Toilet—the Laundry—the Kitchen. Receipts upon all subjects are to be found in the pages of the Lady's Book. We originally started this department, and have peculiar facilities for making it most perfect. This department alone is worth the price of the Book.

LADIES' WORK TABLE.

This departm at comprises engravings and descriptions of every article that a lady wears.

MODEL COTTAGES.

No other magazine has this department.

FINKLE & LYON

SEWING MACHINE COMPANY.

538 Broadway, New York.

TO parties little acquainted with the Finkle & Lyon Sewing Machines the careful perusal of the Company's Circular is specially commended. This circular can be had on application. It is very specific, and will be found highly instructive, having been prepared with much care and we will abide by all statements therein made.

The following brief quotation is characteristic of the entire Circular:

"This Machine is better adapted than any other Sewing Machine in market to the frequent changes and almost endless variety of sewing required in a family; for it will sew from one to twenty thicknesses of Marseilles without stopping, and make every stitch perfect. Will sew from the finest gauze to the heaviest cloth, and even the smallest harness leather, without changing the feed needle or tension, or making any adjustment of machine whatever."

Thus have we successfully overcome the most difficult point in the Sewing Machine art. It was no ordinary triumph. Defiantly can we now say, "No other Machine compares with it in this respect." Hence, have we uniformly—almost without exception—taken the highest premium, whenever the Machine has been properly exhibited in competition with other first class Sewing Machines. Hence it is that we are able to offer the following guarantee, viz.: "We warrant every Machine we sell to give BETTER satisfaction than any other Sewing Machine in the market, or money refunded." We never sell a Machine on any other terms. The guarantee is as reliable as the note of any business man in the land. For more than five years have we relied upon such facts for the reputation of our Machine; and without a single travelling agent in the field, there is scarcely a neighborhood on the continent where the Machine is not favourably known. We prefer such a reputation to one based on mere "talking points," as they are technically called in the trade. Hence we make but one kind of stitch, viz. the lock-stitch, alike on both sides, requiring only one-third the thread of other kinds of stitches.

N. B.—Local Agents wanted in every county throught the West. ☞ Special inducements offered.

THE NEW PAIN-KILLER!

HENRY'S VERMONT LINIMENT.

IN offering to the public this new Pain-Killer, we wish to commend it as being not only better than any other Pain-Killer, and in larger bottles at a corresponding price, but as containing nothing injurious to persons using it. It may be used externally for Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Toothache, Headache, Burns and Scalds, Bruises and Swellings, Sore throat, Lumbago, &c., &c, and may be used internally for

Cholic and Colds, Cholera Morbus, Bowel Complaints, Diarrhœa, Wind Cholic, &c., &c.

It has been in use for the last four years, and its superlative excellence is already attested by thousands who have used it.

It is composed of ingredients, each of which is essentially remedial in itself, so that the combination of all in one, produces a Liniment or Pain-killer, unexcelled in its curative properties.

WARRANTED WHEN USED IN SEASON!

No family should be without a bottle of it for immediate use in case of burns, scalds, wounds, and other casualties resulting from accidents "that flesh is heir to."

IT IS HARMLESS TO USE AT ANY TIME.

A teaspoonful of it taken in a glass of water in the morning clears the head, brightens the eye and gives a sense of elasticity to mind and body when exhausted nature fails to assert her supremacy.

ITS EFFECTS ARE MARVELLOUS.

Try it, and if it does not produce satisfactory results, when used according to directions, return the bottle to the agent of whom you got it, and he will refund the money paid for it.

We only ask a fair, unprejudiced and impartial trial. Sold at every Drug Store and Country Store throughout Canada. Price 25 cents per bottle.

ANNUAL MEETING

INVESTIGATION REPORT - - - DECLARATION OF BONUS.

THE thirty-sixth annual Meeting of this Company was held within the Royal Hotel, Aberdeen Friday, the 18th April

Alexander Stronach, Esq., of Drumallan, Chairman of the Ordinary Directors, in the Chair. There were submitted to the meeting—

1.—Report by the Directors, which, on the motion of the Chairman, was cordially and unanimously approved of and adopted.

2.—The Balance Sheet for the past year, with detailed states relative thereto, duly certified as correct, in terms of the Act of Incorporation, by the Chairman and Manager, and also by the Auditor.

There was also laid on the Table the various Valuation States in connection with the Quinquennial Investigation into the state of the Company's affairs, as at 31st January, 1862.

The following particulars derived from the Balance Sheet and States beforementioned, show the result of the operations of the Company for the past year:—

Amount proposed for Life Assurance during the year, contained in 1189 Proposal	£484,835 0 0
Amount of Proposals accepted, and for which 961 Policies were issued	359,680 0 0
ANNUAL PREMIUMS or said Polices	11,170 1 0
CLAIMS BY DEATH including BONUSES on PARTICIPATON POLICIES, and after deducting Sums recovered from other Offices under guarantees	22,999 1 0
TOTAL SUM Assured under 4,759 current LIFE POLICIES	1,955,95 0 0
TOTAL ACCUMULAED FUNDS	373,563 3 2
TOTAL ANNUAL REVENUE	96,756 4 4

With reference to the recent investigation into the state of the Company's affairs, as at 31st January last, the Report Stated that both the principles of valuation and the details thereof, had been submitted to James John Downes, Esq., Actuary to the Economic Life Office in London, a gentleman well known as one of the highest authorities on such subjects in the Kingdom, and had received his entire approval, as having been made on just and sound principles, and accurately carried out as certified in his report to the Directors, which formed part of the Appendix to their Report. This step the Directors considered could not fail to give the utmost confidence—both to the shareholders and the Policyholders—in the soundness and correctness of the valuation.

During the Quinquennial period, the claims by death, including the bonus additions which had been paid, and which had been considerably under the number that might have been expected from the Mortality Tables on which the Office rates are based, amounting to £93,975 6s 6d.

In valuing the Policies, each had been separately calculated, and nett premiums had only been used, thus leaving a surplus of annual revenue of £11,427 16s 7d., to meet future expenses and to form a source of profit for next investigation. The total amount of claims by death paid since the commencement of the Company, was £217,821 4s.

The Securities held by the Company were in a satisfactory position, and had been recently carefully scrutinized in detail by the Directors.

In conclusion, the Directors congratulated both the Proprietors and the Assured on the high position which the Company now occupied in the estimation of the public, and on the encouraging prospect of its business operations for the future.

DECLARATION OF BONUS.

From the profits realized on the Life business, a retrospective Bonus of £1 7s 6d per cent per annum for the Quinquennial period was declared, on the sums originally assured under all Participating Policies, increased by the previous additions thereto; also a further prospective Bonus of £1 per cent per annum, on the amount of the Policies with said Bonuses, on all such of said Policies as may become claims by Death previously to the 31st January, 1867.

It will be observed, that this rate of Bonus is equivalent in the case of our older Policies to £1 14s per cent per annum on the original sum assured; that the total additions to the sum assured, now vested, are equal to 32 per cent on the sum assured: and that as the younger ages the additions amount to upwards of 75 per cent of the premiums paid.

Statement showing the Progress of the Company's Business during the Quinquennial Period, ending 31st January, 1862:

FIRE INSURANCE.

THE following table compiled from the official returns, exhibits, at a glance, the increase of duty paid to the Government by the different Insurance Offices, metropolitan and provincial, during the year 1861.

THE "ROYAL,"

It will be seen, stands as before, at the very head of the list, and maintains a rate of progress very far in advance of all its rivals and competitors. Twelve months ago, we had the gratification of recording the fact that its increase, in the year 1860, had been more than double that of any other company—had exceeded 30 per cent., of the entire increase of all the London offices combined—and had, also exceeded 30 per cent, of the aggregate increase of the remaining twenty eight provincial offices. We have now the pleasure of inviting the attention of our readers to the testimony of these later returns, which show that in the year 1861, the increase of the "Royal" was very nearly sixty per cent, in excess of the increase of any other company—that there were but three offices which came even within fifty per cent of it, and that it was actually more than one-sixth of the entire increase of the remaining forty-four offices, London and Provincial put together. Comment upon such facts as these would be superfluous. They prove, unmistakeably, the continued advance of the "Royal" in the confidence and good opinion of the public. That advance has been, from the beginning, as remarkable as it has been rapid; and we cordially congratulate the directors and shareholders upon it, because we regard it as the just reward of prudent management, of liberal and honorable dealing, and of undoubted stability.

Poetry.

It affords us much pleasure to publish the following political address, by Mr. J. C. Patterson, of Windsor. We understand that her Majesty the Queen has been graciously pleased to signify to Mr. Patterson her high appreciation of his poem, and that Lord Palmerston also has written to him, thanking him for his patriotic and spirited production;—

Canada to England.

Mother of many prosperous lands,
Thy children in this far off West,
Seeing thee; vague and undefined,
A cloud come up to mar our rest.

With loving hearts and outstretched hands,
Send greeting leal and kind.

Though many thousand boisterous miles,
Of stormy waters wisely flow
Between us and the favored Isles—
The invisible links which bound they sway—
No time nor distance can divide
What gentlest minds have firmest tied;
And this we feel which all must know,
That come what may in weal or woe,
Our hearts are one this day.

The time late, when death's cold wings were spread
And when the nation's eyes were dim,
We who bowed the stricken head,
Ave, too, the eloquent tear drops shed
Of heartfelt grief for you.
For, seeing clearer from afar,
Needing not told to teach his worth;
So, hearing that another star
Was quenched, we checked our Christian mirth,
And thought of our loved Queen, and prayed
(A nation's heart watch our prayer,)
That He who brings the widow aid
Might comfort her despair.

And as our England's daughters go
To take on them another state,
We too are joyful shall relate;
And when they grace their lofty sphere,
We too are filled with honest pride—
More proud, more joyous, when we know
That hands are join'd where hearts were won
And that those ships which mostend ear,
To which true worth is most allied
Are his, old England's new-found son,
Who claims her Alice as his bride.

When recent danger threatened near
We neerved our hearts to play our part
Nor making boast, nor feeling fear,
But as the news of insult spread
Were none to dally or to lag;
For all the grand old Island spirit,
Which Britons chivalrous sons inherit,
Was roused, and as one heart, one head,
We rallied round our flag!

And now, as then, unchanged, the same,
Though filling each our seperate spheres,
Thy joys, thy grief, and thy good name
Are ours, and ours good or ill,
Our pride of race we have not lost,
And ayet it is our dearest boast
That we are Briton's still!
And in the gradual lapse of years
We look that heath these distant skies
Another England shall arise—
A noble scion of the old,
Still to herself and lineage true,
And prizing honor more than gold.
This is our hope, and as for you
Be just, as you are generous, Mother,
And let not those who rashly speak
Things which they know not, render week
The ties that bind us to each other.

Windsor, C. W.

Miscellaneous.

Ex-President Buchanan and the early History of the Rebellion.

The world has already begun to forget the existence of James Buchanan, Ex-President of the United States—when General Scott, doubtless in an unwitting moment, recalled the defunct statesman to life and reason. The incidents of the case are these: In pursuit of his mission as the advocate-general of the Seymour Democracy of New York, Mr. John Van Buren, the other day, produced a letter of General Scott's (the text of which has already been laid before our readers,) in which, as was shown in these columns, something approaching to a reflection on the sincerity of the General's "Union" sentiments was invited by various doubtful phrases, as well as by the tenor of the document generally. To qualify these dubious phrases, and modify the temper and bearing of that epistle, General Scott, a few days subsequently, sent to the National Intelligencer a quasi explanation of the position he held and of the difficulties by which he was surrounded, after the election of 1860, and in the early months of 1861, when the rebellion was fairly hatched. In this explanation—or, more properly, exculpation—General Scott was necessarily obliged to bring under review the conduct and policy of Mr. Buchanan's administration; and although he applied the ex-President rather by indirection than in an open and defiant spirit, yet it was clear to every one, and must have been specially clear to Mr. Buchanan, and that was the target aimed at. The General's "views," as he delights to call them, were put forth in anything but clear and vigorous language. He appeared, in fact, in his explanatory document to have got into a muddle, and hardly could get out of it. That, at least, was the impression which would naturally be gathered from reading his letter. And certainly such an impression would be amply confirmed by a perusal of the letter, biting, sarcastic reply which the General's pursuit on Mr. Buchanan has called forth from that much-abused gentleman. We have seldom read a more vigorous paper than that which the ex-President has given to the world. We do not say that it justifies the bitterly but feeble policy the late President assumed towards the treasonable attitudes of the South. We do not say that it will in any degree lead to redeem that policy from execration among the great mass of the countrymen here, or from a certain admixture of contempt among intelligent onlookers abroad. But we do say that it completely upsets every charge and insinuation offered by Gen. Scott; that it throws not only that the General's opinion was invited as to the war measures necessary for the "protection of the United States forts and arsenals of the South, and that such advice was given immediately to the point. Nay, more, it shows that of the gravest of all the many issues of the rebellion—the question of Major Anderson's garrison at Fort Sumter—every objection of General Scott's characterised and by the President, dated to the starting-point of sending a merchant vessel instead of a armed-war ship as a transport for the troops.

But we have not asked the attention of our readers to this subject to determine the relative merits of Mr Buchanan and Gen. Scott, either as to their political sagacity or their intellectual calibre. Of the respective claims of the combatants as to the latter quality at least most readers will have little difficulty in forming their own judgment. What we chiefly desire to draw attention to is contained in that portion of Mr Buchanan's communication where he excuses his administration for having failed to garrison Forts Jackson and Phillip on the Mississippi, Fort Morgan below Mobile, Forts Pickens and Meltan in Pensacola Harbor, Fort Pulaski below Savannah, Forts Moultrie and Sumter in Charleston harbor, and Fort Monroe in Virginia. At the time when the reinforcement of these forts was deemed expedient, Mr. Buchanan tells us that the whole regular army of the United States numbered only sixteen thousand men. And these, with the exception of five companies distributed between New York, Boston, Augusta, Ga., Pittsburg and Baton Rouge, were exclusively employed upon frontier duty, or on the still more distant ports of Oregon and California. And for the performance of the duties required of the regular army by the constantly recurring Indian troubles, so inadequate was that force considered by General Scott himself, that, long before the rebellion was dreamt of, the General, as Mr. Buchanan reminds him, had urged upon Congress, year after year, to allow the augmentation of the army by several regiments of infantry—a request in which the ex-President himself most cordially joined. Then, then, whatever we may have to say as to the temporizing policy adopted by Mr. Buchanan in the last days of his administration, we have forced upon this inevitable conclusion that without the aid of Congress he had no means—literally none at all—by which to assert the strength of the National Government. Both the Commissioner-in-Chief and the Commanding General had, year after year, pled earnestly for an allowance from Congress for a larger military force. But they had pled in vain. And without waiting to trace from this simple fact any conclusion as to its relation to the headway made by the rebellion in its early stages, we must ask the notice of our readers to the principle involved in the refusal of Congress to vote the men the means for a standing army of more than the most meagre dimensions, because that principle, we take it, lies at the very basis of true republicanism, and its violation points to a new order of Government in the future—unless there comes an early revolution of public sentiment and a return to the old ways.

Turning our eyes backward, then, to this handful of sixteen thousand men, only five hundred of whom were required to twenty-eight of the States east of the Rocky mountains, what is the philosophy suggested? Is it not a simple practical illustration of the great republican doctrine that the Government is to be carried on by the consent of the governed? Was the refusal of the Congress of 1859 '60 to meet the demands of General Scott and Mr. Buchanan merely the result of some economic freak? Or did it not lie deeper down in that natural inbred feeling of dread which so long had a wholesome feeling in the American mind, that large standing armies and true republican institutions are incompatible? These are questions which the troubles of the hour make deeply significant. Until the phrensy created by the fight in Charleston harbor seized on the outraged people of these Northern States, it would have been less easy to have raised an army of 500,000 men than it would be to-day to raise a million. How was that? The country was wealthy. The public debt might be counted by hundreds of thousands where now it is counted by hundreds of millions. The difference, we repeat, lay in the deep rooted sentiment of the people, that to coerce either States or large communities under any designation into subjection to an obnoxious form of government, was to lay the axe to the foot of the republican tree, and blast the labor of nearly a century of free and equal government. That was the meaning of the thing; twist it how we will. Well, then, is it possible, with three quarters of a million of men in the field, to return to these early principles again? The mission of that stupendous force is subjugation. No one conceals it. Suppose it succeeds in many brilliant contests, when will its mission cease? Do these heaps of dead carcases which strew the highways on all the battle-grounds of the South promise to block up the path by which the soldier shall return to his task as a citizen? By what scale shall the War Office descend from its 760 000 quota to the pure republican sixteen thousand of the days of Buchanan? Can the change of the past ever be made? Is it not gone and gone for good—that simple doctrine of governing the people by their own consent? Or will the Democracy—if it should triumph—lead us back into the old paths by some secret, and yet undiscovered path? And in this supplemental utterance from the sage of Wheatland the first blast of the trump which shall recall the nation to a former life, re-the old principle of republican freedom? We leave our readers to think and determine for themselves.—Scottish American.

EUROPEAN MEDIATION IN THE AMERICAN STRUGGLE.

A short time ago a considerable excitement existed, in consequence of the deliverance of the British Chancellor of the Exchequer, at the Newcastle banquet, on American matters. The learned gentleman expressed his conviction that Jeff Davis and other Southern leaders had "made a nation" —an announcement from a member of the Government, calculated to lead to the belief that the other members of the Government thought so too, and as a consequence recognition of the South as a nation by the British Government would soon follow. Several members of the Imperial Parliament have of late uttered similar sentiments as those of Mr. Gladstone; indeed, going further and giving it as their opinion that it was the duty of England at once to offer mediation. As an offset to the opinions of the Chancellor, we have those of Mr. G. C. Lewis, the British Secretary of War, who, in a recent public speech, maintained that the Southern States had not yet established their independence. That the war was still waging, and still undecided, and that the first intimation of the recognition of the South according to the reading of international law, should come from the North, or else it must be shown by other powers that the contest was exhausted before their intervention was warranted. He admitted that it was a general opinion in England that the issue of the present contest would issue in the establishment of the independence of the South. For himself he expressed no such opinion, and at present there not being de facto, an established independence of the Southern States of America, England could not be charged with neglect in not recognising such independence.

Several members of Parliament have also spoken in the same strain. But the most remarkable and note worthy circumstance in connection with this matter is the silence of the Premier in his recent public speeches on American matters. He makes no reference whatever to them, and his reticence is looked upon pretty generally by the press as the most proper and consistent course for the Government of which he is the head to pursue in the present struggle. Still, a large and influencial portion of the press and people advocate intervention at once, on sundry grounds.

It is supposed that Sir G. C. Lewis had been instructed by his chief, to oppose the views uttered by the Chancellor, so as to let it be understood that the inference to be drawn from Mr. Gladstone's speech were not really the views of the Cabinet. Every sentence spoken by a member of the Government is strictly observed and criticised, and opinions are often erroneously entertained of the views of the Government, from casual remarks by an individual member at a public gathering.

Again, when the speech in question is thirty analyzed, what does it prove? It may then be summed up: that Mr. Gladstone was decidedly of opinion that the severance of the United States would not be for the benefit of England—that the restoration of the Union is now impossible as Jefferson Davis and other Southern leaders "had made a nation,"—and that Slavery would survive the severance of the States but a short period—not a whisper about recognition or intervention. It is true the admission of the existence of a separate nation, implies a duty on the part of other powers to acknowledge it as such, at the same time it is hardly fair, from the speech itself, to say that the Honorable gentleman either thought it the duty of the Government to acknowledge the Southern States, much less that the Government contemplated anything of the sort.

The speech breathes a spirit of fair play and Good will towards the American people, and is marked throughout for its manly, outspoken sentiments in reference to a very serious and afflicting calamity, not only to the people engaged in conflict, but to the oppression of England, and, indeed, the whole of the civilized world.

We cordially concur with him that when the war is at an end, the Northern people will be ready to acknowledge then, if not sooner, that England has acted with a degree of neutrality and forbearance—in the midst of much provocation—which entitles her to regard and respect, which they now refuse to accord to her.

THE EXHIBITION IN THE SCHOOL HOUSE.

The Magic Lantern Exhibition in the Union School was but thinly attended,—which was owing to the uncomfortable state of the weather, the want of sufficient intimation, and its coming so soon after so many other entertainments of a similar kind, and certainly not to the want of attractions of the Exhibition itself.

Mr. May was introduced by Mr. White, and immediately commenced operating on the Lecture, with some Scripture scenes which the young people named at once: Abraham and Hagar; Abraham offering up his son; Elk and Samuel; then quite scenes from Pilgrim Progress: Bunyan in prison; Christian setting out; at the Gate, "Knock and it shall be opened;" at the Cross; at the Lions; and some Chinese pictures, all of which were very skilfully illustrated by the Lecture. Moving scenes were next. Scenes: The Thames by sailing up it; Pursuit of Smugglers; Pretzel eating a Rat; Horse drinking at a trough—all very naturally imitated; and lastly were Diagrams, amongst which the Electric Telegraph; the fall, and finally the robbery and end. Each set of scenic exhibitions was closed by an amusing one, which received the attention by a hearty laugh and loud applause. The story of the Tale of a Tub, in which a Tiger that scented a pie in the pantry got his tail knotted through the bung-hole of a barrel; of the Stone-breaker who always cried "Oh, Adam," and was himself convicted by the same incumbent curiosity; The Turk's Head Lily; and the Old Dame thanking the naughty Boy, were highly appreciated. The Entertainment lasted a little over an hour and a half, mingling instruction and amusement in a very agreeable manner, and showing how much the mind could be improved, and the heart too, if such exhibitions could be added to the Grammar School instruction by the Teachers themselves possessing such an instrument as a Magic Lantern. The great defect of a Town School Education is the want of objective knowledge of natural objects. Object lessons, of which a very fine set have been purchased for the School the other day, will do much to supply that defect, but the lantern gives objects such a life like appearance as to give a still more lively impression of them. Mr. May has at least proved the much to those who were present, and who were sufficiently numerous to bear testimony to the able manner in which the Exhibition was conducted, and to give the assurance that a similar Entertainment at some future period would not be so thinly attended. Mr. May's merely intimating that as he was coming to set up the Observatory he would give the Exhibition at the same time, was too short notice, and afforded too slight an idea of so interesting an exhibition as that of the Phantasmagoria of the Magic Lantern. A vote of thanks was given to Mr. May at the close, by acclamation.—Com.

THE WAR.

Perhaps the most important event that has taken place for some time, is the removal of General McClellan from Commander-in-Chief of the Grand army of the Potomac, and the appointment of General Burnside in his stead. The latter is considered a bold and brave officer, but like all his compeers, he has not the skill, knowledge or experience to fit him for the high office of Generalissimo. There is no doubt the want of success, during this long struggle is mainly attributable to the lack of skilful commanders. No action between the contending parties has taken place for some time.

—BURGLARY.—Several shops in Town have been entered within three or four days, and several articles abstracted. Suspicions were entertained of a man named William English as being the guilty party, and the Constables on Tuesday were on his track, but failed in apprehending him. About 1 o'clock on Wednesday morning Martin *Mc*Donald who is employed as night watch discovered a man trying to wrench off the padlock from Adam Dobbin's Stable. He at once arrested him. He gave his name to him as Armstrong, but on being brought up to Frank's he was there recognized as the identical English. He was then committed to the Lock-up. Next morning he was brought before His Worship the Mayor, when several parties appeared and indentified articles, he had sold and given away, or found upon him. He was committed to take his trial for burglary and larceny.

Constable *Mc*Donald deserves the thanks of the community for the prompt manner he made the capture.

We take pleasure in announcing the arrival of Dr. Cameron, the Celebrated Oculist and Aurist, who was to have been here some time ago, but owing to sickness and other matters, over which he had no control, was obliged to postpone his visit. Dr. C. has made a specialty of the Eye and Ear and has been very successful in his operations and treatment on these delicate organs, restoring in many cases sight and hearing to those who had been deprived of these most requisite senses for years. We would advise all those who may be afflicted with diseases of the Eye or Ear, to call on Dr. C. during his stay in this place, as it is seldom that we have the opportunity presented of consulting one who is so skilful in treating diseases of the Eye and Ear.

Dr. C. is at Huffman's Hotel, where he will remain until Saturday, 22nd of November.

☞ MR. JAMES HOGG, long and favourably known in connection with the Bank of Montreal in this Town, left here yesterday for his new situation, up West. We understand that the Bank of Montreal is about opening an Agency in the flourishing Town of Mount Forest, and Mr. Hogg is appointed to take charge of it.

We feel pleased at his advancement, and are persuaded all who know him will be pleased also. Mr. H. carries with him the good wishes of a large circle of friends and acquaintances. In our moral and religious institutions his absence will be seriously felt. We trust he will be equally popular and useful in his new sphere of labour.

Mount Forest is equi distant between Guelph and Owen's Sound, in the centre of a large and fertile agricultural district, and is spoken of as the capital of the future new County of Palmerston.

We are glad to be able to announce that the celebrated Master Willie B. Pope will visit Peterboro' this week, and will give one of his grand concerts. Master Pope has created a great excitement by his performances on the Silver Flute. He plays the most difficult pieces in the most masterly manner. We bespeak a grand treat for our musical friends.

POETRY.—We have received two or three pieces of Poetry from "Hollo" and W. B., which we decline to publish, for reasons which we need not give. We should like that writers of Poetry would bear in mind that unless they are Poets very few of their productions have an interest to the general public to warrant their publication.

We are pleased to learn that the Government has agreed to be at half the cost for making the Road between Young's Mill in Smith and the Burleigh Road. Surely our business men will not hesitate to advance the other half. The contractor on the Burleigh Road has offered to make the Road for $600.

THE ASSIZES.

The civil business at this Court was unusually heavy. The first, and apparently the most exciting case, was the breach of promise case. It took up a deal of time, and afforded a considerable amount of amusement to the listeners. The criminal Calendar was light, and, with the exception of McDonnald for cruelty and injury to cattle, not of a very serious character. The punishment of this individual seems severe, but a man capable of the cruelty he manifested to a neighbor's cattle, appears to us fit for any act, however bad. Had an occasion offered, the owner himself of the cattle might have fallen a sacrifice to the wretch. "The tender mercies of the wicked are cruel."

Judge Draper appears to us to improve as he advances in years. His very able and eloquent address to the Grand Jury, and his summing up in the several cases to the Petit Juries, were master pieces of forensic eloquence. No jury could mistake the law or the merits of a case brought under their notice, and hence the apparent ease with which they seemed to arrive at their conclusions. Of all the Judges we know of Judge Draper appears the most able and perspicuous. May he long be spared to preside over our Courts of Law. The Court was brought to a close on Tuesday.

The following gentlemen composed the Grand Jury.

Samuel Strickland, Esq., Foreman.

The following is the presentment of the Grand Jury:—

Fall Assizes, Grand Jury Room,
November 8th, 1862.

The United Counties of Peterborough & Victoria, } We the Grand Jurors, on our oath present that we have performed the usual duties of examining the Jail and Courthouse, and have the satisfaction to report that we found everything neat and in proper order, and we are glad to observe that the improvements for the better ventilation of the Jail, so often recommended by former Grand Jurors, have been successfully carried out.

To Wit:

We cannot separate without thanking your Lordship for the excellent charge delivered to the Court, in which your Lordship, with your usual perspicuity, so clearly pointed out the several duties belonging to the Grand and Petit Jurors. And we think we have with your Lordship great cause for congratulation when we consider the extent and population of these Counties, and for the many years they have constituted a Court of Assize, that hitherto the extreme penalty of the Law has not any case been required to be carried out, and we trust by the blessing of Almighty God that no need of such a result will be required for many years to come.

The Grand Jurors take this opportunity of expressing their deep regret that the Civil War continues to rage, unabated, in the neighbouring republic, whereby great distress has been caused throughout the Manufacturing districts of the Mother Country, and will most probably soon affect our own exports, especially the manufactured lumber, the great staple of this County. We trust by the blessing of God this dire calamity and unnatural strife will soon terminate, and that this Country may be long spared the horrors of the war; at the same time should any emergency arise we feel assured that the men of these United Counties will stand forward as they have ever done in defence of their Queen and Country.

THE MILITIA.

The following Militia General Orders are published in an extra of the Canada Gazette, issued on Tuesday, 4th inst.:—

"With reference to the provisions of the 25th Vic. Cap. 1, with reference to the annual pay to be given to Class A. of the Active force of Militia for their drill, and to the uniform clothing, or sum of money in lieu thereof authorized to be given to Class B. of the Active Force, His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief is pleased to make the following orders:—

"The Active Militia Force, comprising both Classes A. and B., are authorized to go through their drill, (not exceeding 12 days) for the present year, at such time as may be most convenient to each corps, subject to the provisions of the Militia Law. The days of such drill need not be consecutive, and each period of actual drill will be computed as one day.

"CLASS A.—For such actual drill, the several corps now in Class A., will be paid the amount prescribed by law for the same.

"CLASS B.—There is no provision by law for payment for drill of the several corps in this Class, but His Excellency is pleased to order, as to Class B. if uniformed, that the several corps of this Class, which are actually and bona fide provided with uniform complete in accordance with the Militia Law and General Orders, shall, after having gone through their drill as before specified, receive the sum of six dollars for each man uniformed, being the allowance for the current year, in lieu of uniform for that Class as mentioned by law.

"CLASS B., IF NOT UNIFORMED.—The several corps of this Class which are not uniformed will receive, as soon as the same may be fully completed for distribution amongst such corps, a supply of uniform clothing.

"His Excellency is induced to make these arrangements from his knowledge of the zeal and interest evinced by the Active Force generally, and thus to arrive at the practical result, that the whole Active Force will be placed on the same footing, and will receive, each man, six dollars, or a supply of clothing for the current year."

The Times on the American Position.

The following article from the London Times, gives a graphic picture of what the American people are willingly enduring for the re-establishment of their nationa integrity.

Let us look over the ocean, a few days, by steam, and rest our eyes on a country very like ours, inhabited by people speaking our own language, and clinging to our laws with even greater veneration than ourselves in some instances. The scene is peculiarly English. There are ridges of lofty, dark green hills that looks blue when the sun sets behind them. Among them are homesteads, cornfields, and bits of wood. Between two such ridges runs a stream that one does not know whether to call a river, or a torrent, or a creek, or a watercourse, for it has usually little water till it expands and deepens just before joining a navigable river that cuts through the hilly district. On one side of this mountain stream are some bold bluffs, surmounted by a plateau, and intersected by deep lanes, partially hidden by scrub. The country is only a couple of hours by rail from the capital of a great empire, and, no doubt a pleasant retreat from politics and hotels. Arcadia itself was never described more pleasantly than the region which lies before us in the letter of a truthful correspondent. One is tempted, like the old poet, to involve the friendly power that shall carry one from this dusty, smoky, reeking metropolis, and plant one by some Maryland torrent, or on some Pennsylvanian highland. Be assured, good reader, there is no pleasanter country on the earth, except our own.—Nature has done her work well, and if the region is not a paradise it is no fault of hers.

But what was the scene twenty days ago on that fair spot, which might have vied with one of our own favourite haunts of wearied Londoners? Two large parties of armed men descend from two opposite line of heights, and after some angry parley proceed to scatter themselves over the field, to reap what may be called the harvest of death. The crop lies on all sides, under their feet, scattered far and wide, in the furrow, in the deep hollow, in the thicket, by the watercourse, on the wayside, in heaps, everywhere. There are there, within three or four miles, thirty thousand dead, dying, or wounded men. The reapers proceed to collect their own; to dig shallow graves, in which they heap the dead; to give such relief as lies in their power to the dying or desperate, and to remove, as far as their carriage will allow, those of whom there is some hope. Plunderers have been before them, and in the dawn have gathered a vile booty, and perhaps dealt foully with the helpless owners. The thirty thousand are sorted; a bit of coloured rag, a word, or a figure distinguishes the two parties in the conflict which has riven a new world. The few sheds and barns in the neighborhood are cleared for hospitals, in which the wounded are laid thick, side by side, at least out of sun, wind and rain. An army of surgeons enter with their terrible weapons, and soon a "vast hole" is dug, and filled with amputated limbs. That is the least terrible form of wound. There are horrors that no tongue can tell, and no imagination conceive that has not seen. Of these thirty thousand the greater part are very young, raw, and simple, having some strange idea that they were fighting for independence and the privileges of men and citizens. For an idea, which is either an unreasoning prejudice or a political subtlety, and which need never have existed had it not answered the purpose of faction, these men lie on the ground, wrecks of humanity, dying, or doomed to be henceforth burdens to society and themselves. Let us think what we should do if by some sudden disaster there lay that number of dead and wounded men on the downs of pleasant Surrey. What a panic would strike our capacious and well-appointed hospitals. But there are already twenty thousand sick and wounded soldiers at Washington, where only one church can be spared for Divine Service from hospital use, and where long wooden structures, compared to our roughest cowsheds, have already been run up to receive those who cannot be taken in elsewhere. This was the state of Washington three weeks ago; and just then there started from "Antietam Creek" the sad procession bringing the Federal share of the wounded from a field on which thirty thousand men had lain in agony, or past pain, the night before. But even this terrible aggravation added to a vast sum of horrors was only one of many such additions. The war was raging on twenty such fields. The men who thus fought what is called the Borondino of the war were part of the 200,000 who survived twice their number.

* * * * *

Let us suppose the tide of war henceforth to turn, in the main to the Federal side; and let us conceive the Union restored in such new form possible under the circumstances. It will, in that case, be one form of Government instead of another, or rather one Government instead of two or more. Will it be worth the sacrifice of a million more men or even half a million or a quarter of a million more? A conqueror of the barbarous old school thought it worth the destruction of half the human race, if he could thereby become master of the remaining half. That was his calculation, and we, in those days call it nothing but a savage sort of egotism. It was for his own sake—that is, for his vanity or his self-will—that he was ready, to destroy half-mankind. It can be nothing else that impels the Federal Government to purchase unity, if they can, at the cost of so many hecatombs. It cannot be for the good of the South they seek to reduce it, or destroy it; and if it is for the good of the North, that good has not yet been explained. It is only the vulgar good of those who wish for numbers however unwilling or power however brutal. We can speak with authority, for England has, with as ill grace indeed, illustrated by her example the doctrine which she preaches. We tried for seven years to preserve the Anglo American unity; we spent a hundred millions; we disgraced ourselves; we lost influence at home, and we entirely failed in our object. The Americans had ample opportunity of studying both sides of that question, ours and theirs—a fierce and heartless vanity or a friendly independence. They must be utterly forgetful, blind, or mad, if they now choose to copy our mistake, and not their own successful wisdom.

—The population of the Sandwich Islands has dwindled to 67,000, from 150,000 in 1823. Disease is carrying off the inhabitants by the thousand.

Cobourg Streets and Sidewalks.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

SIR,—I would beg to advise our pugnacious and grumbling townsmen, who so frequently complain of the condition of our streets and sidewalks, to pay a visit to the Town of Cobourg, when in my opinion they will return, convinced that our neighbors in this respect are in a much worse condition than ourselves, notwithstanding their higher rate of assessment. The condition of the streets, and sidewalks in particular, are in a deplorable plight in the formerly tidy and enterprising Town of Cobourg. For example, should any daring pedestrian attempt after dark to walk along Division Street to the Grand Trunk Station, he must do so at the imminent peril of having a leg broken, and possibly his neck, especially should he diverge one half step to the left, after passing Scott's Block of buildings.

The amusing part of all this is, that should you remonstrate with any of the "natives" relative to this state of affairs, he will point out to you with an air of importance to that magnificent pile of stone, brick and morter, ycleped Victoria Hall and enquire if you have "anything like that in Peterboro'." Of course this is considered a "poser" to effectually "shut you up."

In the good old times, the "city fathers" of Cobourg were each supposed to carry a hammer and a few nails in their pockets, on purpose to replace any refractory plank in their sidewalks, but now it would appear it is only kid glo'ved gentry who aspire to Municipal honors.

Yours, &c.,
TRAVELLER.

Peterboro', Nov. 13th, 1862.

P. S.—Since writing the above, I have learned that application has been made to the Town Council of Cobourg to allow a Steeple Chase to take place along the west sidewalk of Division Street from the Harbour to the Grand Trunk crossing, I am of opinion that the ground has been selected by a thorough connoisseur in such matters.

For the Examiner.

The celebration of the memorable fifth of November was duly held in this place. The Brethren of 34 being satisfied that enjoyment comes from social meetings in a greater measure than from the sources employed in by-gone days, intimation was given at our last regular meeting that there would be a Pic-nic Tea Party on the above mentioned date, which came off well beyond expectation.

The ladies (God bless them) acted a noble part in the matter. With all their zest and good will they went at it and completed the table as if for

"Nobles, Dukes, an' a' that,"

The table groaned beneath its load of good things, and justice was shown to the viands. The Rev. Mr. Briden invoked the Divine blessing upon the affair.

This being past the Chairman took his

"Honored cushioned seat,
And meek for order called."

Mr. Wm. Sargeant spoke well, and impressed the importance of good feeling and love towards one another. He was followed by a few remarks from your humble servant. Mr. Jas. H. Dewart being called upon came forward and made a very eloquent speech on the beauties of the various degrees of the institution, which gave great satisfaction; he showed great tact in expressing himself on the matter. As a speaker he is very plain and pointed in his remarks, though—as he says—he is always bashful before ladies, but after all he proved quite a favourite on the occasion. Next was introduced to the meeting a gentleman of talent and ability in the person of Dr. Scott—who became a citizen with us, and we hope that he will gain the confidence of the community as a Medical man. So far the people seem overjoyed at the truth of his being one who can be depended upon. God speed to him.

Owing to urgent business P. M. Grover was absent from the jovial band. However a note was read by the Secretary of the managing Committee from that gentleman, expressing regret at not being able to be present.

Taking the thing all through, I am confident that the meeting was one of the best ever held in this place. All went home happy and contented, and

"Each went happy on his way,
Resolved to meet another day."

Terrible Shipwreck.

SEVENTEEN LIVES LOST.

On Sunday night last, as the propeller "Howard" was on her way from Dunnville to Buffalo, having in tow six scows, when near Point Abino (Lake Erie,) a furious gale sprung up, breaking all the scows loose from the propeller, and totally wrecking them, whereby seventeen persons lost their lives. The scows lost were:—The "Canadian," owned by R. Farmer, Esq., of York, and loaded with lumber for R. McKinnon, Esq., of Caledonia. Mr. Farmer's brother was on board and was the only one saved. He was drifted ashore on the lumber, which now lies beached, and most of which will be saved by the owner. Matthew Clifford, of York, John Kirkwood, of Seneca, and a boy from Brantford, were drowned off this boat. The body of Clifford passed through this village for York on Monday morning. The "Sarah Ann," owned by L. McCollum, Esq., of Stormocas, loaded with grain; all hands lost. The "Chief," owned by L. McCollum, loaded with lumber and cordwood; all hands saved. The "Empire," owned by T. H. Leonard, Esq., Brantford, loaded with grain; Captain Hood drowned, as well as all hands but one man. The "Marshal Ney," owned in Dunnville, and loaded with cordwood; all hands lost. The "Otter Branch," owned by Mr Oldfield, of Dunnville, loaded with lumber; all hands saved. There were three brothers named Lattimore, from Marshville, on Mr. McCollum's scows, two of whom were drowned. This is one of the most deplorable disasters which has ever happened in this section, and no human power could have averted it. The gale sprung up so quickly and was so fierce that nothing could withstand it. After all the scows had been broken away from the tug, the Captain again hitched on to the "Canadian," the best scow of the lot, and towed her until he tore the entire bow out of her, when, of course, she drifted off. In fact, so furious was the gale, that the Captain of the tug had to lash himself to the wheel, as the wheel-house was washed overboard; and had the "Canadian" held together half an hour longer he would have weathered Point Abino and been safe. When the dock hand of the "Canadian" floated off, young Farmer stuck to it and advised his companions to do the same, but they preferred to stand by the boat, and consequently lost their lives. The boats will probably be a total loss, but the most of the lumber will be saved. We trust we shall never be called upon to record so melancholy an occurrence in this section again.—Grand River Sachem.

A Terrible Murder in Kemptville.

(From the Kemptville Observer.)

On last Tuesday afternoon, whilst Mr. J. K. Read was on his way from Burritt's Rapids, and within about four miles of this village, he found a man lying on the side of the road, with his throat cut in a fearful manner, and to all appearances dead. Mr. Read stopped his horses and after some considerable difficulty was enable to lift the unfortunate man into his wagon, and then drove as quick as possible to Kemptville, in order to obtain medical aid. On arriving in this village Dr. Spartham, was immediately sent for as dressed the man's wounds, which proved to be almost fatal. Although after the wounds were dressed he was enabled to give a description of the man who committed the deed.

It appears that the unfortunate man whose name is Daniel McCullough, had left his residence on the morning above stated, and had proceeded to Burritt's Rapids in order to obtain some money which was due him there, and whilst in Mr. Read's hotel, he was asked by a person by the name of Ward if he would give him a ride to the village, as he would like to go down; to which McCullough replied he would, and after taking a few glasses of liquor, they started, and nothing seemed to have transpired until within a few miles of this village, when Ward stopped the horse and took out a knife demanded of McCullough to deliver up his money and at the same time say ing that he made his living by murdering men, he seized McCullough by the coat, with one hand, and with the other he drew the knife several times across his throat making several fearful wounds; he then let go his hold, knocked him down, and commenced kicking him until he supposed the poor man to be dead; after that was accomplished, he jumped into the wagon, turned the horse, and drove furiously until he reached Merrickville, he then left the wagon, and harness in care of Mr. Crosier, and then proceeded on horseback to Easton's Corners, where he was arrested. As soon as it became known that the murderer was at liberty and trying to make good his escape, Messrs. Kernaham, Christie and Clothier, the three justices to whom the complaint was made, immediately telegraphed to the authorities of Prescott and Brockville, giving the description &c., of the accused, and also despatched Michael Keenan, our village constable, assisted by Joseph Davidson and James Walmsley, in the direction the murderer had taken. After the constable had reached Merrickville, they ascertained he had gone towards Easton's Corners, in which place he was arrested about nine o'clock the same evening, by Mr. Keenan, and brought to Kemptville, where he was examined before S. Christie, A. Clothier and H. Hurd, Esqrs, and committed to Brockville jail to await his trial. The prisoner is known by the name of James Ward, and has been in the Reformatory prison for a term. We understand he bears a poor character, is about 24 years of age, was born in Canada, his parents reside in the township of Kitley, and he professes the Roman Catholic religion. McCullough was visited yesterday by the Roman Catholic clergyman, and fears are entertained of his recovery.

LATEST FROM EUROPE.

Arrival of the "Scotia."

New York, Nov. 8.

The Scotia arrived at 9 o'clock. Lord Lyons is a passenger.

The Gladiator, at Liverpool from Bermuda, brought sundry reports as to the hostile intention of Commodore Wilkes. One statement going so far as to say that he had blockaded the port, and refused to withdraw his ships on the request of the Governor. He sent a boat to the Gladiator, and ordered the Captain to go on board his vessel, but the Captain refused, being at the time under the protection of a British man-of-war, which ran out her guns ready for action.

The Gladiator was allowed to proceed.

The matter attracts attention in England. It is said orders have been issued for the immediate reinforcement of the West India squadron. A cabinet council which had been summoned did not suit.

The Army and Navy Gazette informs us that Lord Lyons returns to Washington without any instructions for change of policy, except such as may be necessitated by contingencies.

The Herald hopes Lord Lyons takes out a message of some importance. It begs recognition and a representation, and thinks there is a possibility of armed intervention on the part of Europe. It thinks neutrality, on which the Government prides itself, the greatest cruelty to both parties.

The Daily News points out that the speeches of numerous members of Parliament indicate that Mr. Gladstone, has made few proselytes among intelligent members to the Confederacy. Mr. Gladstone, through his secretary, has issued still another explanation on his recent remarks. He holds himself responsible for what he said as to the formation of a Southern nation, but not responsible for inferences which have been drawn.

Numerous members of Parliament have been addressing public meetings; all refer to America but generally refrain from urging the recognition of the South.

Cobden addressed the Manchester Chamber of Commerce, in advocacy of the abolition of the commercial blockade, and to secure private property at sea.

Glass, Elliott & Co., write to Mr. Field very hopefully of the Atlantic cable, and offer to undertake the contract on the most liberal terms, and express the greatest faith in its accomplishment.

The gales have subsided. The total loss to shipping here been enormous. The gales also did great damage in France.

A duel had taken place between Mr. Dillon, Editor of Le Spectateur, and the Duke De Grammont Caderousse. The former was killed.

The Bourse fell at 71f. 50c.

Revolutions have broken out in western Greece. The revolted towns had organized a Provisional Government. Troops had been sent to the scene of the insurrection. Eastern Greece was tranquil.

Latest,

Liverpool, Oct. 25.—There is no important political news to say.

Prince Napoleon and the Princess Clotilde arrived at Southampton this morning, en route to London.

A despatch from Athens on the 24th says, the garrison at Pesitza has revolted and established a provisional government under the presidency of Boulegarris.

Disasters from the gale continues to be reported. The Black Eagle, from New York to Glasgow, was abandoned off Liverpool and the 1st and 2nd officers were drowned.

Virulent typhoid fever had broken out in Preston, traceable to the hardships and privations of the poor.

Business at Manchester was at a stand still.

Gladstone's speech created quite a panic. Many manufacturers stopped their mills altogether.

THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION.

The following are some extracts from Gen. Halleck's letter.

To Hon E. M. Stanton, Secretary of War.

WASHINGTON Oct. 28, HEADQUARTERS OF THE ARMY—In reply to the general interrogatories contained in your letter of yesterday, I have the honor to report on several occasions General McClellan has telegraphed me that his army was deficient in certain supplies. All these telegrams were immediately referred to heads of Bureaus, with orders to report. There has not been, so far as I could ascertain, any neglect or delay in any Department or Bureau in issuing all the supplies asked for by Gen. McClellan or by the officers of his staff. Delays have occasionally occurred in forwarding supplies by railroad depots or of a want of sufficient number of cars. Third.—Soon after the battle of Antietam Gen. McClellan was urged to give me information of his intended movements in order that if he moved between the enemy and Washington the reinforcements could be sent from this place.

On the 14th of October, finding that he proposed to operate from Harper's Ferry, I urged him to cross the river at once and give battle to the enemy, pointing out to him the disadvantages of delaying till the autumn rains had swollen the Potomac and impaired the roads.

On the 6th October he was peremptorily ordered to cross the Potomac and give battle to the enemy or drive them South. I said to him "your army must move now while the roads are in good condition." It will be observed that three weeks have el

GODEY'S LADY'S BOOK FOR 1863.

GREAT LITERARY & PICTORIAL YEAR!

THE PUBLISHER of Godey's Lady's Book, thankful to the public which has enabled him to publish a magazine for the last Thirty-Three years of a larger circulation than any in America, has made an arrangement with the most popular authoress in this country:

MARION HOWLAND,

AUTHORESS OF

"Alone," "Hidden Path," "Moss Side," "Nemesis," and "Marian."

Who will furnish a story for every number of the Lady's Book for 1863. This alone will place the Lady's Book in a literary point of view far ahead of any other magazine. Marion Howland writes for no other publication. Our other favourite writers will continue to furnish articles throughout the year.

THE BEST LADY'S MAGAZINE IN THE WORLD, AND THE CHEAPEST!!

THE LITERATURE,

Is of that kind that can be read aloud in the family circle, and the clergy in immense numbers are subscribers for the Book.

THE BEST LADY WRITERS

In America contribute to its pages, and we have some that write for no other magazine

THE MUSIC

Is all original, and would cost 25 cents (the price of the Book) in the music stores; but most of it is copyrighted, and cannot be obtained except in Godey.

OUR STEEL ENGRAVINGS.

All efforts to rival us in this department have ceased, and we now stand alone in this department, giving as we do, many more and infinitely better engravings than are published in any other work.

GODEY'S

Immense Double-Sheet Fashion Plates,

CONTAINING

FROM FIVE TO SEVEN FULL LENGTH COLOURED FASHIONS ON EACH PLATE—OTHER MAGAZINES ONLY GIVE TWO.

For ahead of any Fashions in Europe and America.

Godey's is the only work in the world that gives these immense plates, and they are such as to have excited the wonder of publishers and the public. The publication of these plates

COST $10,000

More than fashion Plates of the old style, and nothing but our wonderfully large circulation enables us to give them. Other magazines cannot afford them. We never spare money when the public can be benefitted.

These Fashions may be relied on. Dresses may be made after them, and the wearer will not subject herself to ridicule, as would be the case if she visited the large cities dressed after the style of the plates given in some of our so-called fashion magazines.

OUR WOOD ENGRAVINGS

Of which we give twice or three times as many as any other magazine, are often taken for steel. They are so far superior to any others.

IMITATIONS.

Beware of them. Remember that the Lady's Book is the original publication, and the cheapest. If you take Godey you want no other magazine. Everything that is useful or ornamental in a house is found in Godey.

DRAWING LESSONS.

No other magazine gives them and we have given enough to fill several large volumes.

OUR RECEIPTS

Are such as can be found nowhere else. Cooking, in all its variety—Confectionary—the Nursery—the Toilet—the Laundry—the Kitchen. Receipts upon all subjects are to be found in the pages of the Lady's Book. We originally started this department, and have possibly facilities for making it most perfect. This department alone is worth the price of the Book.

LADIES' WORK TABLE.

This departm at comprises engravings and descriptions of every article that a lady wears.

MODEL COTTAGES.

No other magazine has this department.

Poetry.

The Monk's Labour.

The Monk Austin, at close of day,
Wearied and worn looked he:
Then up the Abbot came and spake;
'My son! what aileth thee?

'Well may I weary look, I ween,
When the hours of day are run,
So sore my toil—without God's aid
My work were never done.

'Give ear, oh Father! while I tell
'Tis taska I have to do,
And how, with much recurring day,
My toil begins anew.

'Two Falcons fierce 'tis mine to tame—
Two wild Goshawks to train—
Two Horses to check—and mastery o'er
A doughty Dragon gain!

'Nor these alone: the Forest King
To bow unto my sway,
And tend a Sick Man; thus my strength
Is sorely taxed each day.'

Greatly wondering, spoke the Abbot;
'Strange the tale thou tellest me;
Well I wot that in these cloisters
Such like tasks can never be.

'Sorely have the words perplexed me;
Brother! sure thou art distraught;
What are these but idle fancies
'Gendered in a brain o'erwrought?'

'Save am I, and truth have spoken,
Though my words belief exceed:
Give me patience, and I straightway
Will the puzzling riddle read.

'The Falcons twain, mine eyes are they,
Which I must watch with care,
Least, dimmed by gazing on the earth,
They reach not higher air.

'The two Goshawks, they are my hands—
Those I to labour train,
My wants to satisfy, and bread
For my poor brethren gain.

'Fleet as two Hares my feet are fain
In pleasure's path to run;
Did I not check their wayward course,
My soul it were undone.

'No Dragon fiercer than my tongue;
I must its power subdue,
And teach it how to pray and praise,
And evil words eschew.

'The Lion is my heart that oft
Resists its Maker's sway—
Repenteth after evil, like
A wild beast after prey

'The Sick Man is my body frail;
All fretfully it cries
For many a thing that hurtful is,
Which wisely God denies.'

In wondering eye the Abbot heard
The holy Monk be blest,
'Thou workest for the Lord,' quoth he,
'And God shall give thee rest.'

Romantic Pursuit and Capture of Rao Sahib.

Nena Sahib, Bala Rao, and Rao Sahib, were all concerned in the atrocities of Cawnpore. Nena Sahib and Bala Rao superintended the massacres in persons; Rao Sahib, their nephew remained at Bithoor, the family residence, in charge of the mansion; but more than one cold blooded murder was perpetrated by his orders, and a body of fugitives from Futtyghur, intercepted by his troops, were forwarded by him to Cawnpore to share the fate of the other victims. After the restoration of our ascendancy it was, of course, the anxious desire of Government to capture these assassins. Rao Sahib has at last been captured into our hands, and consigned to the gallows. It appears that, after escaping from the advance of our troops, he joined Tantia Topee, the partisan who so long eluded our flying clumns and was only taken and hanged after two years' flight. After the dispersion of that chief's band he wandered about India in disguise, settling sometimes at one place of pilgrimage, and sometimes at another, till at length, about a year ago, he took up his abode at Chinernee, a small district in the territory of Jummoo, lying between the northern frontier of Penjaub and the rugged hills of Cashmere. In this remote and secluded spot he remained for twelve months unnoticed and unknown, till he was one day recognised by a Hindoo pilgrim, with whom he had formerly had some cause of quarrel. The pilgrim immediately betook himself to Sealkote, the nearest station in the Punjaub, and communicated the intelligence to Mr. Macnabb, acting deputy commissioner. That gentleman took his measures without an hours delay. Rao Sahib was on his guard day and night. His servants and followers watched for him; the arrival of a British officer in those parts would be instantly signalled, and at the first alarm the fugitive might plunge into a country through which it would be hopeless to follow him. It was necessary therefore, that Mr. Macnabb should succeed in getting to Chinernee, but only in person, but with such an escort as might be required for effecting the arrest, and yet excite no suspicion of his approach on his purpose. Such a problem was no easy one, nor was it facilitated by the circumstances that Mr. Macnabb himself was ill at the time as to be unable either to walk or ride. From Jummoo to Chinernee is a distance of forty-five miles, through passes and over precipices of the wildest character, and seldom travelled over by Europeans. The following scheme was adopted:—A Tehsilder, or revenue agent of the Maharajah's, stationed a little beyond Chinernee, either was or could be naturally a defaulter in his accounts, and the Maharajah, therefore, was to despatch a trusty secretary for the ostensible purpose of superseding him. That the secretary proceeding on such an errand should take an escort was not unreasonable, and this pretext provided for an escort of fifty soldiers. Finally, as the case appeared might wish for his wife's company at the scene of his duties, a litter was provided for the conveyance of the lady, and this character and conveyance Mr. Macnabb appropriated to himself. He sent back the generality of sending his own litter back to Sealkote with a little public demonstration, in order that he might be thought to have returned to his station, and at the same time that his return might not by any chance be the with the expedition to Chinernee. This done, the little party started; the secretary at the head of his soldiers, and the British officer representing the secretary's wife in the closed litter. Ninety hours of fatigue and peril hardly sufficed to bring the party to Chinernee, when the original informer, who had been taken into the expedition, was sent forward, accompanied by a trusty messenger, to see if the prize was still safe. The messenger presently returned, with the intelligence that the informer had found Rao Sahib, and had taken a seat by his side. The soldiers therefore marched on, and presently a cry of success roused Mr. Macnabb from his litter, to the astonishment not only of the villagers, but of the troops themselves, who had been kept in perfect ignorance of his presence. Rao Sahib could offer no resistance, and made but little defence. He confessed at once, surrendered himself with about £4,000 worth of jewels, which he still retained, and, after being duly tried, was hanged on the 21st of August at the scene of his crimes.

Story of a Blind Soldier.

A correspondent of the Boston Transcript, writing from the hospitals at Alexandria, relates the following anecdote:

Joe enlisted in the 1st Maryland regiment, and was plainly a "rough," originally. As we passed along the hall we first saw him, crouched near an open window, lustily singing. "I'm a bold soldier boy," and observing the broad bandage over his eyes, I said. "What's your name, my good fellow?"

"Joe sir," he answered," Joe parsons."

"And what is the matter with you?"

"Blind, sir.—blind as a bat."

"In battle?"

"Yes—at Antietam. Both eyes shot out at one clip."

Poor Joe was in the front, at Antietam creek; and a minie ball had passed directly through his eyes, across his face, destroying his sight forever.—He was but twenty years old; but he was as happy as a lark!

"It is dreadful," I said.

"I'm very thankful I'm alive, sir. It might ha' been worse, yer see," he continued. And he told us his story.

"I was hit," he said, "and it knocked me down. I lay there all night, and next day the fight was renewed. I could stand the pain, yer see, but the balls was flyin' all round, and I wanted to get away. I couldn't see nothin' though. So I waited, and listened; and at last I heard a feller groanin' beyond me. 'Hello!' says I. 'Hello, yourself,' says he. 'Who be yer?' says I—'a rebel? You're a Yankee,' says he. So I am,' says I; 'Whats the matter with you?' 'My leg's smashed,' says he. 'Can't yer walk?' 'No,' 'Can't yer see?' 'Yes,' 'Well' says I, 'you're a d—d rebel, but, will you do me a little favour?' 'I will,' says he, 'if I kee.' 'Thee I says'. 'Well, ole butternut, I can't see nothing. My eyes is knocked out; but I can walk. Come over yere. Let's get out o' this. You p'int the way, an' I'll tote yer off the field, on my back.' 'Bully for you!' says he. 'And so we managed to get together. We shook hands on it. I took a wink outer his canteen, and he got on my shoulders. I did the walkin' for both, an' he did the navigatin.' An' of he did'nt make me carry him straight into a rebel colonel's tent, smiley away, I'm a liar! How'ever, the colonel came up, an' says he. 'What d'yer come from? who be yer? I told him. He said I was done for, and couldn't do no more shootin'; and he sent me over to our lines. So, after three days, I came down here with the wounded boys, where we're doin' pretty well, all things considered."

"But you will never see the light again my poor fellow," I suggested sympathetically.

"That's so," he answered, glibly; but I can't help it, you notice. I did my duty—got shot pop in the eye—an' that's my misfort'n not my fault,—as the ole man said of his Blind hoss. But—he continued, cheerily renewing his song; and we left him in his singular merriment. Poor, sightless, unlucky, but stout hearted Joe Parsons.

I'm a bold soldier boy."

A Minister's Story of a Pig.

Rev. J. G. Wood, in his "Animal Traits and Characteristics," thus glorifies one:

"A curious animal is a pig, sentient! Very cunning, too—a great deal more sensible than people give them credit for. I had a pig aboard my ship that was too knowing by half. All hands were fond of him, and there was no one on board, that would have seen him injured. There was a dog on board, too, and the pig and he were capital friends; they ate out of the same plate, walked about the decks together, and would lie down side by side under the bulwarks in the sun. The only thing they ever quarrelled about was lodging. The dog, you see sir, had got a kennel for himself—the pig had nothing of the sort. We did not think he needed one; but he had notions upon that matter. Why should Toby be better housed of a night than he? Well, sir, he had somehow got into his head that possession is one parts of the law; and though Toby tried to show him the rights of the question, he was so pig-headed that he either would not or could not understand. So every night it came to be 'catch as catch can.' If the dog got in first, he would show his teeth, and the other had to lie under the boat, or to find the softest plank where he could; if the pig was found in possession, the dog could not turn him out but looked out for refuge next time. One evening, gentlemen, it had been blowing hard all day, and I had just ordered close-reefed top-sails, for the gale was increasing, and there was a good deal of sea rolling, and hove-to, waiting to veer; in short, I was in expectation of I called down the companion ladder for the boy to bring up my pea-jacket. 'He's now going to have a dirty night. The pig was sleeping and heeding about the deck, for the ship lay over so much with the breeze, being close hauled, that he could not keep his berth for the night, though it wanted a good bit of dark. But to get behind! Toby had been of the same mind, and there he was safely in, and 'Umph, umph!' says piggy, as he turned and looked up at the black sky to the windward; but Toby did not offer to move. At last the pig seemed to give it up, and took a turn or two, as if he was making up his mind which was the warmest corner. Presently in trudged off to the bar compass, where the tea pluts was lying that they ate their cold tatoes off. Pig hikes up the plate in his mouth, and carries it to a part of the deck where the dog could see it, but came way from the hencoop; then turning his tail towards the dog, in disgust to ask us if he was eating out of the plate, grubbing it up, and munching with his mouth pretty loud. "What!" thinks Toby, "has piggy got victuals there?" and he pricking up his ears and looked toward the place, making a little whimpering. "Cheep, cheep, I" grins the pig, taking out the least morsel of the dog, and down goes his mouth to the plate again. Toby couldn't stand that any longer; victuals, and he not there! Out he runs, and comes up in front of the pig, with his mouth watering, and pushes his cold nose into the empty plate. Like a shot, gentlemen, the pig turned tail, and was away in the trunnel before Toby will knew whether there was any meat or not in the plate."

A Negro's Marriage.

The following is a form of marriage which took place between two negroes, with a minister, at Live Creek, Georgia, and is the form generally used there: "Is there to a couple who have walked out to-night, saying all them that have anything to show, come forward and speak now; if not, let them hold their peace now and for ever more. I wants every ear to hear, and every heart to enjoy." "Mr. Jim Thompson, whosoever stands fastly by your left side, do you take her for your dearly beloved wife, to wait on her through health, safe and be safe, holy and be holy, loving God be loving? Do you love her father, mother, brothers, sisters, uncles, aintys, and God best?" Answer,—"I will I" "Miss Mary Jackson, whosoever stands fastly by your right side, do you take to be your dearly beloved husband, to wait on him through health and through confusion, safe and be safe, holy and be holy? Do you love his mother, father, sister, brothers, and God the best?" Answer,—"I will I" "I shall pronounce Mr. Jim to hold Miss Mary fast by the right hand, and shall pronounce you to be man and wife by the commandments of God. We shall hopes and trusting through God that you may live right, now and for evermore. Now Mr. Jim slew your bride." Let us sing a hime—

A Father attempts to Murder his Son.

Thos. Reynolds, a farmer residing at the township of Blanshard on Friday last attempted to Murder his son, Mark, aged about ten years. It appears that while the family was seated at dinner a noise at the stable attracted attention. Reynold's went out to ascertain the cause, and found the foot of one of his horses had broken through and became fastened in the floor of the stable. He called for an axe which his son brought to him and without the slightest provocation on the part of the boy, inflicted a terrible blow upon the youth's head, knocking him senseless on the floor, in which con ition he lay for some twenty-four hours. The father then went into the house and requested his wife to look after Mark, whom he said was lying dead in the stable. He appeared to be indifferent or unconscious at first to what had happened; but upon realizing all he manifested the most poignant grief and frequently said he richly deserved to be hanged. In explaining his unnatural act, he said that when his son handed him the axe he felt an oppressiveness about the brain, and was compelled irresistably to the performance of the act which he afterwards so much regretted. Reynolds, when he learned afterward that the constable intended to arrest him, endeavored to escape, but was seized and taken to St. Mary's where he was examined before the magistrates. He freely confessed his crime before one of them, and appeared to be fully conscious of its enormity. He is represented to be naturally kind and affectionate towards his family, but his conduct, especially within the last month, has been such as to leave scarcely any doubt that he is subject to severe attacks of a brain disorder which caused temporary insanity. He seemed to have been conscious of this himself as he is reported to have told one of his neighbors he feared he would do harm to somebody when these attacks came upon him. The magistrates considered it their duty to commit him to Stratford jail to take his trial at the next Assizes. The boy still lingers, but very little hope is entertained of his recovery. Several pieces of the skull have been extracted from his wound.

—The rebels are arming the negroes. It is said 8,000 blacks collected by white men, have been sent to garrison fortifications.

THURSDAY NOVEMBER 20, 1862.

The Total destruction of the Rossin House, Toronto.

One of the most calamitous fires it has ever fallen to our lot to record, occurred on Friday last, by which the splendid block of buildings known as the "Rossin House", Toronto, has been destroyed.

The fire was first discovered by a Railway Conductor, at about half-past two in the morning, who was waiting at the time in the Hotel.

It originated in a cellar under one of the wings where charcoal was kept and it was some hours before the fire seized on the main building. Mr. Marcus Rossin, one of the proprietors of the building was present, and did all he could to induce the fire men to operate with the engine where he pointed out. He offered them $5000 if they would do so as desired. He was anxious for them only to go where he was willing to go himself. He subsequently offered about a dozen of them $1000 each if they would act upon his advice, and save the building, but they declined. Mr. R. is strongly of the opinion that had the firemen obeyed his instructions the main building would have been saved. As it is this magnificent pile is now a charred ruin. A week ago the Rossin House stood a proud monument of private enterprise, an ornament to the city, and a useful and magnificent resting place to the traveller—now it is no more. Blackened walls like spectres stand up seemingly to mark its former boasted greatness.

The loss to the owners is great, said to be from $180,000 to $200,000, less $79,000 insurance. A short time previously the insurance on the building had been reduced from $120,000 to $60,000. A public meeting has been held expressing sympathy and devising means to secure the erection of the building. We are pained to learn that a young man, named Graham, a Sergeant in a Rifle Company, met his death at the fire, the only life we believe supposed to be lost, notwithstanding over $300 were in the building at the time.

THE CORNWALL SCHOOL CASE AGAIN.

The majority of the School Trustees who refused to receive the resignation of the appointed School Teacher, have addressed a letter to the Globe, giving, at the invitation of that journal, a statement of the case to justify their act in retaining a man as Teacher who had been convicted and fined for the crime of seduction.

In their statement they put the matter in a different light than it appeared before, and at first sight, from the explanations given, it would seem that they were justified in the course they pursued. Still we are of opinion that had they accepted the resignation of Mr. Hay, under the circumstances they would have been justified in so doing, and such a step would have relieved them from the odium under which they now lie. At a distance it is impossible to know the exact state of the case. We gather our information from published statements, but we find in these discrepencies difficult to reconcile. We shall notice some of these. The Trustees say that Mr. Hay, as well as themselves, were the victims of the slander in the Cornwall Freeholder merely because they were not of the same party with its conductor. That after it became known through the Town that Mr. Hay had been charged as the father of the child, Mr. Oliver, the conductor of the Freeholder, placed his daughter under the instruction of Mr. Hay; that the parents and guardians of all the pupils, save Mr. Oliver, petitioned the Board to retain Mr. Hay as Teacher of the School, believing him to be innocent of the charge, which the Trustees also believed, and that the Trustees considered it wrong to accept his resignation and so they retained him. Here we observe a strange statement: that the conductor of the Freeholder, placed his daughter under the teaching of a man charged with so grave an offence. He certainly did right, however, to remove her on the condition of the verdict. The Trustees say that every parent and guardian, with Mr. Oliver, petitioned the Board to retain Mr. Hay. On the other hand the Freeholder says "there is no doubt of Mr. Hay's guilt," and that "the 34 parents who signed the petition form a small minority of the parents and rate-payers of the Town. The whole thing was a dodge, and a most disgraceful one."

The Globe in meeting the silly arguments put forth by the Freeman and True Witness, and commenting on the case observes "And even supposing him to be innocent, with such a verdict recorded against him it would seem that his usefulness as a Teacher in that locality must be at an end. The Board of Trustees could only be justified by reasons of a most extraordinary character in retaining him in his position in the face of such a verdict." Such reasons we do not think the Trustees have given. It would require a man to be made the tool of designing, unprincipled parties—and innocent men have had to suffer—but, how Mr. Hay accepted the offer of the Judge in applying for a new trial! His own good sense prompted him to send his resignation after having had the opportunity of viewing the jury, and knowing that resignation was the only course to pursue, during the trial he had to undergo. There was no personal [illegible] so his Honor in saying that the individual convicted is a seducer, and as such should be driven from the post of a Teacher of youth.

ST. ANDREW'S SOCIETY.

The fourth annual meeting of the St. Andrew's Society, was held at the American Hotel, on Wednesday the 12th November, inst. On account of the meeting being so thinly attended, it was adjourned until last Friday evening, when there was a good attendance. D. Sutherland Esq., President of the Society occupied the chair.

The officers for the ensuing year are as follows:—

Mr. W. A. Scott, President, Mr. Alex. Smith, 1st vice President, Mr. Lewis McGregor, 2nd vice President, Mr. John Thomson, 3rd vice President, Mr. W. Arnott, Treasurer, Mr. Charles Cameron, Secretary, standing committee for the Town of Peterboro, are as follows:—D. Sutherland, Esq., Messrs. M. McKellar, R. H. Scott, Geo. Rose, John McGregor, Charles Scott, Dan. Mcdonald, Jr., R. D. Ewing and James Johnston.

Messrs James Jack, Andrew Miller and M. Sanderson, are the Committee for the County.

The Chair was vacated by the ex-president and filled by the newly appointed President when a vote of thanks was tendered to the ex-President for the able manner in which he presided over the Society for the past year.

There will be a meeting on next Wednesday evening, to receive the financial statement of the Society for the past year.

The Temperance Lecture.

Mr. Moffat lectured on Tuesday evening in the Town Hall, to a very good assembly, and although laboring under severe indisposition, his lecture was so well received that he was prevailed upon to give a second lecture, which comes off to-night.

Mr. Moffat is a good lecturer, has a ready and good command of language to express his ideas, an inexhaustable fund of anecdote and repartee, and goes right into his subject without any circumlocution.

His long connection with Temperance, and the love he has for the cause, enable him to meet every objection, and to present his subject under every phase. The allusion on Tuesday night to the case of the young man who supposed he had perfect self control, and the supposed soliloquy over a glass of wine was well delivered, and gave great satisfaction.

He is without doubt the best Temperance Lecturer that has ever visited Peterborough, and is in the common use of the term, an orator. We have never heard Gough, but we should suppose from hearsay that Mr. Moffat approaches to him in description and denunciation, but for an orator we consider that he has not studied the rules of elocution sufficiently, having fallen into that common error in public speakers of vociferation, at one time, and its opposite at another. We are of opinion that no human lungs can with impunity sustain such frequent and fearful drafts upon them as were made upon his on Tuesday night. Nor do we think that such loud speaking is at all useful or pleasing to a audience. A certain raising of the voice or lowering it, to express the passions and emotions of the speaker, or the characters he may describe, is quite allowable—is in accordance with good delivery, but such fearfully loud speaking destroys the association of oratory.

Such an ill judged and nowise habit of loud speaking often impairs health, and lays up a man long before old age comes upon him. A distinguished professional man has said "a martyr to vociferation merits not our sympathy."

We however invite all our citizens, drinkers and temperance men to turn out to-night and hear Mr. Moffat. Our word for it, if they do they cannot but be pleased. They will hear much that is new and more that is useful.

PETERBORO' RELIEF SOCIETY.

A number of the Ladies of Peterboro' anticipating that a larger amount of distress than usual will occur among their poorer neighbours during the approaching winter, in consequence of the stagnation caused by the War now raging on the other side the frontier, have resolved to organize a Society for the purpose of affording assistance in clothing, in fuel, and in food to such as are unable to procure those necessaries themselves.

The Society will be of a purely charitable nature, neither the religion nor the politics of those who apply for relief will be so much as inquired into, the only two facts essential to be proved to the satisfaction of the Committee by the applicants will be respectability and destitution.

A Meeting of Ladies willing to aid in the benevolent object above alluded to will be held in Colonel Hamlin's Office, in the Post Office block, on Wednesday next, the 26th instant, at 3 o'clock p. m.

It is earnestly hoped that the Meeting will be well attended.

Dr. Cameron, the Oculist and Aurist, is still in Town, at Huffman's Hotel, and will be found there until Saturday next; any person suffering from diseases of the Eye or Ear, should not lose this opportunity of visiting the Dr.

GODEY'S LADY'S BOOK
FOR 1863.

GREAT LITERARY & PICTORIAL YEAR!

THE PUBLISHER of Godey's Lady's Book, thankful to the public which has enabled him to publish a magazine for the last thirty-three years of a larger circulation than any in America, has made an arrangement with the most popular authoress in this country:

MARION HOWLAND,

AUTHORESS OF

"Alone," "Hidden Path," "Moss Side," "Nemesis," and "Marian."

Who will furnish a story for every number of the Lady's Book for 1863. This alone will place the Lady's Book in a literary point of view far ahead of any other magazine. Marion Howland writes for no other publication. Our other favourite writers will continue to furnish articles throughout the year.

THE BEST LADY'S MAGAZINE IN THE WORLD, AND THE CHEAPEST!!

THE LITERATURE.

Is of that kind that can be read aloud in the family circle, and the clergy in immense numbers are subscribers for the Book.

THE BEST LADY WRITERS

In America contribute to its pages, and we have some that write for no other magazine.

THE MUSIC

Is all original, and would cost 25 cents (the price of the Book) in the music stores; but most of it is copyrighted, and cannot be obtained except in Godey.

OUR STEEL ENGRAVINGS.

All efforts to rival us in this department have ceased, and we now stand alone in this department, giving as we do, many more and infinitely better engravings than are published in any other work

GODEY'S

Immense Double-Sheet Fashion Plates,

CONTAINING

FROM FIVE TO SEVEN FULL LENGTH COLOURED FASHIONS ON EACH PLATE—OTHER MAGAZINES ONLY GIVE TWO.

Far ahead of any Fashions in Europe and America.

Godey's is the only work in the world that gives these immense plates, and they are such as to have excited the wonder of publishers and the public. The publication of these plates

COST $10,000

More than fashion Plates of the old style, and nothing but our wonderfully large circulation enables us to give them. Other magazines cannot afford them. We never spare money when the public can be benefitted.

These Fashions may be relied on. Dresses may be made after them, and the wearer will not subject herself to ridicule, as would be the case if she visited the large cities dressed after the style of the plates given in some of our so-called fashion magazin

OUR WOOD ENGRAVINGS

Of which we give twice or three times as many as any other magazine, are often taken for steel. They are so far superior to any others.

IMITATIONS.

Beware of them. Remember that the Lady's Book is the original publication, and the cheapest. If you take Godey you want no other magazine. Everything that is useful or ornamental in a house is found in Godey.

DRAWING LESSONS.

No other magazine gives them and we have given enough to fill several large volumes.

OUR RECEIPTS

Are such as can be found nowhere else. Cooking, in all its variety—Confectionary—the Nursery—the Toilet—the Laundry—the Kitchen. Receipts upon all subjects are to be found in the pages of the Lady's Book. We originally started this department, and have peculiar facilities for making it most perfect. This department alone is worth the price of the Book.

LADIES' WORK TABLE.

This department comprises engravings and descriptions of every article that a lady wears.

MODEL COTTAGES.

No other magazine has this department.

TERMS: To subscribers in the British Provinces.

One copy one year, $3. Two copies one year $5. Three copies one year, $6. Five copies one year, and an extra copy to the person sending the club, making six copies, $11.25.

At these prices subscribers in the Provinces will have no American postage to pay.

Special Clubbing with other Magazines.

Godey's Lady's Book and Arthur's Home Magazine, both one year, for $3.50.

Godey's Lady's Book and Harper's Magazine, both one year, for $4.50.

Godey, Harper, and Arthur will all be sent one year, on receipt of $6.

Treasury Notes, and notes of all solvent banks taken at par.

Be careful and pay the postage on your letter.

FINKLE & LYON
SEWING MACHINE COMPANY,
536 Broadway, New York.

TO parties little acquainted with the Finkle & Lyon Sewing Machines the careful perusal of the Company's Circular is specially commended. This circular can be had on application. It is very specific, and will be found highly instructive, having been prepared with much care and we will abide by all statements therein made.

The following brief quotation is characteristic of the entire Circular:

"This Machine is better adapted than any other Sewing Machine in market to the frequent changes and almost endless variety of sewing required in a family; for it will sew from one to twenty thicknesses of Marseilles without stopping, and make every stitch perfect. Will sew from the finest gauze to the heaviest cloth, and even the smoothest harness leather, without changing the feed needle or tension, or making any adjustment of machine whatever."

Thus have we successfully overcome the most difficult point in the Sewing Machine art. It was no ordinary triumph. Defiantly can we now say, "No other Machine compares with it in this respect." Hence, have we uniformly—almost without exception—taken the highest premiums, wherever the Machine has been properly exhibited in competition with other first class Sewing Machines. Hence it is that we are able to offer the following guarantee, viz.: "We warrant every Machine we sell to give better satisfaction than any other Sewing Machine in the market, or money refunded." We never sell a Machine on any other terms. The guarantee is as reliable as the note of any business man in the land. For proof that the foregoing we refer upon such facts as the reputation of our Machine; and without a single travelling agent in the field, there is scarcely a neighborhood on the continent where the Machine is not favourably known. We prefer such a reputation to one based on mere "talking points," as they are technically called in the trade. Hence we make but one kind of stitch, viz., the lock-stitch, alike on both sides, requiring only one thread of equal length and size to thread.

N.B.—Local Agents wanted in every county throughout the West. ☞ Special inducements offered.

ANNUAL MEETING

INVESTIGATION REPORT - - - DECLARATION OF BONUS.

THE thirty-sixth annual Meeting of this Company was held within the Royal Hotel, Aberdeen Friday, the 18th April

Alexander Stronach, Esq., of Drumallan, Chairman of the Ordinary Directors, in the Chair. There were entrusted to the meeting—

1.—Report by the Directors, which, on the motion of the Chairman, was cordially and unanimously approved of and adopted.

2.—The Balance Sheet for the past year, with detailed states relative thereto, duly certified as correct, in terms of the Act of Incorporation, by the Chairman and Manager, and also by the Auditor.

There was also laid on the Table the various Valuation States in connection with the Quinquennial Investigation into the state of the Company's affairs, up to 31st January, 1862.

The following particulars derived from the Balance Sheet and States before-mentioned, show the result of the operations of the Company for the past year:—

Amount proposed for Life Assurances during the year, contained in 1139 Proposal	£454,836 0 0
Amount of Proposals accepted, and for which 961 Policies were issued	350,980 0 0
ANNUAL PREMIUMS or said Policies	11,179 1 0
CLAIMS BY DEATH including BONUSES on PARTICIPATION POLICIES, and after deducting Re-assurances recovered from other Offices under guarantees	21,890 1 0
TOTAL SUM Assured under 4,736 current LIFE POLICIES	1,956,96 0 0
TOTAL ACCUMULATED FUNDS	313,543 3 2
TOTAL ANNUAL REVENUE	94,756 4 4

With reference to the recent investigation into the state of the Company's affairs, as at 31st January last, the Report Stated that both the principles of valuation and the details thereof, had been submitted to Alfred John Downes, Esq., Actuary to the Economic Life Office in London, a gentleman well known as one of the highest authorities on such subjects in the kingdom, and had received his entire approval, as having been made on just and sound principles, and accurately carried out as certified in his report to the Directors, which formed part of the Appendix to their Report. This step the Directors considered could not fail to give the utmost confidence—both to the shareholders and the Policyholders—in the soundness and correctness of the valuation.

During the Quinquennial period, the claims by death, including the bonus additions which had been paid, and which had been considerably under the number that might have been expected from the Mortality Tables on which the Office tracts are based, amounting to £93,215 6s 5d.

In valuing the Policies, each had been separately calculated, and nett premiums had only been used, thus leaving a margin of annual revenue of £11,427 10s 7d., to meet future expenses and to form a source of profit for next investigation. The total amount of claims by death paid since the commencement of the Company, was £217,821 0s.

The Securities held by the Company were in a satisfactory position, and had been recently carefully scrutinized in detail by the Directors.

In conclusion, the Directors congratulated both the Proprietors and the Assured on the high position which the Company now occupied in the estimation of the public, and on the encouraging prospect of its business operations for the future.

DECLARATION OF BONUS.

From the profits realised on the Life business, a retrospective Bonus of £1 7s 6d per cent per annum for the Quinquennial period was declared, on the sums originally assured under all Participating Policies, increased by the previous additions thereto; also a further prospective Bonus of £1 per cent per annum, on the amount of the Policies with said Bonuses, on all such of said Policies as may become claims by death previously to the 31st January, 1867.

It will be observed, that this sum of Bonus is equivalent in the case of our older Policies to £1 5s per cent per annum on the original sum assured; that the total additions to the sum assured, now vested, are equal to 33 per cent on the sum assured; and that as the younger ages the additions amount to upwards of 45 per cent of the premiums paid.

Statement showing the Progress of the Company's Business during the Quinquennial Period, ending 31st January, 1862:

Year ending 31st January.	Amounts proposed for Assurance.	Amount of New Policies issued.	No. of Policies issued.	New Annual Premiums.	Total Revenue in each year.	Accumulated Funds.

FIRE INSURANCE.

THE following table compiled from the official returns, exhibits, at a glance, the increase of duty paid to the Government by the different Insurance Offices, metropolitan and provincial, during the year 1861.

THE "ROYAL"

It will be seen, stands as before, at the very head of the list, and maintains a rate of progress very far in advance of all its rivals and competitors. Twelve months ago, we had the gratification of recording the fact that by increase, in the year 1860, had been more than double that of any other company—had exceeded 30 per cent, of the entire increase of all the London offices combined—and had, also exceeded 36 per cent, of the aggregate increase of the remaining twenty eight provincial offices. We have now t' e pleasure of inviting the attention of our readers to the testimony of these later returns, which show that in the year 1861, the increase of the "Royal" was very nearly sixty per cent, in excess of the increase of any other company—that there were but three offices which gave even within 50 per cent. of it, and that it was actually more than one-sixth of the entire increase of the remaining forty-four offices, London and Provincial put together. Comment upon such facts as these would be superfluous. They prove, unmistakeably, the confirmed advance of the "Royal" in the confidence and good opinion of the public. That advance has been, from the beginning, as remarkable as it has been rapid; and we cordially congratulate the directors and shareholders upon it, because we regard it as the just reward of prudent management, of liberal and honorable dealing, and of undoubted stability.

Pat's welcome to the Langtry Hunter.

Come, I'm sick of the stable, Molly dear,
And stargin' an long and so low,
And it's little sorrow it gives me
To give the cold bother the go,
And when another harvest comes,
By the Powers! I'll like to see
The scenery, or anything else, that 'ud make
A raspin' machine of me!

I've raped in the North and the South country,
And I've raped in the Lothians three,
And I've crossed the Irish Sea so oft
That they give it its name from me:
I've raped your wheat and your barley,
And poor oats and your beans, sez Pat,
But as for profit—it's sorra the rapin'
That ever I raped of that!

So good luck to yez, Misther McCormack,
And your Riverence, Misther Bell,
And good luck to yez, Misther Samuelson—
I wish your Honor well.
The Shearer's footin' in the field
Ye've fairly cut away,
But it's not been worth the standin' on,
Bedad, this many a day.

And now the horse takes the harvest in hand,
And pulls the huge machines
That go snicking and clicking across the fields
Of wheat, oats, barley and beans.
Machines for sowin' and thrashin,'
And rapin,' between and betwixt—
In troth it's my private opinion they'll have
A machine for eatin' it next!

Then we'll throw the sickle aside, Molly,
And go and try our luck
On the banks of the far Australian streams,
Where the otter has bills like a duck;
For there's mate and drink, and clothes, Molly,
And riches and rank to be won,
At the Anti——what d'ye call the place
On t'other side of the sun!

And there'll be no land agents,
Nor middle-men, nor Jows,
But ye'll see me stoning lumps of gould
At the thieving Kangaroos;
And we'll bid a long good-bye, Molly,
To a dale of bloody fun,
At the Anti——what d'ye call the place
At t'other side of the sun!

And no more masses to pay for!
Good day to you, Father O'Riadd,
The last confessor from me, faith,
And the very last penny ye've had;
It's little your Riverence leaves behind
The day ye pardon us—
As the prophet sez, ye purge our dross,
And take away all our tin!

Ye've a bandage on your wrist, Molly,
That wrist with gems I'll deck,
And a string of nuggets like mill-stones
I'll hang around your neck.
And we'll live in a state retirement,
Where our nearest neighbor, I'll be
The Emperor of China, who
Will sometimes jine us at tea.

Och, the world we're leavin', Molly,
Is a world of bitter care,
For even the pigs and praties are not
The angels that once they were;
But the world we're goin' to, Molly,
Is where the giants of auld
Buried, for want of a better bank,
Their stockin'-legs filled with gould.

It's a world of wonders, Molly,
A world without a peer!
And what it has, and what it wants,
We're nothing like it here.
But of all its wondrous things, Molly,
The strangest thing to me
Is that there the working man's the man
Gets first to the top of the tree.

Miscellaneous.

A Battle of Snakes.

One afternoon, having seated myself on a pleasant hillside so as to receive pure air and the genial rays of the sun, my attention was attracted by a slight movement in the grass a few feet below me. On looking for the cause I perceived two young snakes, one a green snake (coluber vernalis) of the usual size; the other a black one, about three feet in length, known as the coluber constrictor. They were a few feet apart, both creeping slowly along in the grass in the same direction, probably in quest of food. Anticipating what might be the result should the two species come in too close proximity, we carefully took our places so as not to disturb but perceive them closely. Suddenly the green snake came to a halt, and being on the up hill side was able to closely scan his adversary, the black, without being seen by him, and apparently to ask himself the serious question, What shall I do, run away or stand my ground? But presently moving a few inches forward in a straight line, he was seen to raise his head carefully above the short blades of grass as if to reconnoiter.—This attracted black's attention, who, on perceiving the green snake, rose immediately in a spiral form and advanced up the hill toward him. The other also was seen to rise a little, and to draw his body into a more dense form. The design was now evidently to menace and intimidate each other by displaying in quick succession their long, forked tongues, and gazing into each others eyes of fire. Those of the green were swollen, and seemed to change from a bright to a dull red color; while those of the other sparkled with rage, displaying less fear but more power.

While engaged in this way the black one seen to describe a tortuous, quivering motion with his tail, and gradually approach his opponent. Now they made several dashes at each other's eyes with the points of their jaws, each missing his aim. This to no purpose, they reared upon each other with open mouths, and soon enveloped each other in their bodily folds, apparently endeavoring to smash or strangle each other in the embrace. Failing to obtain such they now grappled, and next endeavored to pull each other in twain. The black coiling his neck around that of the other, slid a little down the hill, and trusted the weight of his body to his superior strength. But fortunately the poor green, who seemed by this time nearly exhausted, bethought himself to coil his tail firmly around a bramble, which happily stood in reach. Now came the tug of war, and the close-built of your auld-fashioned mahogany to its utmost tension. The black, seeing the advantage, coiled also his tail around some blades of grass, but these all were quickly broken. Failing in this attempt to conquer, the black raised himself nearly erect and pounced upon his victim with wide spread jaws, and bit him alternately from head to tail, at the same time covering his body with slime. The next move was to swallow him whole, which he did till he came to the green fellow's tail firmly tied around the little bush. There brought him to a dead halt, and finding a retreat necessary, he commenced to disgorge his enemy, which, by the way, he found to be no easy business. But accomplishing this, he was seen to stretch himself out at full length, as if inclined to rest and meditate some better plan of attack. Just here we interfered, and producing a small jar from our pocket, made him an easy prisoner, and he now forms one specimen in our collection.

The green snake was now, of course, supposed to be dead. But on examination to our surprise he was found still to be alive, firmly coiled to the bramble as at first. And before we left the spot he was seen gradually to uncoil himself from the little twig and slowly creep away out of sight, occasionally halting to listen or scan the ground closely, as if fearing that his adversary, the black, might again spring upon him.—*N. How Wolves Capture Wild Horses.

Whenever wolves associate together for mischief; there is always a numerous train of similar ones to follow in the rear, and act as auxiliaries in the work of destruction. Two large wolves are sufficient to destroy the most powerful horse, and seldom more than two ever begin the assault, although there may be a score in the gang. It is no less curious than amusing, to witness their ingenious mode of attack. If there is no snow, or but little on the ground, two wolves approach in the most playful manner, lying, rolling, and frisking about until the too credulous and unsuspecting victim is completely put off his guard by curiosity and familiarity. During this time, the gang, squatting, are looking on at a distance. After some time spent in this way, the two assailants, seperate, when one approaches the horse's head, and the other his tail, with a shyness and cunning peculiar to themselves. At this stage of the attack, their frolicksome approaches become very interesting; the former in a mere decoy, the latter in the real assailant, and keeps his eyes steadily fixed on the hamstrings or flank of the horse. The critical moment is then watched, and the attack is simultaneous: both wolves spring at their victim at the same instant—one to the throat, the other to the flank—and if successful, which they generally are, the hind one never lets go his hold till the horse is completely disabled. Instead of springing forward or kicking to disengage himself, the horse turns round and round, without attempting a defence. The wolf before then springs behind to assist the other. The sinews are then cut, and in half the time that I have been describing it the horse is on his side; his struggles are fruitless—the victory is won. By this signal, the lookers on close in at a gallop; the small fry of followers keep at a distance, until their superiors are gorged, and then they take their turn unmolested.

Lord Ellenborough's Wig.

Lord Ellenborough was once about to go on the circuit, when Lady Ellenborough said that she should like to accompany him. He replied that he had no objections, protested she did not encumber the carriage with bandboxes, which were bid utter abhorrence. They set off. During the first day's journey, Lord Ellenborough, happening to stretch his legs, stuck his foot against something below the seat. He discovered that it was a bandbox. His indignation is not to be described. Up went the window, and out went the bandbox. The coachman stopped; and the footman, thinking that the bandbox had tumbled out of the window by some extraordinary chance, was going to pick it up, when Lord Ellenborough furiously called out, "Drive on!" The bandbox accordingly was left by a ditch side. Having reached the county town where he was to officiate as judge, Lord Ellenborough proceeded to array himself for his appearance in the court house. "Now," said he "where's my wig—where is my wig?" "My lord," replied his attendant, "it was thrown out of the carriage window."

Supposed Abduction.

A laboring man, residing in Three Rivers, who arrived from that city in Montreal, on Thursday by the Quebec boat, apparently in great grief, made application to the Chief of Police for assistance in the discovery of his daughter, a girl between 14 and 15 years of age, whom he suspected to have been induced by false representations to come to Montreal. He said that on Wednesday himself and wife were out at work, leaving their daughter at home, and that on their return she was not to be found. He traced her to the market-boat Napoleon, accompanied by a woman who lives in Three Rivers, but whose daughters keep a house of ill-fame in St. Constant street, where they found the girl and the woman from Three Rivers. They arrived at two o'clock, but the young girl had not yet retired. The detective brought both to the police station, the girl weeping bitterly, and the woman loudly asserting that the girl knew what she had been brought to the city for. The Chief went with the parties to Mr. Justice Gaudet, who declared that the matter was not within the jurisdiction of the Court, the parties residing in Three Rivers. Constable [illegible] charge has been committed there. The girl was [illegible] 15 years, who at once recognized [illegible] as the woman in whose company she left home. The latter, in reference with the woman, that the girl had been rather indiscreet with young men trading between Three Rivers and Montreal, and now residing here, previous to the sale of his wood. This the latter denied, alleging that he suspected the wife had fixed matters with the detective agent in the removal of the girl. The matter will probably be the subject of legal investigation by the authorities of Three Rivers.

A Horrible Incident of the War.

[From the Pall Mall Gazette.]

When the rebels entered Palmyra, an old resident of the place, Andrew Allison by name, mysteriously disappeared, and it was supposed he was murdered. When General McNeil returned to Palmyra, after that event, and ascertained the circumstances under which Allison had been abducted, he resolved to be himself a victim than of the [illegible] can say not, perhaps wishing to show he would retaliate upon the rebel prisoners in his hands. The ten days elapsed and no tidings came of the man. The tenth day expired with last Friday. On that day ten rebel prisoners, selected by custody, were selected to pay with their lives, the penalty demanded. The names of the men so selected are as follows:—Willis Baker, Lewis county: Morgan Bates, Lewis county; John W. McChesters, Lewis county; Murdock Alexander, Wells county: Captain Thomas A. Snyder, Monroe county; Eleazer Lake, Scotland county: Hiram Smith, Knox county. These parties were informed on Friday evening that, unless Mr. Allison was returned to his family by noon o'clock this next day, they would all be shot at that hour. Most of them received the announcement with composure or indifference. The Rev. James S. Green, of this city, remained with them during the night, as their spiritual adviser, endeavoring to prepare them for their sudden entrance into the presence of their Maker. A little after 12 o'clock M., the next day, three Government waggons drove to the jail. One contained four, and each of the others three rough board coffins. The condemned men were conducted from the prison, and seated in the waggons—one upon each coffin. A sufficient guard of soldiers accompanied them, and the cavalcade started for the fatal ground. Proceeding east to Main street, the convoy turned and moved slowly southward as far as Malone's livery stable. Thence turning east it entered the Hannibal road, pursuing it to the residence of Colonel Josiah Culbertson. There throwing down the fences, they turned, northward, entering the New Grounds (half a mile east of the town) on the west side, and driving within the circular amphitheatrical ring, paused for the final consummation of the scene. The [illegible] coffins were removed from the wagons and placed on a row, six or eight feet apart, forming a line north and south about fifteen paces east of the central pagoda or music stand in the centre of the ring. Each coffin was placed upon the ground with its foot west and head east. Thirty soldiers of the 2nd M. S. M., were drawn up in a single line, extending north and south, facing the row of coffins. The line of executioners ran immediately at the east side of the pagoda—leaving a space between them and the coffins of twelve or thirteen paces. Reserves were drawn up in line upon either flank of these executioners. The arrangements completed, the doomed men knelt upon the grass between their coffins and the soldiers, while the Rev. Mr. Rhodes offered up a prayer. At the conclusion of this, each prisoner took his seat upon the foot of his coffin, facing the musketry which in a few minutes were to launch them into eternity. Two or three only showed signs of trepidation. The most elated of the lot was Captain Thos. A. Snyder, of Monroe county. He was now elegantly attired, in a suit of black broadcloth, with a white vest. A luxuriant growth of beautiful hair rolled down upon his shoulders. There was nothing especially worthy of note in the appearance of the others. Most of them, Willis Baker, of Lewis county, was known to be the man who last year shot and killed Ezekiel Pratte, his Union neighbor, near Williamstown, in that county. All the others were rebels of lesser note. A few minutes after one o'clock, Colonel Strachan, Provost Marshal General, and Major Mr. Rhoades shook hands with the prisoners. Two of them then accepted handkerchiefs—all the others refused. A hundred spectators had gathered around the amphitheatre to witness the impressive scene. The stillness of death pervaded the place. The officer in command now stepped forward and gave the word of command—"Ready; aim; fire!" The discharges, however, were not made simultaneously, probably through want of a perfect previous understanding of the orders and of the time at which to discharge. Two of the rebels fell backwards on their coffins and died instantly. Captain Snyder sprang forward, and fell with his head towards the soldiers, his face downward, his hands clasped upon his breast, and the entire leg drawn half way up. He did not relax a sinew, but died immediately. He had requested the soldiers to aim at his heart, and they obeyed but too faithfully. The other seven were not killed outright, and the executioners were called in, who dispatched them with their revolvers. The thirteen executioners were then placed in the coffins, the lids, upon which the name of each man was written, were screwed on, and the direful proceedings returned to town, by the same route that they pursued in going. Friends claimed and took seven corpses. There were buried in the military or the public cemetery. The [illegible] was left.

Mrs [illegible] was unable to be active, and to [illegible] never to happy as when [illegible] idle man that is the miserable man

THE INDEPENDENT PRESS.

The Leader in a recent article under the above caption takes the opportunity to blow its own trumpet, extol the daily journals, and deprecate the "organs of little cliques." Of course we who are included in the little category are of no account in the estimation of this giant, and any attempt to call in question any of its sayings, or to doubt the correctness of any of its statements, may expose us to its ire, if it should condescend so much as to notice us. Nevertheless, being fond almost to a fault of the freedom of the press, and at all hazards being resolved to use that freedom when we see fit, we shall notice the announcement of our contemporary.

In the first place it points to a fact that some journal by superior enterprise and skill manages to forestal its rivals by procuring intelligence in advance. That journal we are told is the Leader, and in consequence it is the favorite paper with the public, and as such arouses the envy of its rivals. Now if the Leader is deceiving itself by supposing it is ahead of its neighbor the Globe, either in advance of intelligence, or in favor with the public—circulation deciding the latter point—it cannot deceive the intelligent readers of both journals by such a statement. We have heard it scores of times, even by political opponents, that the Globe is before all other journals in the extent, priority and reliability of its intelligence, and we believe that the majority of business men all over the country read the Globe. As to circulation no candid man will credit the Leader with being in advance until it comes honestly out and tells its neighbour and gives the public the figures. Its scheme of bets, for charitable purposes, was a mere make-believe—a dodge to avoid giving the figures. We have no desire to disparage our contemporary, much less to join in "hounding it down," far from it, small fish do not usually devour large ones. We think it is astray in claiming the preeminence, and, however humiliating, it must yield that point to its rival the Globe. Its ability is not questioned, nor is its political character impugned. In Upper Canada we should rank it next to the Globe—not before.

We were pleased some time ago, when discussing the independence of the press, to find that the Leader had made the discovery that a journal could not be a supporter of a Government and at the same time remain independent. This same journal was go out and out supporter of the Coalition Government, and now that it dares not go into opposition to the present Government it feels that a daily paper cannot afford to support any Ministry—a convenient way to be neutral.

We hope our humble remarks if noticed by our contemporary will not be attributed to anything like retaliation for the hard things it has seen fit to say about "small party organs." Far from it, our dream is written by our fortunate composer "we must all sicken and die," we accept it, but we a free press while we can to give free expression to our views of great men and papers as well as of small.

We endorse the doctrine of our contemporary, but take exception to the application. We believe that the Leader is not an independent journal, and never has been. Its proprietor committed himself to the Carlish-McDonald administration, and since its downfall, its altered tone has not shown a tithe of the independence of the "small party organ." It is all very fine to give lectures on Independence, but quite another thing to have it and exercise it.

THE WAR.

From the movement of the forces of the contending parties, some decisive operations must shortly take place. The Federals would appear as determined to go into Mississippi. The Confederates seem to be watching their movements with a determination to attack when a favorable opportunity offers. No battle of note has taken place for some time, but one, it is thought cannot be delayed long.

The Arabia has just arrived bringing the intelligence that France has proposed to England to mediate in American affairs, but England has refused. We know not if this action of the English Government will please the American English-haters or not. Whatever has prompted the action of the Government to adopt this course we know not, but to us it appears another expression of good will to the Northern States.

As we go to press there is nothing worthy of note in papers just come to hand. It may be the calm which precedes the storm. The coming struggle for supremacy will be severe and bloody.

Mr. CURRIN ON THE WAR.

The apostle of Free Trade has been giving his opinions on the American War to his constituents in Rochdale.

After referring to the [illegible] cotton districts, caused by the war, he went on to remove a misunderstanding as to the real cause of the [illegible] the lack of cotton. He said it arose from the blockade of the Southern States. The British Government had insisted on the right of belligerents when engaged in war of blockading their ports. He saw no necessity of adopting such a theory; and hoped that maritime international law would be so amended as to come of a nation when engaged in war to open its ports to contraband. He considers on the Government has been a party to the existing law, and as a consequence to the existing distress resulting directly from the blockade of the Southern ports, that relief should be afforded to the sufferers by the country generally. He strongly deprecates intervention, which he considers identical with war, and declares that a six month's war would cost the nation more than to support the entire population of the cotton districts for ten years. He declares that he is unable to give an opinion as to the result of the present struggle in America, but says that if he were compelled to give a guess, it would be the very opposite to that given by Mr. Gladstone and Lord Russell. He was of opinion that the war would not result in the separation of North and South. He said he had travelled twice through the principal free States, and knew the principal men now engaged in the present war, yet he confessed himself totally at a loss to conjecture how the present struggle would close. He had no idea it would close soon, but was positive that anything like foreign interference or intervention would protract rather than terminate the war. In like manner would the sufferings of the British operatives be prolonged. He urged neutrality and sympathy, pointed out the folly of attempting to suggest anything to the belligerents, now that they have decided that might shall settle the dispute. "You might as well," he observes, "seek to reason with mad dogs, as reason with nations when hostilities have commenced." Like his friend Mr. Bright, he is no enemy to war, not only on account of its horrors, but of the fearful derangement of commerce, so essential to the welfare of a country like Britain, and no branch of commerce is so so much moment to the English nation as that of Cotton.

Upwards of 200 years ago, when the Protector of England addressed the Parliament, he alluded to the fearful cost of the wars the nation had been plunged in, and thus refers to its great staple in commerce

"And besides the sufferings in respect to the trade of the nation, it's most evident that the purse of the nation could not have been able to bear it—by reason of the advantages taken by other States to improve their own, and spoil our manufacture of cloth, and hinder the vent thereof: which is the great staple commodity of the nation."

No one is more alive to the commercial interests of the Empire than is Mr. Cobden. His knowledge of American affairs and men give weight to his opinions, and, doubtless when Parliament meets he will advocate the principles he advanced at the Rochdale meeting.

THE AFRICAN HERESY.

The religious world in general, and the Church of England in particular, have been scandalized anew by the publication of a book by Dr. Colenzo, the Bishop of Natal, in South Africa, in which this divine gives in plain language, his decided and mature opinion, that the Pentateuch was not written by Moses, and consequently is not historically true. The Dr. has been noted for his learning, and the broad assertion of his scepticism in the Books of Moses, has prepared the way for the avowal of his denial of the inspiration of the Scriptures. There seems no desire on his part, like the writers of the Essays and Reviews, to mislead the reader, or to throw him upon his own reasoning as to the meaning of sentences couched in dubious or allegorical language. On the contrary, the Bishop is clear, full and frank, as the following quotation will shows:—

"But I wish to repeat here most distinctly that my reason for no longer receiving the Pentateuch as historically true is not that I find insuperable difficulties with regard to the miracles, or supernatural revelations of Almighty God, recorded in it, but solely that I cannot, as a true man, consent any longer to shut my eyes to the absolute, palpable, self-contradiction s of the narrative."

This is the old story, and the history of ever sceptic who has written his history, or his experience. The Bishop is no author of some note, having some time ago published a commentary on the Epistle to the Romans—a work spoken of as "evangelical." He is also the author of an Algebra and a Euclid, and known as a professed mathematician. It would appear that his present position has been gained by his subjecting Divine revelation to human reason, in place of subjecting reason to revelation—the latter a difficult task for a mere literary man. The whole system of revelation is equally chargeable with "contradictions" and opposition to "reason," and the Dr. is prepared for the consequences. He then meets the supposition that his book may shake belief in the Scriptures:—

"Our belief in the living God remains as sure as ever, thought not the Pentateuch only, but the whole Bible, were removed. It is written on our hearts by God's own finger, as surely as by the hand of the Apostle in the Bible, that 'God is, and is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him.' It is written there also, as plainly as in the Bible, that 'God is not mocked?—that, 'whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap'—and that 'he that soweth to the flesh, shall of the flesh reap corruption.'

"But there will be others of a different stamp—quiet, lowly, loving souls—who are walking daily with God, and have been taught to consider a belief in the story of the Exodus an essential part of their religion, upon which, indeed, as it seems to them the whole fabric of their faith and hope in God is based. It is not really so; the Light of God's Love did not shine less truly on those minds when Enoch 'walked with God of old,' though there was then no Bible in existence, than it does now. Shall it also [illegible] Will that of itself be taken [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

FINKLE & LYON

SEWING MACHINE COMPANY,

538 Broadway, New York.

TO parties little acquainted with the Finkle & Lyon Sewing Machines, the cut of the usual of the Company's Circular is specially commended. This circular can be had on application. It is very specific, and will be found highly instructive, having been prepared without much care and we will abide by all statements therein made.

The following brief quotation is characteristic of the entire Circular:

"This Machine is better adapted than any other Sewing Machine in market to the frequent changes and almost endless variety of sewing required in a family; for it will sew from one to twenty thicknesses of Manvellies without stopping, and make every stitch perfect. Will sew from the finest gauze to the heaviest cloth, and even the steepest surfaces of leather, without changing the feed, needle or tension, or making any adjustment of machine whatever."

This is we unqualifiedly say is one of the most difficult points in the Sewing Machine art. It was no ordinary triumph. Definitely can we now say, "No other Machine compares with it in this respect." Hence, have we uniformly—almost without exception—taken the highest premium, wherever the Machine has been publicly exhibited in competition with other first class Sewing Machines. Hence it is that we are able to offer the following guarantee, viz.: "We warrant every Machine we sell to give entire satisfaction than any other Sewing Machine [illegible] for [illegible] and we hereby agree to [illegible] any Machine sold by us that shall not do as good work as any other Machine, or any Machine that we sell that shall prove less durable than any other Machine, with the same usage. This guarantee is as reliable as the note of any business man in the land. For more than five years have we issued and [illegible] this [illegible] tion of our Machine; and without a single travelling agent in the field, there is scarcely a neighborhood on the continent where the Machine is not favourably known. We produce such a reputation to our hand as mere "talking points," as they are technically called in the trade. Hence we make but one kind of stitch, viz. the lock-stitch, alike on both sides, requiring only one-third the thread of other kinds of stitches.

N. B.—Local Agents wanted in every county throughout the West. ☞ Favorable terms to Canvassers offered.

ANNUAL MEETING

OF THE

INVESTIGATION REPORT - - DECLARATION OF BONUS.

THE ninth annual General Meeting of this Company was held within the Royal Hotel, Aberdeen, on Friday, 18th April.

The Right Honorable the Earl of Dalhousie, Chairman of the Ordinary Directors, in the Chair.

There were submitted to the meeting—

1.—Report by the Directors, which, on the motion of the Chairman, was cordially and unanimously approved of and adopted.

2.—The Balance Sheet for the past year, with detailed statement relative thereto, duly certified as correct by the Auditors of the Company, Incorporated Accountants, by the Chairman and Manager, and also by the Auditor.

There was also laid on the Table the various Valuation Statements in connection with the Quinquennial Investigation into the state of the Company's affairs, as at 31st January, 1862.

The following particulars derived from the Balance Sheet and Statements before-mentioned, show the result of the operations of the Company for the past year:—

Amount proposed for Life Assurances during the year, constituted in 1139 Proposals	£454,838 0 0
Amount of Proposals completed and for which 861 Policies were issued	259,000 0 0
ANNUAL PREMIUMS on said Policies	11,170 1 0
CLAIMS BY DEATH including BONUSES on PARTICIPATION POLICIES, and after deducting Sums recovered from other Offices under guarantees	2,999 1 0
TOTAL SUM Assured under 4,759 current LIFE POLICIES	1,263,95 0 0
TOTAL ACCUMULATED FUNDS	263,000 0 2
TOTAL ANNUAL REVENUE	24,000 0 4

With reference to the recent investigation into the state of the Company's affairs, as at 31st January last, the Report Stated that both the principles of valuation and the details thereof, had been submitted to James John Downes, Esq., Actuary to the Equitable Life Office in London, a gentleman well known as one of the highest authorities on such subjects in the kingdom, and had received his entire approval, as having been made on just and sound principles, and accurately carried out as certified in his report to the Directors, which formed part of the Appendix to their Report. This step the Directors considered would satisfy to give the utmost confidence—both to the shareholders and the Policyholders—in the soundness and correctness of the valuation.

During the Quinquennial Period, the claims by death, including the bonus additions which had been paid, and which had been considerably under the number that might have been expected from the Mortality Tables on which the Office-rates are based, amounting to £36,815 on oil.

In valuing the Policies, each had been separately calculated, and new premiums had only been used, thus leaving a surplus of annual revenue of £11,421 16s 1d., to meet future expenses and to form a source of profit for next investigation. The total amount of claims by death paid since the commencement of the Company, £21[illegible]

The Security held by the Company in [illegible] and had been recently carefully valued in detail.

In conclusion, the Directors congratulated both the Proprietors and the Assured on the high position which the Company now occupied in the estimation of the public, and on the encouraging prospect of its continued operations for the future.

DECLARATION OF BONUS.

From the profits realised on the Life business, a retrospective Bonus of £1 7s 6d per cent per annum for the Quinquennial period was declared, on the sums originally assured under all Participating Policies, increased by the previous additions thereto; also a further prospective Bonus of £1 per cent per annum, on the amount of the Policies with said Bonuses, on all such of said Policies as may become claims by Death previously to the 31st January, 1867.

It will be observed, that this rate of Bonus is equivalent in the case of our older Policies to £1 14s per cent per annum on the original sum assured; that the total additions to the sum assured, now vested, are equal to 32 per cent on the sum assured; and that as the younger ages the additions amount to upwards of 70 per cent of the premiums paid.

Statement showing the Progress of the Company's Business during the Quinquennial Period, ending 31st January, 1862:

Years ending 31st January.	Amounts proposed for Assurance.	Amount of New Policies issued.	No. of Policies in force.	New Annual Premiums.	Total Revenue in each year.	Accumulated Funds.

FIRE INSURANCE.

THE following table compiled from the official returns, exhibits, at a glance, the increase of duty paid to the Government by the different Insurance Offices, metropolitan and provincial, during the year 1862.

THE "ROYAL."

It will be seen, stands as before, at the very head of the list, and maintains a rate of progress very far in advance of all its rivals and competitors. Twelve months ago, we had the gratification of recording the fact that its increase, in the year both had been more than double that of any other company—had increased 36 per cent, of the entire increase of all the London offices combined—and had also exceeded 30 per cent, of the aggregate increase of the remaining twenty eight provincial offices. We have now the pleasure of inviting the attention of our readers to the testimony of these later returns, which show that in the year 1861, the increase of the "Royal" was very nearly sixty per cent, in excess of the increase of any other company—that there were but three offices which came even within fifty per cent. of it, and that it was actually more than one-sixth of the entire increase of the remaining forty-four offices. London and Provincial put together. Comment upon such facts as these would be superfluous. They prove, unmistakeably, the unrivalled advances of the "Royal" in the confidence and good opinion of the public. That advance has been, from the beginning, as remarkable as it has been rapid; and we cordially congratulate the directors and shareholders upon it, because we regard it as the just reward of prudent management, of liberal and honorable dealing, and of undoubted stability.

TOGETHER WITH A CLEAR TREATISE ON THE

ALSO:

A Complete Materia Medica,

or, list of all the principal remedies used in the treatment of disease, including nearly

200 MEDICAL PLANTS, HERBS AND VEGETABLE REMEDIES,

with descriptions of each, and directions for preparing and using them. (With an elegant and correct Likeness of the Author,)

By JOHN C. GUNN, M. D.,

OF KNOXVILLE, ET.,

Author of the old work known as "GUNN'S DOMESTIC MEDICINE."

ALSO, AN APPENDIX containing a popular treatise on ANATOMY, PHYSIOLOGY, and the LAWS OF HEALTH; the whole making a large octavo volume of

OVER ONE THOUSAND PAGES,

with numerous

VALUABLE ILLUSTRATIONS!

THIS is probably the best, as well as the most thorough and extensive book ever published, as a Domestic or Family Medical Work. Its author is now an old man, and is probably more generally known as a popular medical author than any man living, owing to the great popularity and extensive use of his old work, which was one of great value, but in the present advanced state of medical science is altogether behind the times. Dr G is a graduate of seven of the best Medical Colleges in the world, viz.: of Philadelphia, and of London and Paris. He has been a successful practicing physician for nearly forty years: and it can be hardly supposed that any man can be better qualified to write a work than he is. He has spent most of the time for several years in preparing this work—intending it, as he often remarked, as his last and greatest Legacy to Posterity.

The work contains a description of all the diseases known or common in this country—their causes, symptoms, and character—with plain and full directions for successfully treating them, telling what remedies to use; how to use them, and when; the whole stated in plain and simple language; or whenever any technical or Medical terms are used, they are fully explained; so that the commonest mind can understand them. The remedies recommended are generally of the simplest kind, such as are harmless, yet efficient, and usually such as are easily to be obtained.

Besides the diseases common to both sexes, the work contains a department on the diseases of Females, and their treatment. Also a department on the diseases of Children, which alone is worth the price of the book to mothers and all who have the care of children.

An important item in the work is its Pharmacy, or valuable Family Receipts, there being more than forty pages of Medical Receipts and Compounds, many of which will be found very important and useful in a family.

☞ Remember that this Book can only be had of the Agent, when he calls, and is not to be had either of us, direct, or through Booksellers.

THE BENEFACTOR OF HIS RACE

THE GREAT HEALER OF MANKIND,

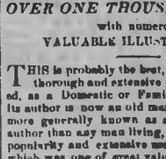
The Whole World United!

SICK PEOPLE THINK!

AFTER WHICH, AUT.

Herrick's Sugar Coated Pills,

CHILDREN CRY FOR THEM!



THIS remarkable American remedy is carrying the world by storm. Over five million boxes are sold annually. Composed entirely of Flowers, Roots, Balsams and Extracts,—their effect on the human system is pleasant, satisfactory, and successful;—Acting directly on the blood, glands, solids and fluids of the body, their use is attended with the happiest effects. In sudden attacks of diseases, one or two doses almost always cures. In old standing cases of sickness, small doses repeated frequently—so cleanse the system that good health is the result. No change in employment or diet is necessary. They never cause nor occasion, sickness, aching limbs, etc., as do many other kinds. They are warranted to give satisfaction, or the money will be refunded. They are considered cheaper, safer, prettier, and in all respects superior to any purgatives put in the world.

☞ The discovery of coating a pill with sugar, originated with Dr Herrick. All others are counterfeits, and if used, will do harm, and disappoint the sick. Herrick's pills are elegantly put up, 25 in a box, with a package of directions, and sell for 25 cents a box; 5 boxes for $1.

Herrick's Kidney Strengthening Plaster.

THE GREAT STRENGTHENER AND PAIN DESTROYER. THE BEST AND CHEAPEST HOUSEHOLD REMEDY IN THE WORLD.

These renowned Plasters cure pains, weakness and distress in the back, side and breast, in a shorter time, and more surely than they can be told. One trial will warrants them. Spread from cotton, buckskin and gauze, on beautiful kid leather, renders them peculiarly adapted to the wants of females and children. Their application is universal—equally to the strong man, the feeble woman, and the delicate infant. To each and all they prove a balm and a blessing. Their new improved, and without exception yet invented, Pain Plaster will wear from one to four months, and in rheumatic complaints, sprains and bruises, frequently effect cures when all other remedies fail. Full directions will be found on the back of each. Public speakers, actors, ladies subject to fits of the gospel, and others, will strengthen their lungs and improve their voices by wearing them on their chest. Price 25 cents.

The above articles are sold by all the dealers in Canada, and by druggists throughout the United States and South America, at wholesale by all large druggists in the principal cities.

The Dilemma.

BY JAMES MCCARROLL.

Ah! thin take down that image that hangs near the althar.
Or else all my pinance is useless to me;
For when I'm forninst it my heart's sure to falther,
And in it's stid I am, Father Luke, do you see.

Put me up some cowld saint that is wrinkled and hairy,
And it's thin I'll get through wid my "rosals" like a man;
But if you let anythin near me called, "Mary!"
Pon my conshins I'm done for, and cannot get an.

Is it "why," that you're roarin?—now listen to raison;
I've a pisther like that, only barrin the child;
But that will come right, please the Lord, in due saison.—
Arrah! now, Father Luke, don't be gettin so wild!

Oh! you'll "add one more saint sinnee and lamp to the canson"
So you will, "till I ware out my knees to the bone."
Don't be hard:—add the moon and the banks of the Shannon;
And, begorra, I'll furnish a saint of my own!

Miscellaneous.

St. Vincent and Slavery.

The recent outbreak of the amiable but strong smelling Blacks, so graphically narrated by our late highly respected townsman, Dr. Checkley, is cause for deep consideration. They constitute a portion of the twenty millions purchase-money, so hastily, though so nobly applied by Great Britain, for the emancipation of the swarthy sons of Africa. A pretty picture the St. Vincent portion of the outlay is exhibited!—Idle, unimproving, blood-thirsty, barely ignorant, and thoroughly ungrateful, they prove themselves true descendants of the darkey Obomey district.

Yet there are the gentle uncle Tops, whose portly fanciful sufferings well meaning Mrs. Stowe, with ardent imagination, kindly feelings, and christian sympathy, combined doubtless with large potations of nerve-moving green tea, represented to all Europe as a down-trodden, inhumanly treated race! The lady exaggerated. Not that we would defend original slavery. No stentorian crawler would howl more adversely against the system, if to be now initiated, than our unpretending selves.—But slavery is a fact, an established fact, and as such must be dealt with. Romance will not supply the place of reason. Behold St. Vincent! Freedom, British Law—civil and religious rights—incentive to labour—paths to independence, all have been before these ebon gentry for the last thirty years, and the miserable result is, an attempt to burn, ravage, and destroy, and oh! most lame and impotent conclusion, to establish a "King." So, it seems, concluded the wise black "Sanhedrim" of St. Vincent. Why! had our worthy, kind, and skilful Dr. Checkley fallen in the filthy raid, the immolation of the whole goatish race, would have made poor amends! And it is four millions of these wild men that Pharoah Lincoln would let loose against his Southern Israel. Take heed—take heed, Mr. Lincoln! Shew us if you can, oh vacillating, and four years top-sawyer of the Presidential pit, shew us, we repeat, if you can, a simple example in history, of the abolition of slavery in the country by employment of disaffection within, and force from without. Liberty is a self-acquired gift. Subject races must achieve it for themselves, by gradual civilization, and their own mental and moral progress. The blot on the Southern escutcheon was not of their own stamping.

The bar-sinister was a bastard gift of a day gone by. It was Britain's gift. True, Britain has purged herself of the first stigma, as we have said very nobly, but somewhat hastily. The ruined planters, the waste plantations and the unimproved blacks speak plainly of the error. If, as it has been remarked, they are the image of their maker, cut in ebony, they have done nothing to prove their capacity for becoming ivory colored, or their appreciation of a liberty so munificently bestowed. Let the hero "who has made a Southern Nation" but have the opportunity, and our life upon it, he will address himself to the question as christianly, as, but much more cautiously than the soonest black Republican who raves on the Sunday and rigs out a slaver on the Monday. Let it not be forgotten, that had the people of England all been slave-holders, we should never have heard of emancipation in the West Indies. Let us not then be too great dragons of virtue in regard to the South, nor pick nor wound them needlessly.

Catch the Pope or the Arch-Bishop of Canterbury, if their all of comfort and of luxury had depended on a "Plantation," reducing themselves to camels hair garments, and wild locusts for breakfast, through love for the slaves, and as proof of their sympathy. Give the South time, and the evil will be gradually met. Let them shake some of its worst features, and for many a day, we half incline to believe that it is the best condition for the darkies, the best for America, the best for Europe, commerce, and the world at large. Let our readers refer to history. Whilst Rome was cultivated by slaves, it was the garden of the world. The very same soil now cultivated by freemen is little better than a pestilential desert. Asia minor whilst the people were nearly all slaves, was the paradise of the old world; now, that there are no slaves, it is a howling wilderness. Enslaved Russia produces twice the quantity of what that Massachusetts does, and Lombardy, under the Austrians, even produced three times the yield of wheat that Pennsylvania yields. These are startling facts; and yet we are no lovers of slavery; we recommend morality, and urge that intellectually, and gradually, the serf should be raised to freedom. But an Lincoln's sudden emancipation edicts. No Sir, Vincents' on the four million scale. We believe that the South, for its own security, and for the satisfaction of Europe, will calmly move in that direction, and that in her true policy.—Chronicle.

Tom Hood Sail.

Mrs. C. D. Fillins Bush in the last number of her "Olive Branch," thus describes her attempts at pedestrianism in a wind storm:

The 7th of October we started from Washington street to go to Camp Morton, two miles distant. There was a high west wind we made poor headway—our skirts under and outer, fluttered and twisted, and blew upside down, and down side up, to our discomfiture, if not mortification. While attempting to tack about, ship fashion, to make a little headway, a boy cried out, "Hooray!—a ship under sail. I say, there, take in sail—take in sail." True enough, we thought, here we are, trying to pursue our legitimate business, under thirty-six yards of sail. Such a thing as reefing them in was out of the question, while we had on a hoop skeleton. Numerous little girls flitted along without any trouble. Men paused to and fro with as much apparent ease as at any other time. [The daughters of wealth could afford to stay at home or ride in a carriage.] Finally, tired, harrassed and indignant at our own want of moral courage, we were compelled to moor our ship at the corner of St. Clair and Illinois streets for repairs and fuel. Our old friends Mr. and Mrs. Thornbury received us kindly, gave us the needed rest, and courage not a little.

Reader mind, do you not with us think that good hard common sense would teach us and all other working women to wear garments suited to our business? This glorious October day, we have lost at least $10 in subscriptions to our paper, because we were a slave to the foolish fashion introduced by the Empress of France. The time and talent and physical strength that should have been given to our business, has been worse than thrown away.

A Praying Wheel.

Praying is made easy among the Boodhists by machinery. Col. Torrens gives the following description of it in his travels:

We went over the monastery, which was just the church of Goroogumal over again, on a large scale. Amongst other things we were shown with great pride a monster praying wheel; the cylinder was at least ten feet in height, and five or six feet in diameter, and it was hard work for two priests to turn it. These praying cylinders were the great feature of the place, and were all sizes; the smallest were about the size of humming tops, and resemble that too in shape. They are called chos-khor, and are carried in the lamah's right hand—the handle being the axis on which they revolve. They turn at the slightest movement, and as one revolution counts as one prayer, it is easy to carry on an animated conversation, and get through any amount of prayers to Boodh at the same time. Others, a little longer; were placed in shelves along the walls, about the height of a man's waist. The pious in passing always give them a twirl. But the most perfect specimen of this business like way of getting over their spiritual duties, practiced by the Boodhists Lubk, was a little water-mill, which we noticed a short time after, near the village. The stream turned the mill-wheel, which was nothing more or less than a praying cylinder and revolved unceasingly; as long as the stream flowed on, so long would its devotions last. Unlike a "friar of orders gray," apt to fall asleep over his beads, and to shirk the number of his aves which have been bargained for, this charming little mechanical contrivance never stopped to take breadth, never slept, never left off for meals, but prayed continuously, "free gratis, for nothing." He was certainly no fool, whatever else he may have been, who invented the praying wheel.

Miss Julia Brace.

The Hartford Courant thus speaks of Miss Julia Brace, who is deaf dumb and blind, and has been an inmate of the Deaf and Dumb Asylum at Hartford for more than thirty years, thus:

Miss Brace has been thus afflicted since she was four years old, and she is now nearly fifty. She had some years ago a legacy left her by a lady of Boston, of $200, per annum. She supports herself on this and has over $1,500 laid up. Dr. Turner is her conservator, and has put the money out at interest. She can easily detect the different teachers by touch; will take two glores belonging to two different persons, and handed to her by another, and return each to the right owner: sews nicely and rapidly, and threads her own needle, with her mouth and tongue, as quickly as most ladies with eyesight can. By signs she wished Gov. Andrew to send her a new dress—woolen delaine. Her memory is excellent, and she will remember persons after having seen them once, for years; and regularly every night she, by signs, asks for the news. Altogether she is quite a curiosity.

The Women of Rebeldom.

The women of rebeldom have been among the most efficient of the promoters of the war, and maintainers of communication with Rebel sympathizers in the North. They have also been the chief smugglers of goods. A Memphis correspondent thus chronicles some of the tricks to which they resort to escape detection:

A woman was passing the lines on the 21st in a carriage. She was desired to alight, guard was suspicious, and turned her over to the attention of a female, "an in-

Department of the Interior.

Prominent Indianians here are urging the selection of the Hon. John D. Defrees, the Superintendent of Public Printing, as successor to the Secretary of the Interior Department, in case Secretary Smith resists, as there is believed to be but little doubt he will do soon after the meeting of Congress. It is understood that Mr. Defrees' appointment would not be unacceptable to Mr. Smith. Although speculations respecting the successorship are premature at this time, it is nevertheless the case that Indiana is disposed to insist upon her claims to the place, and is casting about for the best man within her borders to fill it. The forthcoming report of the Secretary of the Interior will show that $250,000 less have been paid out for pensions during the last fiscal year than during that which preceded it. Only a small part of this difference is accounted for by the fact that prisoners within the Rebel States are unable to draw. It is said that some considerable leaks have been stopped.—[Wash. Cor. N. Y. Tribune.

A SALT-WATER FISH POND.—In an article on sea-fisheries in the London Review, mention is made of salt-water preserves:—There have been several of these in operation both in Scotland and England; but the one which is best known is Logan Pond, in Galloway. It is a gigantic natural basin formed in the solid rock, one hundred and sixty feet in circumference, and thirty feet in depth, and it communicates with the sea by a narrow passage. It is some years now since we visited the pond, but so far as we know it exists. An intelligent fisherman used to have charge of this salt-water preserve, which was well stocked with all kinds of white fish, and in particular with cod, some of which are large in size, and of venerable age. Some of these fish were very tame, and would take food from a person's hand. They appeared to be on watch at feeding time, and eagerly devoured the boiled meat of whales, limpets, and other testacea which was thrown to them by the keeper. Whilst the keeper is fishing in the adjoining bay, all the finest fish are kept and placed in the pond; those injured in the capture are cut up as food for the prisoners. Might not a hint be taken from this pond by our piscieculturists? If we could do for our more valuable sea-fishes what we can do for the salmon, viz., preserve their eggs and protect the young fry for a year or so, it would in time tell in favour of our animal supplies.

Cheap family medicines are what the people want. Who would give a dollar for a bottle of medicine when you can get it you want for 25 cents? Dr. Wistar's Vegetable Balsamic Elixir for Coughs, Colds, &c. and Henry's Vermont Liniment for Rheumatism, Sprains, Bruises, and as a Pain-Killer that should be in every household) are sold at only 25 cts. per bottle. A small investment indeed for the good they effect. Try them.

NUMBER OF WORDS IN ACTUAL USE.—It is a curious thing that, with some 125,000 English words people can get on with very few. D'Orsay a philologist of ability, records that a country clergyman in England told him that some of the laborers in his parish had not 360 words in their vocabulary. On the average, the children of persons with ordinary education do not use more than 200 words until the age of ten. Max Muller says: "A well-educated person in England, who has been at a public school and at the University, who reads his Bible, Shakespeare, The Times, and all the books of Mudie's library, (i. e., nineteen-twentieths of all the books published in England,) seldom uses more than 3,000 or 4,000 words in actual conversation. Accurate thinkers and close reasoners who avoid vague and general expressions, and wait till they find the word that exactly fits their meaning, employ a larger stock; and eloquent speakers may rise to a command of 10,000. Milton's works are built up with 8,000, and the Old Testament says all that it has to say with 5,642 words."—Press.

TO PREVENT HYDROPHOBIA.—The following receipt for the cure of Hydrophobia was handed to us the other day by a reverend gentleman, who stated that he had known it to have been tried and that it had proved an entire success when given to either man or beast:

"Burn oyster shells to lime, pulverize and sift through gauze or fine muslin.—Two heaped table-spoonfuls of the powder to be mixed with eggs to the consistency of batter for pancakes, and fried, using fresh butter or sweet oil for that purpose. Let the person bitten eat the cake in the morning, and take neither food nor drink for six hours afterwards, when he may live as usual. Three such cakes are sufficient for an adult, one on each of three alternate mornings to be taken in the same manner. For children it should be proportioned to age.

Alfred Meissner, the Bohemian poet, is engaged upon one of those huge German novels, of which we cannot hear without a slight shuddering. Its title is "Schwarz gelb," (Black Yellow, the Austrian colors) its purpose, description of Austrian affairs within the last twelve years. Two volumes have appeared—eight or ten more will follow in due time.

THE PATRONAGE QUESTION.

A considerable fuss is made by some Journals, that the Government in distributing its patronage is overlooking that party to which it belongs, that appointments to office are being made of opponents to the Government, as well as of its friends. The Hamilton Spectator and the Lindsay Post seem to take extreme views on this question, and to us very questionable ones.

There is no doubt that a Government in making appointments to office will as a rule make selections from among its friends and supporters, but if occasionally one is made from its foes, it will we think generally be found that there are other grounds for the selection than "bribing his support." Unfortunately for human nature we are ever prone to look at principles and questions as they affect us, and pronounce upon them accordingly. Thus when in opposition how eloquently we candidate upon the conduct of an administration who deals out its favours only to its own party. Indifferent to the public good we say the aim of the dispensers of patronage is to bestow it upon the men, and those alone, who support them. The public weal is only of secondary importance, and partisan aggrandisement the paramount object. Such conduct we say deserves the severest censure, and a Government practising it deserves the condemnation of the country. Now if all this holds good of a Government we oppose, why should it not hold good of a Government we support? Does an altered position of a party affect the positions of right and wrong. Or, can that be right in Reformers which is wrong in Conservatives? We dissent from the ground laid down by our contemporaries for the very reason that it is not in accordance with British usage, and we deprecate it as introducing the justly abhorred principle adopted in the States that "to the victors belong the spoils." Every change of a political party there, witnesses a "sweeping out of the kitchen." All and every official of the former party must give place to those of the present.

Would our friends who insist upon all appointments to office shall be only upon political grounds be willing to place it on record that this is a part of their political creed? Has not every County in Canada suffered from officials whose only qualification for office consisted in their being political partisans? In our own Counties we have suffered, and are now suffering from the miserable policy pursued by both Tory and Reform administrations in appointing drones or incapables to important public situations. And for the press to insist so strongly upon the Government acting in this way indicates that it has little confidence in the Government, and not a very exalted idea of its own independence. No journal which takes up the position of that under review can get credit for being independent from correct motives. It is true it may assume an independence, but let the Government give an opposition paper its printing, and how long would it be in going into opposition itself. Just as soon as it was sure of the fact. A fig for such party Journals, and supporters of a party Government. Their adherence to party, and their support is not for the principles of the party, or the measures of the Government, but merely from mercenary and selfish motives.

Our neighbor of the Review consoles himself with the thought of a change of parties when Parliament meets, and advises the Lindsay Post and the "Radicals" to wait apportioning the offices among them, till then at least. He considers "it would be an outrage on two-thirds of the people to give the offices to Radicals." It is an old saying, if you want a bitter opponent, select an apostate. When the Review was launched forth by its present conductors, it gloried in the appellation of a "Reform" or Radical journal. Before four years of its existence had passed, it discovered that to become Tory paid better, so over it goes body and soul, and it now turns up its nose at the party it was born and reared amongst. We respect a man when he changes his views and principles from an honest conviction that they are wrong, but when mercenary motives prompts the change, he will reap his reward in being despised.

The Tory or Conservative party to which the Review now belongs, have always considered that they had a divine right to all the offices, emoluments and privileges in the country. And when the Reformers succeeded in ousting them, and taking their places, they are written down as "a hungry pack, a greedy set, whose only aim is to get loaves and fishes—nincompoops, incapables, disloyal," and, in fact, everything that is bad. No more loud and angry denouncer of Reformers in the country than this same Review. We cannot help, therefore, heartily despising its allusions to its former friends in the County of Victoria. It has lost its hopes of receiving any gift from the present Government, but cherishes the hope that the previous Government will soon be in power again, when it, doubtless, hopes to receive a continuation of the substantial favors it has heretofore received as a reward for its subserviency to a cur- [illegible] and its recreancy to its

THE OPENING OF CONGRESS.

On Monday last the annual meeting of Congress commenced.

The Chaplain offered prayer, during which he returned thanks for the heightening prospects of the slave—and for the emancipation of the nation from a system which had involved it in so much sin, sorrow and shame!!

A new era has commenced in the history of the United States.

The second annual message of the President was submitted, in which he refers to the Harvest, Foreign Relations, the Slave Trade—the Blockade—Negro Colonization—their relations with Turkey and South America—Atlantic Telegraph, the Territories, the Finances—Revenue and Expenditure—the War—the Emancipation Proclamation, which, in connection with the negro, occupies a very large part of the Message. The population from 1790 to 1860 is given, showing the ratio of increase. Nothing daunted by the present struggle for dismemberment, boasts Abe assured in of the reliability of the rate of increase in the past, proceeds to give the figures by decades of the population of the country 70 years hence, giving for 1930 the total at 251,680,914, being about a fourth of the present population of the Globe. He advocates compensation to loyal owners for the loss of their slaves. He reads a homily on prejudice against negroes, returns again to colonization and emancipation, and so closes his Message, assuring Congress that the only way of saving the Union is to give freedom to the slave.

The Globe describes the document as "plain, blunt, straightforward to the length of simplicity, but full of good sense and sound reasoning." This may be true of it as a whole, but from what we have had time to peruse of it, we think there is a deal of nonsense and unsound reasoning in it and certainly a rich affair for a critic to analyse. Let any one, for instance, read what he says on foreign relations, and attempts to give a narration of it. Let him think for a moment of the representative of a people numbering 31,000,000, talking such balderdash. To us it appears far inferior to his first Message, and far below any Message we have ever noticed, as emanating from a President of the American people. We have not time now to go into it, but will return to it again.

ST. ANDREW'S DINNER.

The anniversary of Scotia's Patron Saint was celebrated by the members of the St. Andrew's Society, of this Town, on Monday night last. Quite a number of guests were present, and the evening was enlivened by speeches and songs, and altogether was a very pleasant and agreeable affair.

The Chair was occupied by W. A. Scott Esq., President of the Society, he was supported on the right by C. Perry, Esq., Mayor, Thomas White, Jr., Esq., and Jas. Hall, Esq., Sheriff; on the left by D. Sutherland and George F. Orde, Esqrs.; Vice Chair filled by A. Smith, Esq., Vice President of the Society, supported on the right by J. N. Travers, Esq., and Mr. Chas. Cameron, Secretary of the Society; on the left by D. G. Hatton, R. Romain, and A. G. Gilbert, Esqrs; in the body of the Hall we noticed the following gentlemen:—J. W. Fitzgerald, Esq., James Edwards, Esq., John Reid, Esq., John Thomson, Esq, H. Lawson, Esq., John O'Donnell, Esq., W. J. Fowler, Esq., and L. Caisse, Esq.

The following apologies were received by the Secretary, from the Hon. S. Smith and Col. Haultain, M. P. P.

SIR,—I have to acknowledge receipt of yours, enclosing complimentary ticket to the St. Andrew's Dinner this evening.

I regret much that business compels me to leave Town to-day, and consequently I cannot avail myself of your kindness.

Yours,

SIDNEY SMITH.

Peterboro', 1st Dec., 1862.

Col. Haultain presents his compliments to St. Andrew's Committee, and regrets that other engagements will prevent his availing himself of their invitation to dinner.

Peterboro', 20th Nov., 1862.

The Secretary read the 4th Annual Report of the Committee; the following is the Report!

Fourth Annual Report of the proceedings of the Committee of management for the St. Andrew's Society, submitted to the members at the Annual Dinner, 1st December, 1862.

GENTLEMEN,

In submitting to you the Fourth Annual Report, your Committee have to say, that although there has been a greater falling off in the list of membership during the past year, than in the preceding; yet the respectable balance in the hands of your Treasurer at the Annual Meeting held in the Committee Room on the 26th ult., together with the fact that during the past week a considerable number of new members have enrolled their names for the current year, and the list is still filling up. Your Committee have begun operations for another year with the best of encouragement, as will be seen from the following financial statement:—

Balance in hands of Treasurer at 12th Nov., 1862, annual meeting	$43.40
Fees from 32 members	32.00
Collection at annual Sermon, 30th November, 1862	7.45
	$84 85

EXPENDITURE.

Paid in Charities	$ 8.24
Leaving a balance in the hands of your Treasurer of	$76.61

to be placed to the credit of the new account. It will be observed, that the demands for assistance from the funds of the Society, have, fortunately, been very small during the past year, indeed by far the smallest of any year since the formation of the Society: in 1859 the amount paid was $52.60, in 1860 $31.05, in 1861 $34.95, and the past year, as already stated, only $8.24. Your Committee, however, are prepared to expect a good many applications for aid during the current year, as they are not ignorant of the fact, that the coming winter will be very trying on a large portion of a class who, in ordinary circumstances would not think of asking, or even receiving help from the funds of the Society; and it may be proper to state here, that in most cases where assistance has been given hitherto, the recipients have been total or comparative strangers to your Committee and to the Society at large, while your Committee, at the same time, made themselves satisfied to the best of their belief, as far as they had in their power so to do, that they were such and all more or less deserving are they (your Committee) entreated to lend them a helping hand.—The year, however, they expect to be reminded of the old but truthful remark: "Charity begins at home," and are therefore prepared, if called upon, to enquire into the wants of their local fellow countrymen occasionally—as assistance may be solicited. Your Committee trusts that such demands may be few, but they are led to expect some.

It is unnecessary here to detain the meeting by advocating the claims of the Society, as it is likely this may be adverted to by some of the speakers in course of the evening. You are, however, no doubt, all aware that it is an institution purely benevolent in its organization, intended for the relief of the distressed, and small as the different sums may appear as having been paid out from time to time to assist in relieving the wants of suffering humanity, yet your Committee feel proud to remark, that there never has been a case come before them seeking assistance which, upon being properly investigated and found to be deserving of charity, that was sent away empty.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

(Signed,)

W. A. SCOTT, President. CHAS. CAMERON, Secretary.

Song—by Mr. J. O'Donnell—"The Irish Jaunting Car."

Several other Toasts were proposed and Songs sang, when the company separated.

Every one seemed to enjoy the occasion, parted pleased with each other and all the world beside, hoping to meet again.

Mr. CAMERON'S REMOVAL.

On Thursday evening last, a number of the friends of the Rev. Mr. Cameron invited that gentleman to a meeting in the Baptist Chapel, as an expression of the respect and esteem towards him on the occasion of his removal from this place to take charge of the congregation in Beamsville, from which he a short time ago accepted a call. There was quite a goodly number in attendance. After substantial justice had been done to the edibles, which had been liberally provided by the ladies of the congregation, the meeting was organized.

Mr. J. M. Dean, Principal of the Grammar and Union School occupied the chair. Speeches were made by the Rev. Mr. Roger and Mr. Stratton, in which the high qualities of Mr. Cameron as a laborer in the Christian vineyard were particularly brought out and dwelt upon. Mr. Roger was pleased to bear testimony to the diligence and zeal which had all along characterized Mr. Cameron in the discharge of those duties which had come under his immediate notice. Both of the speakers sympathized with the congregation in the loss they were about to sustain in the removal of so laborious and faithful a pastor. Mr. Cameron, also, made a few farewell remarks which were very appropriate and touching. We sincerely hope that the Rev. gentleman may be equally successful in gaining the love and esteem of his people in his new sphere of labor, as he has been here.—COM.

DRAMATIC ENTERTAINMENT.

The first performance of the Peterboro' Amateur Dramatic Club came off at the Town Hall on Friday evening last to as large and respectable an audience of Ladies and Gentlemen as we ever saw in the place. One great thing was the perfect order, there was none of that whistling, hooting or stamping, generally carried on at public gatherings. The entertainment commenced with the "Irish Attorney," the parts were well sustained, and up to the expectations of all. The closing of each act was received with rounds of applause. The stump speech was the best we ever heard, and stamps the professor as a first class performer. "Off to the Wars" was the farce played which is indeed a good one, being a burlesque on newspaper correspondents and the American war. We think it would have been better to have selected one where the parts were more equally distributed, and where so much of the play did not depend on one person, it must have been very hard for the gentleman to play Doddlewobble in the way in which he did, after the very heavy character in the "Irish Attorney. This is, however, merely a suggestion, and hope the club will excuse us for making it. The play was exceedingly well produced. Where the performing was so good it would be invidious to particularise or draw comparisons, neither do we intend to do so. We are satisfied that every person left the hall delighted with the evening's entertainment.

As will be seen by advertisement the club intend giving another performance on the 17th inst., for the same object, the plays to be produced will be "Charles II," in two acts, and the great farce of "Lend me five shillings," also, a stump speech by Prof. O. P. Stick-at-Toe.

It is reported that another craft similar to the Alabama, had sailed from Liverpool, to capture and destroy any vessels sailing under the American flag, and that another is said will soon follow.

The expenditure this year in the Northern States amounts to $570,841,700.

LANCASHIRE RELIEF FUND.

The following meetings will be held in Otonabee, in aid of the Lancashire Relief Fund:—

At Keene on Thursday the 4th inst., at 7 o'clock p. m., by the Rev. Messrs. Fowler and Andrews.

At Allandale Mills on Friday the 5th inst., at 7 o'clock p. m., by the Rev. Dr. Fowler.

Rev. Mr. Andrews will address meetings at the following places:—On Monday the 8th inst., at Dickson's School House, at 7 o'clock p. m.

On Tuesday, the 9th inst., at Simpson's School House, at 4 o'clock p. m. and at Esson's School House, at 7 o'clock p. m.

Dr. Cameron.

☞ This excellent Occulist and Aurist is about visiting our Town again. He sends us word that he will be in Peterborough, at the Huffman House, on the 9th inst., and will remain until the 13th. The Dr. gives his undivided attention to diseases of the Eye and Ear. He has performed some very striking cures, and the fact of his confining himself to this branch of medical science will necessarily inspire confidence in his ability. We like his candid and frank manner to those who apply to him. If he cannot effect a cure he states it at once. When a cure is doubtful he states the case fairly, gives his advice, and leaves the party to take his own way. We advise any one having any ailments of these valuable organs to visit the Dr. We are satisfied they will be pleased with him.

☞ To-day is Thanksgiving Day, appointed by the Governor to be kept as a Holiday, publicly returning thanks to the Almighty for the gifts of his providence, especially for the fruits of the ground and the blessings of peace.

It would be well when reviewing and enjoying the bounties vouchsafed us, to think of the numbers of our fellow subjects at home, literally starving for want of the necessaries of life, whilst we have enough and to spare. Let us give a portion of what we enjoy to relieve them in their distress. We hope that a large collection will be made at the various Churches for the poor suffering Operatives in Britain. "He that giveth to the poor lendeth to the Lord.—The liberal soul shall be made fat."

OMINOUS.—At the opening of the American Congress, and before the President's Message was submitted, a member offered a resolution which was adopted, instructing the Committee on Naval affairs to inquire into and report on the cheapest, most expeditious and reliable mode of placing vessels of War on Lake Ontario when the exigency may arise, and establishing water communication from other waters to the Lakes, and that the Committee report which of the various plans suggested may be most reliable, together with the time and cost of the works.

☞ In Cincinnati there are 1,257 Coffee Houses and Cigar Stores; 943 Groceries; 390 Boot and Shoe dealers; 284 Clothing Stores and Tailors' Shops; 266 Commission Merchants; 245 Lawyers; 216 Physicians; 187 Dry Goods Stores; 181 Cigar and Tobacco Stores; 150 Bakers; 147 Meat Stores; 140 Confectioners; 134 Barbers; 121 Carpenters and Builders; 105 Drug Stores, and 103 Blacksmiths.—Total 4,874.

☞ Prof. O'Leary has arrived in Town, he gives his first Lecture on Phrenology to-night, in the Town Hall. The Lecture is free. From Mr. O'Leary's reputation as a Phrenologist, we are satisfied the people of Peterborough and surrounding country will patronise him.

☞ The President's Message produced quite a sensation in New York commercial circles, causing gold to advance 3¼ per cent., and sterling exchange 4 and 5 per cent.

GREAT TELEGRAPHIC FEAT.—The President's Message delivered in Washington to Congress on the 1st, was published in full in the Toronto Globe on the morning of the 2nd.

HARDWARE.—R. Hamilton, advertises his Winter stock of Hardware; as it is direct from the manufacturers, bargains can be got from him.

☞ A Communication signed "Scribo," received too late for this issue, but will appear next week.

Epitome of News.

—The Government inquiry into the London Post Office has concluded. The commissioners left the city on Friday last.

Lord Palmerston, on the 20th ult., entered his 70th year. It was the custom to talk of the late Lord Grey as becoming Premier at a very old age, but he was only sixty-six when he took office, and sixty-eight when he carried the reform bill of 1812—that is ten years younger than Lord Palmerston is now.

—Col. Wiley was presented on Friday last with a very handsome silver cup and purse containing $550, by the Prince of Wales regiment of volunteer rifles at Montreal, of which corps he was formerly commander. The presentation ceremonies took place in the Crystal Palace before a large number of citizens.

INTERESTING DISCOVERY.—We learn, says the Quebec Chronicle, that several ancient pieces of gold and silver have been picked up on the shores of Amherst Island, one of the Magdalen group. The spot where they have been found is called "Money-Nubble Point," for it is not the first time that coins have been washed ashore there after a violent storm. The coins are French, bear date from 1580 to 1620, and proceed undoubtedly from some submerged wreck.

ARTEMUS WARD ON AUTUMN.—It is now the sweet, and season of the year, gentle Ortum. My little daughter is singing an entirely new song, called "Listee to the Mocking Bird. Guess you hain't got it in New York yet. She's been singing it to me about all the time, day and night, for the past four weeks, I think I'm going to like it. But I can't tell until it has become somewhat familiar to me. Yes, this is Ortum! And it is not sad to think that the leaves, now so beautiful and green, will soon wither and fade? It is not? I'll bet 'tis.

—Mr. Joseph Mooney has been appointed secretary and treasurer of the Ottawa and Prescott Railway, in the place of Mr. White, who recently resigned. Important improvements in the road are contemplated.

For the Examiner.

For and to the Ladies.

BY JUNIUS JUNIOR.

Ladies, a word with you. Give ear, and listen. Read the following remarks through, and draw your own conclusions. This is a great age; change and improvement are its grand characteristic features. Go where you will change after change meets your eye. Mountains are being leveled and valleys filled up; rivers are spanned, and canals and railroads everywhere vein the land. The things that were a few years ago, institutions are now deemed relics of the past. The old stage coach now no longer slowly lumbers on. The snorting iron steed has taken its place. The speediest way of sending letters no longer satisfies man. The fires of heaven tamed and harnessed by his skill and genius, now bear his messages with speed of thought from place to place. So on we might go, but it is not necessary. Such facts are patent to all; but is not only in the scientific and material world in which change and improvement have been at work and are still at work? They have been at work in the moral and educational world and in that of sentiment and thought, as as well. The time was, Ladies, when you were considered inferior of the lords of creation in intellect and those qualities which go to constitute what the world calls great. Opportunities given to man to develope and strengthen his mental powers were witheld from woman. Upon the field of action which man had wherein to display these powers when matured, she did not dare to intrude. The severer studies were a closed book to her so far as encouragement and opportunity were concerned. Her capabilities were considered limited, and she was only deemed fit for domestic duties. If she could bake, cook, mend, make pickles, &c., &c., (very important duties by the way, and which should be more attended to than they are), it seemed to make but little difference whether she knew anything more or not. That time was, we say, but thanks to increasing intelligence and fair play, it now no longer is past,—the black clouds of error, ignorance and prejudice in this respect have been chased away from the moral heavens by the increasing brightness of the sun of progress, and everything now wears a warmer and brighter aspect. A great change for the better, Ladies, has taken place. Woman now asserts her equality to man in intellect, and bases her claims to that equality upon a foundation deep and strong. History is on her side, and facts to substantiate her claims abound. She meets man upon equal footing, and throws down her gauntlet to them in token of her willingness and ability to do so. Is it in science she would compete? She points to a Somerville and the young Lady professor in the College of Bologna, deep in the mysteries of law, and a score of languages. It is in literature that will stir up and call forth the deepest feelings of the heart, and wield an influence as potential as fasting! She can point to a Stowe in Uncle Tom's Cabin, and a Browning in those noble and subtle effusions of her muse she has lately given to the world. Is it in errands of mercy and works of love, she would compete? She points to a Fry in the recesses of the prisoner's dark dungeon, and a Chisholm amid the wilds and still wilder inhabitants of Australia. Is it in travels and geography she would compete? She names a Pfeiffer. Is it in song? Who of the masculine kind will enter the arena with a Lind, or a Hayes. Is it in statesmanship and administration—provinces which man claims as peculiarly his own, woman would fain compete? She can point to Elizabeth with her strong mind and steady arm; and to Victoria, whose birthday has been celebrated throughout her wide domains in a manner which at once testifies the love and loyalty of her subjects, and whose late great sorrow has called forth the warmest sympathy of all, from the highest to the lowest in the land. Nor even in war is she without a rival to man. A Semiramis of ancient history, with her mighty conquests in the eastern world, proves this; and a Joan of Arc, the shepherd-maid, and deliverer of her country from the invaders yoke and the iron heel of oppression, is as deserving of a warriors bass and a patriot's fame, is as any hero whose name is found on the historic page. And so on we might go.

What think you of this, Ladies. Don't you think we have made out a good case for you? We have proved you just as smart and as great as men are, and all too without being asked to do so. We don't expect you all to be Semiramises or Brownings, Linds or Sommervilles, or Jonas of Arc. No such thing. But we do think many of you might have aims and a piratious higher than you have—might fit yourselves for higher duties and positions than now are yours. Just let us ask you in all kindness and candor, do you think enough of your own capacities and capabilities? Do you endeavor to improve them as much as you ought and might? Is it not a fact that our young Ladies, as a general thing, are but very superficially educated,—that they get a smattering of this and that, and a thorough knowledge of nothing. Is this right? At whose door does the blame lie? In the hour of need what avail can you make of your knowledge, is a question too, you all should ponder—both parents and daughters. Boys can rough it in the world, but when young females are left unprovided for, and thrown upon their own resources, it is quite another thing. But few avenues of earning their own livelihood are open for them, even at the best—however well qualified they may be. Hence it is upon the mind or the hands they must depend.

Which, young Ladies, if circumstances so required, would you prefer? By the latter you may with hard work, from sunlight to sunset, eke out a scanty pittance. By the former you can elevate yourself in society, and support yourselves easily and comfortably. No parent can give his daughters a better portion, or bequeath to them a more precious legacy, than a good sound education. Parents don't think of this enough. They are willing to deck and adorn the bodies of their daughters, but the higher and better interests of the mind are but partially regarded, if regarded at all. Mothers' would you increase your daughters' happiness and assist in making them more useful in after years? see then, when you have the opportunity and means, that you have them so educated that they may be able to discharge well the duties of any station in life they may be called upon to fill. Another thing should be remembered. As the moulding of rising generations is mainly in the mothers hands, how important it is that those who are mothers—or who may be mothers—should be intelligent, refined and virtuous—in a word, educated, which embraces the three. Ladies, may these few scattering, hastily written, and imperfect hints, be not entirely without effect. Draw your own conclusions. What can you do with your minds? What with your hands?

Narrow Escape.

A hair-breadth and providential escape from death by drowning occurred in the Village of Warsaw, on Monday the 24th inst. The following are the particulars: At dinner recess two of the school boys, Arthur Choat and David McFee, each about ten years of age, took it into their heads to have a stroll on the ice of the mill-pond. In this happy, school boy mood away they scampered on the ice, and all went well till they had reached about the deepest part of the pond, when Arthur Choat, who was foremost, instantly fell through the ice; then little McFee with great courage hastened to assist his companion, but in the act of doing so, fell through himself. Thus left the two little fellows plunging in the water among the fragments of ice, and quite unable to assist each other out of their perilous situation. In a short time McFee, who is a stout little fellow and can swim, managed to crawl out upon the ice and ran away to the shore screaming for help. At this moment the Teacher, Mr. White, and a young man, Mr. William Kidd, ran and both reached the Mill-pond at the same time, and with the greatest speed and promptitude they dashed in, but the fractured ice giving way in all directions they were plunged completely under water; as they are excellent swimmers, however, they soon gained the surface and made their way to where the boy was drowning. All this time little Arthur Choat had been struggling alone in the water, and, although he cannot swim, yet he managed by paddling with his hands, with wonderful perseverance, to keep his head partially above water, but just as his deliverers were approaching him the little sufferer became altogether exhausted and raising his hands above his head, he sank down. Then there was a feeling of intense excitement, for there was not a moment to be lost. The boy's hat at this time was floating on the water near where his body went down, and it was very difficult to know the exact spot to search, but Mr. Kidd by reaching his hands down under the surface of the water fortunately got hold of Arthur's hand, and, with Mr. White's help, carried him near the shore where others were ready to assist in the rescue, for by this time many of the villagers had assembled on the bank, or were down in the water rendering their aid, and it gives us much pleasure to add that the kind and humane efforts of all present cannot be too highly praised. The patient when brought ashore being insensible, and stiff with cold, was immediately conveyed to the nearest house, where, by applying the usual remedies, he recovered so rapidly that next day he was attending school. It is hoped that this narrative will be a warning to all boys who read it not to venture on the ice alone, especially at this season of the year when it is so unsafe. There is one thought connected with the incident which the writer begs the privilege of expressing, viz: it appears to us impossible to witness such a scene without raising in our own minds a purer feeling of benevolence towards the whole human race; for whatever misanthropists may say, there is something good in human nature after all. Man has a feeling of sympathy with his fellow man, and this Divine principle manifests itself in the time of deep suffering with the unerring precision of instinct.

AN EYE WITNESS.

Warsaw, Nov. 25, 1862.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

MR. EDITOR,—On last Saturday evening Prof. O. P. Sweet of Peterboro', who has, with great success, been teaching in this Village a class in Vocal Music, finished his course of instruction. Having conducted his class in a most gentlemanly and orderly manner, he has secured the confidence and esteem of all his pupils, who are highly pleased with his teaching and are most anxious to secure a continuation of his services. We sincerely hope he will conclude to remain for another term.

I am, Mr. Editor,

Yours truly,

A PUPIL.

Lakefield, Nov. 28th, 1862.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

MR. EDITOR,—I suppose that you, in common with all the English world, have heard of the Apostasy of the Missionary Bishop of Natal, from christianity; and supposing also, that yourself and many of your readers are interested in such matters, I beg to call your attention to one or two things that are well calculated both to relieve and instruct us in this miserable affair. Some of the expressions which this poor man employs savan a little of Popery, and give an air of importance to his statements, which otherwise they would not have, as for instance: that Enoch walked as closely with God before the Bible was given, as we do now. This is a mere fallacy—for if, as he says, the Bible be a fable, Enoch never walked with God at all. But I believe him to be merely a weakling, whose mind has given way, as some others have done, under the loneliness of his situation, and the overtaxing of his brain. From his own statement it appears that he never studied the Bible till he came to translate it into the Zulu language, and being overwhelmed by the marvellous record of God's wondrous condescension to our fallen race, he stumbled at the very threshold: as to how God brought the animals into the ark? how God could preserve men safe in the midst of a battle? how God could conduct the Israelites through the swelling Jordan? how God could tolerate Slavery? and such like questions which the merest fish-man could easily answer. What then would such a man make of the Creator of a gross material world by a pure spirit? of an eternal God becoming a Crucified Redeemer? of a holy God adopting into his righteous family, such a guilty thing as a fallen human being. It is plain that as such a method of judging, there could be no knowledge of a God, or of a Devil, or of a living soul, or even of a conscious body. This poor man has made shipwreck of Faith, like many others, by letting go a good conscience, in preaching what he did not believe, and in going to convert the heathen to the knowledge of a Book he had never studied. It is a mere misnomer to call this a new heresy, it is simply an apostasy from the true faith, and probably thro' mere mental weakness, from which, after rest and relaxation, by the help of God, he may recover through friendly consolation and humble prayer. The only thing I wonder at in this whole affair, is how such an unfit person was appointed to so difficult a task. But I suppose that those better fitted, bodily and mentally, were not so readily disposed to leave their comfortable homes and pleasant home duties: and thus the selection was simply a sign of the prevailing infidelity of the age in which we live. Would that the shock, the shame thus fallen upon the Church of England, and the bulwark of the Reformation, may rouse all her dormant energies to put a cut that leaven of mere formalism, which is destroying all her vital functions. If any have felt, by this failure, shaken in their minds as to the solid and immoveable basis of the Bible narrative, let them return to their quiet rest: for such occurrences are too common to excite any surprise, excepting as to the novelty of a Bishop thus giving way to such trivial scruples of conscience.

Trusting that some other will enlighten us more fully on the subject, if necessary, I remain, Mr. Editor,

Yours truly,

A BIBLE READER.

Peterboro', 29th Nov. 1862.

That's What's the Matter.

A Washington correspondent telegraphs the following.

The investigations into the Quartermaster's bureau have disclosed frauds and conned-ments. In one instance the Government is found to be charged with double the amount of grain received, the brother of the contractor being in the department. Col. Ingalls, Chief Quartermaster of the Army of the Potomac, drives a thousand dollar pair of horses, which, with an elegant carriage, were presented by a contractor.

In those few lines is an explanation of our military disasters. Too many military gentlemen are engaged in the work of fortune-making. They supply their own pockets instead of supplying the army. It is not only in Washington that chief Quartermasters get presents of thousand-dollar turnouts from contractors—it is so all over the country. All post positions pay immensely, when the Quartermaster chooses to make it so—and there are few who do not choose.

The robberies are immense, despite the law of Congress severely punishing such offences. And while this stealing is going on the army is suffering. While Colonel Ingalls, Chief Quartermaster of the Army of the Potomac, was springing behind the thousand dollar pair of horses, and in the elegant carriage presented him by a contractor, thousands of soldiers in that army were without blankets, without shirts, without socks, without shoes! If ever justice demanded the hanging of guilty parties, it demands now the hanging of a dozen or two of these thieving quartermasters.

But something else in the matter. The telegraph gives us an illustrative incident. Seely Lewis was caught while smuggling goods to the Rebels. As he in the act of passing through the lines it was presumed he intended carrying information to the enemy, or in other words was acting as a spy. He was tried by a military Commission, found guilty and sentenced to be hanged. The sentence had to be approved by the President. Father Abraham examined the case with all the sharpness of a lawyer. He came to the conclusion that the Commission was not authorised to try Seely Lewis as a spy, and he mitigated the sentence from that of death to six month's imprisonment.

So we go. It is easy to understand what's the matter.

A Resurrection.

About seven weeks since, a gentleman of about 60 years of age, named G. R. Lawrence, residing near Syracuse, N. Y., but at that Columbus, Ky., finding his health failing him rapidly, started for home, by way of Chicago, hoping to reach there ere he completely exhausted himself. On reaching this city, however, his sufferings had become so severe that reason forsook him, and he gave his trunks and checks into the charge of the baggage-master, while he wandered up into the city. SIR JAMES CLARKE'S

CELEBRATED FEMALE PILLS.

Prepared from a Prescription of Sir J. Clarke, M. D., Physician Extraordinary to the Queen.

THIS well known Medicine is no imposition, but a sure and safe remedy for Female Difficulties and Obstructions, from any cause whatever; and although a powerful remedy, it contains nothing hurtful to the constitution.

In all cases of Nervous and Spinal Affections, pain in the back and limbs, Heaviness, Fatigue on Slight Exertion, Palpitation of the Heart, Lowness of Spirits, Hysterics, Sick Headache, and all the painful diseases occasioned by a disordered system, these Pills will effect a cure when all other means have failed.

☞ These Pills have never been known to fail where the directions on the second page of pamphlet are well observed.

RELIEF IN TEN MINUTES.

BRYAN'S

PULMONIC WAFERS.

The most certain and speedy remedy ever discovered for all Diseases of the Chest and Lungs, Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Consumption, Bronchitis, Influenza, Hoarseness, Difficult breathing, Sore throat &c., &c., &c.

THESE WAFERS give the most instantaneous and perfect relief and when persevered with according to directions, never fail to effect a rapid and lasting cure. Thousands have been restored to perfect health who have tried other means in vain. To all classes and all constitutions they are equally a blessing and a cure—none need despair, no matter how long the disease may have existed, or however severe it may be, provided the organic structure of the vital organs is not hopelessly decayed. Every one afflicted should give them an impartial trial.

To Vocalists and Public Speakers, these Wafers are peculiarly valuable; they will in one day remove the most severe occasional hoarseness; and their regular use for a few days will, at all times, increase the power and flexibility of the voice, greatly improving its tone, compass and clearness, for which purpose they are regularly used by many professional vocalists.

FINKLE & LYON SEWING MACHINE COMPANY.

538 Broadway, New York.

TO parties little acquainted with the Finkle & Lyon Sewing Machines the careful perusal of the Company's Circuler is specially commended. This circular can be had on application. It is very specific, and will be found highly instructive, having been prepared with much care and we will abide by all statements therein made.

The following brief quotation is characteristic of the entire Circular:

"This Machine is better adapted than any other Sewing Machine in market to the frequent changes and almost endless variety of sewing required in a family; for it will sew from one to twenty thicknesses of Marseilles without stopping, and mark every stitch perfect. Will sew from the finest gauze to the heaviest cloth, and even the stoutest harness leather, without changing the feed motion or tension, or making any adjustment of machine whatever."

Thus have we successfully overcome the most difficult point in the Sewing Machine art. It was no ordinary triumph. Defiantly can we now say, "No other Machine compares with it in this respect." Hence, have we uniformity—almost without exception—when the highest premium, wherever the Machine has been properly exhibited by competition with other first class Sewing Machines. Hence it is that we are able to offer the following guarantee, viz.: "We warrant every Machine we sell to give BETTER satisfaction than any other Sewing Machine in the market, or money refunded." We never sell a Machine on any other terms. The guarantee is as reliable as the note of any business man in the land. For more than five years have we relied upon such facts for the reputation of our Machine; and without a single travelling agent in the field, there is scarcely a neighborhood on the continent where the Machine is not favourably known. We prefer such a reputation to one based on mere "talking points," as they are technically called in the trade. Hence we make but one kind of stitch, viz., the lock-stitch, alike on both sides, requiring only one-third the thread of other kinds of stitches.

N.B.—Local Agents wanted in every county throughout the West. ☞ Special inducements offered.

ANNUAL MEETING

INVESTIGATION REPORT - - - DECLARATION OF BONUS.

THE ninty-sixth annual Meeting of this Company was held within the Royal Hotel, Aberdeen on Friday, the 18th April

Alexander Stronach, Esq., of Drumallan, Chairman of the Ordinary Directors, in the Chair. There were submitted to the meeting—

1.—Report by the Directors, which, on the motion of the Chairman, was cordially and unanimously approved of and adopted.

2.—The Balance Sheet for the past year, with detailed states relative thereto, duly certified as correct, in terms of the Act of Incorporation, by the Chairman and Manager, and also by the Auditor.

There was also laid on the Table the various Valuation States in connection with the Quinquennial Investigation into the state of the Company's affairs, as at 31st January, 1862.

The following particulars derived from the Balance Sheet and States before-mentioned, show the result of the operations of the Company for the past year:—

Amount proposed for Life Assurance during the year, contained in 1189 Proposal	£454,685 0 0
Amount of Proposals accepted, and for which 981 Policies were issued	359,680 0 0
ANNUAL PREMIUMS or said Policies	11,170 1 0
CLAIMS BY DEATH including BONUSES on PARTICIPATION POLICIES, and after deducting Sums recovered from other Offices under guarantees	22,000 1 0
TOTAL SUM Assured under 4,759 current LIFE POLICIES	1,955,85 0 0
TOTAL ACCUMULATED FUNDS	373,862 3 2
TOTAL ANNUAL REVENUE	36,756 4 4

With reference to the recent investigation into the state of the Company's affairs, as at 31st January last, the Report States that both the principles of valuation and the details thereof, had been submitted to James John Downes, Esq., Actuary to the Economic Life Office in London, a gentleman well known as one of the highest authorities on such subjects in the kingdom, and had received his entire approval, as having been made on just and sound principles, and accurately carried out as certified in his report to the Directors, which formed part of the Appendix to their Report. This step the Directors considered could not fail to give the utmost confidence—both to the shareholders and the Policyholders—in the soundness and correctness of the valuation.

During the Quinquennial period, the claims by death, including the bonus additions which had been paid, and which had been considerably under the number that might have been expected from the Mortality Tables on which the Office rates are based, amounting to £93,975 6s 6d.

In valuing the Policies, each had been separately calculated, and nett premiums had only been used, thus leaving a surplus of annual revenue of £11,427 16s 7d., to meet future expenses and to form a source of profit for next investigation. The total amount of claims by death paid since the commencement of the Company, was £217,821 4s.

The Securities held by the Company were in a satisfactory position, and had been recently carefully scrutinized in detail by the Directors.

In conclusion, the Directors congratulated both the Proprietors and the Assured on the high position which the Company now occupied in the estimation of the public, and on the encouraging prospect of its business operations for the future.

DECLARATION OF BONUS.

From the profits realized on the Life business, a retrospective Bonus of £1 7s 6d per cent per annum for the Quinquennial period was declared, on the sums originally assured under all Participating Policies, increased by the previous additions thereto; also a further prospective Bonus of £1 per cent per annum, on the an ount of the Policies with said Bonuses, on all such of said Policies as may become claims by Death previously to the 31st January, 1867.

It will be observed, that this rate of Bonus is equivalent in the case of our older Policies to £1 14s per cent per annum on the original sum assured; that the total additions to the sum assured, now vest d, are equal to 32 per cent on the sum assured: and that as the younger ages the additions amount to upwards of 7s per cent of the premiums paid.

Statement showing the Progress of the Company's Business during the Quinquennial Period ending 31st January, 1862:

Year ending 31st January.	Amounts proposed for Assurance.	Amount of New Policies issued.	No. of Policies.	New Annual Premiums.	Total Revenue in each year.	Accumulated Funds.

FIRE INSURANCE.

THE following table compiled from the official returns, exhibits, at a glance, the increase of duty paid to the Government by the different Insurance Offices, metropolitan and provincial, during the year 1861.

THE "ROYAL."

It will be seen, stands as before, at the very head of the list, and maintains a rate of progress very far in advance of all its rivals and competitors. Twelve months ago, we had the gratification of recording the fact that its increase, in the year 1860, had been more than double that of any other company—had exceeded 20 per cent., of the entire increase of all the London offices combined—and had, also exceeded 30 per cent, of the aggregate increase of the remaining twenty eight provincial offices. We have now the pleasure of inviting the attention of our readers to the testimony of these later returns, which show that in the year 1861, the increase of the "Royal" was very nearly sixty per cent, in excess of the increase of any other company—that there were but three offices which came even within fifty per cent. of it, and that it was actually more than one-sixth of the entire increase of the remaining forty-four offices, London and Provincial put together. Comment upon such facts as these would be superfluous. They prove, unmistakably, the continued advance of the "Royal" in the confidence and good opinion of the public. That advance has been, from the beginning, as remarkable as it has been rapid; and we cordially congratulate the directors and shareholders upon it, because we regard it as the just reward of prudent management, of liberal and honorable dealing, and of undoubted stability.

Poetry.

CANADA.

O! Land of mighty forest, and land of swelling plains;
Rock, in the mountain-summit, with flakes of yellow grain—
Land of gigantic rivers, and lakes, like inland seas,
Where commerce spreads her canvas on many bumper the favoring breeze.

There's beauty in thy forests, when the spring sun kisses her flowers,
When merry May comes to us with its sunshine and its showers;
When all is joy and gladness, and melody and mirth,
And gloomy care, and sadness, seem all have left the earth.

There's beauty on thy rivers, on thy lakes, and on thy fields,
When sunny May has passed away, and spring to summer yields;
When all thy plains and forests are so beautifully green,
And the fervid sun, with dazzling rays, shines brightly o'er the scene.

There's beauty bright o'er all thy land, when autumn tints the leaves,
And reapers gen merry hand to bind the yellow sheaves:
Then hill and plain, and dale and dell are beauteous to behold,
When nature spreads her changing hues, of mingled green and gold.

There's beauty too, in winter, when the Frost king binds the earth,
And Christmas, and the New Year, come with gaiety and mirth;
And far away, by woods and streams, the pleasure-seeker sleighs,
With prancing steeds, and jingling bells, careering o'er the snow.

Though summer suns may fiercely glow, and winter's winds blow chill,
And far and near, the drifted snow, lies deep on vale and hill;
Yet there is pleasure, and content, in courage hot and hail,
For industry yields affluence and comfort unto all.

As civilization's pioneers, the sturdy peasants go
Into the deep recesses, to lay the forest low;
And there, secure, they make their homes far from the busy strife,
And turn out and confusion of active public life.

And cities, towns and villages, beside thy waters rise,
Where spires and domes, so gracefully, are pointing the skies;
And on the balmy summer air, so sweetly sinks and swells,
Borne onward by the pleasant breeze, the sound of Sabbath-bells.

The bridges, built across thy floods, are wondrous to behold
And nobler than the noblest pile that Egypt reared of old:
The iron horse will soon, and scream, and gallop over thy plains,
With thundering sound, where nature now in solemn silence reigns.

And man shall draw great riches from thy dark and lonely woods,
And make his vast resources aught of thy resplendent floods:
He will employ their mighty strength according to his will,
And bank it turn the mighty wheels of many a stately mill.

Land where the mighty cataract, with solemn ceaseless roar,
As surely as the march of time is rushing as evermore
And on the clouds above is borne, so quickly does ascend,
The lowest hope despised to man, by Mighty Power Divine.

Land, where the red man strayed, of yore, ere white men crossed the seas—
In savage independence, untutored, wild and free,
Thou lived, and loved and fought and died beside thy crystal streams;
But their happiness race is fading now, like forms seen in dreams.

Land, where in calm security, the stranger still may roam,
And where in lone obscurity, the exile finds a home—
The tears all fall of the slave, wherever he treats the soil,
Then, O! how very light to him, seems all life's heaviest toil!

What stormy revolutions shake Europe's social frame
Here, far beyond their influence We know them but by name:
And thrones may crumble in dust, and dynasties may fall,
And tyrants bind their chains anew—here we dread not their thrall!

And though our southern neighbors wage a fratricidal war,
The sound of the inhuman strife comes to us from afar:
Here nothing does annoy us, or disturb the passing hour,
But the lawful conflicts in pursuit of place and power

May Freedom, Anarchy and Strife never in thy plains appear,
But in their place dwell social love, all homes and hearts to cheer,
Let man respect his fellow man, whatever his degree,
And ever honour honest worth wherever it may be.

May Peace, Content and Harmony, for aye go hand in hand,
And Freedom and Prosperity still flourish in the land:
And never may behind Bigotry, its lot and form rear
To darken over with its shade, what Nature formed so fair!

Miscellaneous.

The Heroism and Horrors of the Perryville Battle Field.

"Lochiel," the correspondent of the Louisville Journal, gives the following picture of the late battle-field in Kentucky:

The bravery and the heroism were unparalleled. Of hundreds of such instances, I give a few: One Illinois regiment of Federal troops stood on the crest of a hill until all the field officers had fallen, and there was no one to command; their ammunition was all expended, and that they died like Romans on their post, is proven by the fact that the next morning, after sunrise, I counted 44 of them lying shot dead in the forehead or through the heart in their exact straight line of battle, with their arms at their sides. There were 450 more men lying in the same straight line, proving that number had been too severely wounded to carry their arms to the rear when ordered back. There were 50 more lying dead in the same field with their arms beside them, shot before they gained the cover of the next hill, and the enemy checked by the reserve regiment.

One regiment of Federal troops from Michigan stood in line of battle awaiting the storm. At the first close volley it en standard was shot away, and the flag torn to shreds. The soldiers beside the standard-bearer caught and flung up in the air the tattered remains of the star-and stripes, until there was no heap of 16 men shot on the spot. When the broken remnant of the regiment fell back, they carried all the tattered fragments of the old symbol as carefully as a mother enfolds her child.

The standard of the 79th Pennsylvania Infantry was shot down six times, and as often reared aloft, and when forced from the field the colonel carried it off.

The 9th Pennsylvania Regiment of Cavalry, sent out three times, in solid columns to draw the fire of the different batteries of the enemy that was enclosed—was raised upon by some batteries with every conceivable artillery missile. With no orders to move, and unable to return the long range fire, they sat on their horses like statues, in the rear. When ordered off the field, each time they went off at a slow parade walk, disdaining to stultify a trot, after receiving fire for two hours.

One Federal regiment, the 16th Michigan, and a Georgia Rebel regiment, met in line of battle in open field. They quietly planted their standards at opposite distance from each other, and stood and looked, aimed and fired. Both flags were shot down, the Georgia regiment almost totally destroyed, and their leader captured.

In front of the destroyed Illinois regiment was a worm fence, from which the Rebel soldiers took such deadly aim that nearly every fence corner lay a dead or wounded Rebel soldier; the fence was fired by the bursting shell in the middle of the fearful night that our eyes—in the ashes of the fence lay a scorched and blackened mass of humanity, a roasted mass, and to all appearances, from their struggles, many of them only wounded when the fire caught them. The death of our poor men, even with all the agonies of thirst upon them, in the scorching sun-shine and the dust and the chilling of the long, cold October night, was merciful compare! with the tortures these men met in the slow but sure approach of the flames creeping along the fence to the spot where they lay writhing. A flock of sheep were in the field; the carcasses of the dead ones lay scattered about, and the wounded ones crept into the same fence corners with the men, and men and beast were roasted and charred together.

The terrible inhumanity of the commanders of the Rebel army is proven by the fact that on the battle ground about our second line of battle. They had possession of the part of the field, and held it on if they retreated at day dawn. During that time these dead and living were literally roasted (it is the actual, horrible fact) Our dead, and many of our wounded, lay their stripped by them of all their rich hats, and shoes, and some of their pants and in the morning they raised their heads with ghastly chattering jaws, unable to speak, and fell back senseless. There was many a wounded man who was stripped who had the life frozen out of him on that bleak hill-side on the cold October night when it required blankets or a fire to keep a sound, well-clothed man comfortable.

The enemy carried, through the day and night, his thousands upon thousands of wounded to his rear, crowding and crushing them into Perryville to overfill wing, and into every farm house, shed and stable within three miles of his line of battle. Gardens and orchards were strewn with them. As usual, the brave commanding brought a rain; the evening of the 9th was cold and chilly—piercing to the very bone. I went to one of their hospitals on the morning of the 10th. The house, sheds, yard and garden were crowded to overflowing with crushed and wounded Texans and Georgians strewn around on the cold, wet straw and earth, with a poor tattered blanket for covering, to keep off the pelt ings of the pitiless storm through the late night. Poor human nature could not withstand the chilling air that pressed he vitality out of them, and in the morning I saw two long rows of white corpses awaiting the soldiers' hasty burial and I was confident, as with chattering teeth the poor sufferers begged to have their blankets dried at the fire, that the cold night air had slain as many as our bullet had done.

The miserably weak Rebel hospital force left to cope with the awful work before them were totally unable to attend to them with as many of the hospitals but death was fast making their work less. The amputated legs and arms were lying piled up like cord wood.

The Federal dead were all buried by their comrades on the 9th and 10th. On the morning of the 10th, I estimated three thousand dead Rebel soldiers lying on the right, center, and left, to an extent of six miles of the line of battle, their comrades marching off leaving them unburied—never even sending in a flag of truce asking us to give them sepulchre. They were then lying mangled and torn, festering and putrifying, and the hogs devouring them! It is the actual horrible fact!

The citizens of Perryville then began to bury them to prevent a pestilence; but there are hundreds of them lying where they crawled to die, between the logs and in the ravines and nooks and ledges of rocks, that will never be found until the last trumpet will sound, when, if their consciences does not smite them before, these gaunt skeletons will rise up in judgment before these unchristian and inhuman men—before the chiefs and leaders of this bloody rebellion, who cursed their backs on their suffering and unburied men, and held high church at Hardensburg next day, where with backs well clothed and stomachs well filled, were congregated Bragg and Smith, Hardee and Cheatham, Buckner, Marshall and Morgan, and last, but not least on the list of names, Leonidas Polk, late Bishop, not even asking for their dead a little earth for charity."

Remarkable Works of Human Labor.

Nineveh was 14 miles long, 8 wide, and 46 miles round, with a wall 100 feet high, and thick enough for three chariots abreast. Babylon was 50 miles within the walls, which were 75 feet thick and 100 high, with 100 brazen gates. The temple of Diana, at Ephesus, was 420 feet to the support of the roof. It was one hundred years in building. The largest of the pyramids is 481 feet high and 653 feet on the sides; the base covers eleven acres; the stones are about 60 feet in length, and the layers are 208. It employed 330,000 men in building. The labyrinth in Egypt contains 300 chambers and 12 halls. Thebes in Egypt, presents ruins 75 miles round, and 100 gates. Carthage was 29 miles round. Athens was 25 miles round, and contained 350,000 citizens and 400,000 slaves. The temple of Delphos was so rich in quotations that it was plundered of $50,000,000, and Nero carried away from it 200 statues. The walls of Rome were 13 miles round.

At a recent festival, a boy who did not get a fair chance at the edible, said some of the voracious visitors had been starving their children of late, in consideration of the feast, that they were hollow all the way down, for he could hear the first mouthfuls they swallowed strike on the bottom of their boots."

A Master Explosion.

"One of the editors of the Milwaukee News—Pomeroy—then relates his experience of Skating." We think it not improbable this editor may use themselves through pomeroy's channel)

"Right beneath one of our windows, from morning till midnight, we see youngsters full of spirit twisting their legs into all conceivable shapes. We can just pick up a paper but an article on skating" meets the eye. Everybody says it's fine, and it's all 'everybody' knows about it. Last night, about gas-light time, after reading a glowing description of life on skates, we prepared for our first attempt, and sallied forth to join the merry crowd. We had on a pair of stout boots, trowser legs tucked inside, a Robert Emmet coat, and white hat. We went down on the ice, and gave a boy two shillings in good coin of the realm for the use of his implements. We have confidence even as Peter's faith. We, with his assistance, on a tread, knelt on the skates, and stood erect, like a barber's pole.

"Encouraged at the sight of some ladies on the bridge looking at the skaters, we struck out. A stunt to the right with the right foot, and just then we saw something on the ice and stopped to pick it up. On our feet again—two slants to the right and one to the left, accompanied with a lobs of confidence. Another stride with the right foot and we sat down with fearful rapidity, with very little if any elegance! What a set down it was—for we made a dent in the ice not unlike a Connecticut butternut! Just then one of the ladies exclaimed, 'Oh, look, Mary, that fellow with the bloated hat ain't got the skates on the right place of his'n to, thought we. Just then a ragged little imp sang out, as he passed us, Hobbs, old timber legs! and we arose suddenly, and put after him. There slides to the right, two to the left, and away went our legs—one too the east, and the other to the west, causing us an immense figure in our pants, and another picture of the butter tray in the cold—oh, how cold! Then the lady we knew who was one by the rounds and made—again spoke and said, 'Oh, look, Mary, that chap has sat down on his handkerchief, to keep from taking cold!' So we sat about as graceful as a salt-water, when Mary said, 'Guess that a handkerchief, Jane,' and Mary was right. It wasn't a handkerchief—but a bit of it! Just then a friend came along, and proffered us assistance as a standee. We accepted the continuation of his garment, and by the time we went about ten rods, were a boy to the right by the leader caused us the wheel house, to shoot off on a tangent, heels up! But the ice is very cold this season!

"We tried it again. A glide one way, a glide and a lift the other, when 'whack!' came our bumps of Philoprogenitiveness on the ice, and we saw a million of stars dancing round our eyes, like a troupe of ballet girls at the Bowery Theatre. How that shock went through our system, and up and down our spinal column! La Hache couldn't have cork-screwed it down a greased eel-leg with greater speed and more exhilarating effect. Boarding house butter on a mahogany table could not have stood stronger than we did—and a dozen ladies looking at us and our 'fine steel' pants!

"Hello, old cock!" sang out those ragged imps again, and we were in pieces. Soon we got up and made another trail with better success. Perhaps we had skated, in our peculiar style fifteen feet, when a blundering chap came up behind, and as we sat down with our tired head pillowed in his lap, and his sweated stump under it, was all his own fault! Every a st where we made our debut on the ice—oh, how cold it was! Our bear skin drawers were no protection at all!

We tried again for the papers all say it's fun, and down came our Roman-Grecian nose on the cold jalap material, and the little drops of crimson ran down our shirt bosom, and on the cold ice. Once more we tried skating, made for the shore, sat down, and counted damages.

"Two shillings in cash thrown away. Seven tattered and one 'frontal' bumps on these. One numerous figure as handsome as a pair of ten dollar cassimeres as man ever put his legs in. One rupture in the lower, extending to the bone. Four buttons from our vest, a 'fragmented' watch crystal, and the back-seather, big enough to divide among the children of Israel. If you catch us on the smooth, glassy, chilly, freezing, treacherous, deceitful slippery, and slippery ice again, you'll know it! If any one ever hears of our skating again, they will please draw on us at sight for the brushes and accompanying documents. We have got through skating. It's a humbug. It's a vexation of spirit, of business, of flesh, and matter of trousers! It's a head-bumping, back-aching, leg-weaning, indigenous institution, and we warn people against skating. We tried it, and shan't be able to walk for a month. Skating skates are a humbug, and all the rascally youngsters wish to get the lower at it, that they may

DR. RYERSON AND VAGRANT SCHOOLS.

It will be remembered that about two years ago the Chief Superintendent of Education went through the country giving lectures on School matters, but especially submitting proposed alterations in the school system, which he was anxious to obtain an opinion upon. These alterations consisted in having the Grammar Schools, in each County, supported and controlled by the County Council, and a measure giving power to Municipalities, when they had established free schools, to enforce the attendance of all children of school age at school. The result of his tour and of the expression he received, we have never learned; but all the alterations made in the School Act are merely some matters of detail.

Last Session of Parliament he introduced a measure for the establishment of ragged or vagrant schools, under denominational control. The matter fell through with the fall of the Cartier-McDonald Ministry.

He has recently addressed a circular to the Boards of Trustees in Towns and Cities, inviting an expression of their opinion on the subject of the truant children's education in Cities and Towns. We give the circular:—

"GENTLEMEN,—I beg to call your serious and earnest attention to the condition of those children in cities and towns who do not attend any school, public or private.

I had hoped that when the public schools should be made free in our cities and towns, no person in them would be found to refuse or neglect availing themselves of such a privilege, faculty, and indugement to educate their children. I confess the results of the trial have come short of my expectation. Very considerable numbers of children in these centres of population are growing up with no other education than a training in idleness, vagrancy and crime. The existence of such a class in any community is a public loss and danger, and ominous of future evil.

It is perfectly clear, that making good so ools free to all does not secure the education of all.

I have, at different times, submitted three propositions or plans for the accomplishment of the object of free schools in cities and towns. First,—That as the property of all is taxed for the common school education of all, all should be compelled to allow their children the means of such education, at either public or private schools. Or, secondly, that each municipality should be empowered to deal with the vagrancy of children of school age, or the neglect of their education, as a crime, subject to such penalties and such measures for its prevention, as each municipality, in its own discretion, might from time to time adopt. Or, thirdly, that the aid of religious benevolence should be invoked and encouraged to supplement the agency of our present school system.

Neither of the two former propositions having been entertained by the Government to whom they were submitted, I proposed the last in a draft of bill, accompanied by an explanatory letter last year. The members of the Government before whom this measure was laid, retired from office before taking it into consideration, and I have not renewed it to the present Government. There is, therefore, now no proposition under the consideration of Government in respect to children whose school education is wholly neglected.

I beg, therefore, to solicit your practical attention to the subject; and shall be happy to receive and consider any suggestions you may think proper to offer, before bringing the subject again under the consideration of the Government."

I have the honor to be, Gentlemen,
Your obedient Servant,
E. RYERSON,
Chief Superintendant.

Two years ago, he stated that he was satisfied that the establishment of free schools did not meet the case—compulsory enactments were required to force children to school—but we were not aware till now on reading the circular, that he ever proposed to treat the neglect of a child's education as a crime, and to empower municipalities to inflict pains and penalties on a parent or guardian guilty of such neglect. It would make the world stare, if in this free Canada of ours, such a measure should find place in the Statute Book. It would be going back to the days of the Star Chamber, and Bishop Laud. No government in this age would entertain such an absurd measure, and it excites no wonder that such an arbitrary measure was thrown out. But the suggestion stamps its author as a tyrant, and as unworthy of public confidence in the position he occupies.

The proposition of Denominational Schools having been ably commented on all over the country, and tabooed, the Chief Superintendant has abandoned all hope of success in his utopian notions, and on sober advise of the Trustees in Cities and Towns. We observe by the Review that the circular was submitted at the last meeting of the Board in this Town, and that Mr. White, a member of the Board, gave notice of a motion, intended as a reply to the circular, and which will be debated at the next meeting of the Board. We do not intend noticing the proposed motion, as we have no idea that in its present shape it will pass, but we notice the editor's remarks on the circular, and it gives us pleasure to find that the scales are falling from his eyes. He says, commenting on Dr. Ryerson's proposition to place the vagrant and vicious children of cities and towns under denominational control, "the adaptation of a Section for a Common School, is a consummation most devoutedly to be deprecated." It is clear from the above that he begins "to see men as trees walking." A few steps further and he will "see every man clearly." Now we should imagine that these outcasts whom the Dr. is so anxious to get under the ritual of christian benevolence, and who certainly need a christian training, would not be so ruthlessly and so determinedly shut out by one so anxious to have denominational State Colleges, and religious oversight for young men and young women. And why is he so afraid of "Christian Pastors" having possession and control of the poor vagrant children? He tells us "the desire to proselytize might effect that which the more spirit of benevolence has failed to effect, but exertion prompted by such a motive would be exceedingly apt to bring in its train, evils quite as great as those which it sought to cure." Such language, if used by the advocates of a non-sectarian, non-denominational system of public instruction for the entire youth of our country, would be perfectly consistent, but emanating from an out and out advocate of State endowed Denominational Colleges, is passing strange. It is another proof, if more were wanting, of the inconsistency of the Review. Tho' differing from the Doctor in the matter of Denominational Ragged Schools, the editor of the Review unites with him in the thumb screwing system. "The true plan, we believe, to be that of compelling the education of all." We believe nothing of the kind, and we have no fear that so tyrannical and unjust a system will ever deface the Statute Book of our fair land. We have no desire to recede in the march of civilization. The unfortunate countries of Europe which groan under the exactions of the State usurping the place of the parent, or indeed, of a higher power, are labouring to be delivered from these unjust and galling exactions,—yet we have among us men who point to such countries as examples for us to copy after. Dr. Ryerson himself pointed Prussia as adopting the theory he wished to see adopted here that the State should educate its children.

Now whilst conscientiously opposed to State and Church, and equally so to State Denominational Education, whether higher or lower, we are free to confess that grave difficulties present themselves in the subject under consideration. It is more easily to find fault with a plan than to suggest one. Fortunately we have none or next to none of the class referred to, in our Town, and consequently we are not so directly interested in the question. In large cities there are numerous other evils existing besides vagrant children running at large, which are very difficult to reach. Christian benevolence has been found, if our observations have been correct, the most efficient means of alleviating the evils consequent upon the collection of large numbers of people into one locality.

The Government have no more right to enforce the attendance of children at school than they have to compel their parents to attend church.—Have as much right to enforce morality as religion. It is competent for a people to empower its Government to enforce conformity in matters of religion, and punish those who abjure the national faith. It is also competent for a people to support a Government in passing laws which inflict death upon the crimes of forgery and theft as well as for leaving the established religion. Our legislature may pass a measure empowering Municipalities to punish by fine and imprisonment those chargeable will the neglect of their children's education. But would all this be right? The advocates of compulsory education would denounce the former as unjust, wicked and cruel. In our father land, within fifty years, forgery and larceny were capital offences, punishable by death. In many countries of Europe today it is a crime to abandon the religion of the State. And Dr. Ryerson and the Review would desire to make it equally a crime to neglect State education, and subject the offenders to pains and penalties. If this is not retrograding we know not what is. It is an unwarrantable interference with with the liberty of the subject—an assumption of a false hypothesis, leading to interminable difficulties, and betokening a superficial acquaintance with the relations of man to man, and man to his God. We feel sure that the compulsory feature of the system will not be entertained, and trust the denominational feature proposed by the Dr. will fall through.

☞ Professor O'Leary is entertaining the inhabitants of the Town with his Lectures. He has given three free Lectures, and began on Monday his regular course. On Monday and Tuesday night he publicly examined some of our leading men, and gave a very correct description of their traits of character. His lectures were on Digestion, and the Lungs and Throat. He recommends for good health out of door exercise, ventilation of rooms, good nourishing food, plenty of sleep and exercise. Exercise, tea, coffee, pastry, pickles and cakes. As for swine's flesh he considers it the very worst description of food. The Professor, from his aversion to pork, might lead to the supposition that there is something of the Jew in him. Seriously we regret that in this pork country he has spoiled our relish for a nice piece of pork or ham.

ERRATTA.—In noticing the Amateur Dramatic entertainment last week, we omitted to mention that Mr. Philp's Quadrille Band, was present, and added greatly to the enjoyment of the evening.

We also committed in our report of the St. Andrew's Dinner, to notice the manner in which the tables were spread, we must say that it was the best dinner ever got up in Peterboro, and Mr. Cross, Proprietor of the "Maple Leaf" Saloon, deserves great credit.

THE Proprietor of the Montreal Witness has issued the Prospectus for a new volume. Among other improvements we observe an enlargement of the semi-weekly edition.

We have before expressed our unqualified approval of this very excellent family and general newspaper.

We continue our humble testimony of its excellence, and adaptability to the Country generally.

We again advise every family in the land, to take the Semi weekly edition. In no way that we know of could two dollars be so well invested.

The Commencement of the year offers a desirable opportunity to subscribe for it. The terms are invariably payment in advance.

☞ We would remind our readers that the second entertainment of the Peterboro' Amateur Dramatic Company takes place in the Town Hall, on Tuesday evening next.

THE Counties Council met in Special Session yesterday. Full proceedings will be published next week.

THE large sum of $50,000, has been raised in New York city, in aid of the Lancashire Operatives.

—The political prisoners confined in Fort Lafayette, near New York, were discharged on Friday last, including Mr. Pierre Soule, of New Orleans.

THE GREAT EASTERN STEAMSHIP.—Unlike any other exhibition, we believe the sight of this noble vessel has given good satisfaction to the thousands of persons who travelled to Quebec to view her, and well repaid them for their outlay; and it is just so with the "Canadian Pain Destroyer" there never was anything that gave such satisfaction, it relieves pain almost instantly, and is the finest thing in the world for rheumatism, neuralgia and Pain in the stomach, &c. 25 cents will buy a bottle of it. Sold by all Medicine Dealers.

FRANCE AND ENGLAND.—It cannot be denied that things do look a little squally over the waters. At all events, we hope sincerely that our country will remain neutral in the matter. Further, if a war should break out between France and England, we hope, for humanity's sake, the armies will be well supplied with Bryan's Pulmonic Wafers to cure their coughs and prevent consumption. Price 25 cents, sold by all Medicine Dealers.

The New York Merchants and the Lancashire Operatives.

A largely attended meeting was held on Thursday in the Chamber of Commerce, New York, to open a fund for the relief of the Lancashire Operatives. Mr. A. A. Low presided in the course of the proceedings, the following letter was read:—

New York, Dec. 3, 1862.

Messrs. Royal Phelps, Charles H. Marshall, and others. Committee of Chamber of Commerce.

Dear Sirs,—Having in view the lamentable condition of Lancashire, England, which is owing in no slight degree to the unfortunate struggle on this side of the water, we propose through your highly respectable and influential Committee, that a national subscription be solicited for the purchase of a cargo of food to be sent to our suffering friends abroad. We say friends, because these people have shown a forbearance and a consideration for the North which some in higher positions have not evinced.

This donation should be intended not only as a relief to her suffering subjects, but as a token of our respect for the Queen, and of her friendship for the United States. We are of the belief that her regard for the opinions, and her firmness in adhering to the advice of her excellent husband, Prince Albert, alone prevented a rupture between Great Britain and this country.

As an earnest of our desire to further this cause, in behalf of ourselves and others, owners of a new ship now at Boston, we tender her entire capacity, 1,800 tons, for the conveyance of the supplies, and our services, if needed, to forward them free from charge for freight, the ship to be delivered to us at Liverpool.

With great respect, your ob't servants,
N. L. & GEO. GRISWOLD.

Mr Dodge.—I understand, In conversing with some merchants, that that is virtually a contribution of from $15,000 to $20,000. The thanks of the meeting were voted to the Messrs. Griswold.

A letter which had been handed to the President a few minutes previously, was read as follows:—

New York, December 4, 1862

To the Chairman of the Committee for rendering aid to the Operatives of Lancashire.

Dear Sir,—I rejoice to see that our people are about to open the doors of our bursting granaries to send relief to the starving operatives of Lancashire. The poor fellows have acted nobly; famishing men, surrounded by their wives and little ones, "faint and at the point to die," will not join the clamour of interested leaders. The value of our unity as a nation is well understood by them, and they refuse to part with their birthright in this land of promise. We offer them freely a welcome and a homestead and now that the blow aimed at our existence has fallen upon them too, shall we who feed and heal those who aimed that blow, when war brings them into our power, refuse these poor innocent sufferers a helping hand in this winter of our calamity? No. Thank God we have bread and to spare; and they will not say, "I was hungered and you gave me no meat." Will you add to your list "one thousand barrels of flour" from one whose loaf will taste the sweeter for sharing it with a famished brother, and brand it.

UNION."

Accompanying the above were seven one thousand dollar bills, which seemed to give an inspiration to those present, and in a few minutes the following sums were collected:—

"Union," $7,000; Babcock, Bros. & Co., $2,000; Phelps, Dodge & Co., $5,000; J. T. Johnston, Sec'y, $2,500; James Nesmith, $1,000, Richard D. Ely, $500; A. A. Low & Bros.; $1,000; Henry Weston, 100; Smith S. Eastman, $500; John J. Hindman & Co., $100; Capt. C. H. Marshall, $2,000; Brittan Bros., $250; E. E. Morgan, $1,000; John Jay, $250; S. B. Crittenden, $1,000; J. W. Paige & Co., $1,000; Jonathan Sturges, $1,000. Total, $26,200.

Dr. McGovern, who was present during the proceedings, said that he had been chairman of the Fourth of July committee in London this year, during the excitement of the Trent affair, and he could assure those present, from his knowledge of the English operatives, they were not about to bestow their aid on enemies.

Marvellous Affair.

Some of the Parish Journals relate the following extraordinary history:—About a dozen years ago a man, rather shabbily dressed, but bearing an air of distinction, entered a cafe of modest appearance in the Faubourg St. Germain, and asked for a cup of coffee and a roll. This he swallowed rapidly as if pressed by extreme hunger, and then slowly retired, without, however, seeming to avoid the demand for payment. The waiter, stupified, hastened to inform his mistress, a widow burdened with a family, but a kind-hearted woman, of what had taken place. The latter who had observed the air of dejection of the stranger, immediately replied, "It is all right, I know the gentleman." The next day the stranger, returned asked for the same things and paid in the same manner without paying. This continued for about two months, after which he was seen no more. About a month ago the widow was invited to call upon a notary to receive a sum of money which had been left to her by will. She could not believe her good fortune, and thought there must be some mistake, when the notary afforded her an explanation by reading the following extract from a will which he held in his hand:—"I bequeath 60,000f. to the widow———, proprietress of a cafe (giving the address) to thank her for her generosity in giving me a breakfast every day for two months, without demanding payment, which it was then impossible for me to make. I was then in misery, but since, fortune having smiled on me, it is only just that I should pay for the 60 breakfasts to which I owed my life."

QUAKERS COURTSHIP.—"Martha, does thee love me?" asked a quaker youth of one at whose shrine his heart's holiest feelings had been offered up. "Why, Seth," replied she, "we are commanded to love one another, are we not?" "Ay, Martha, but does thee regard me with the feeling that the world calls love?" "I hardly know what to tell the, Seth. I have greatly feared that my heart was an erring one. I have tried to bestow my love on all, but I have sometimes thought, perhaps, that thee was getting far more than thy share."

THE GREAT QUESTION OF THE DAY.—A schoolmaster had an examination of his pupils before some of the Cork Council, prominent amongst whom was the celebrated Mr. Bernard Sheahan. "First class come up," said the master. "What is the great question of the day, Tim Doolan?" Tim hesitated. "Don't you know it, sir?" "Yes, sir," said Tim. "Well, then, what is it?—speak up." "How are your poor feet, sir?" said the lad. The Cork Council shook laddie.

Seward.

The eyes of the nation are now turned toward the Secretary of State—not that a great deed, which will relieve the distraction of the country, is expected from him, but, on the contrary, that he is suspected of being more than any other citizen, the author of our woes. The letter of Mr. Buchanan, defending himself from the charges of Gen. Scott, promises to be the opening wedge to expose hidden political secrets, which will astound the loyalty of the country.

Mr. Seward made immense sacrifices of wealth and honor to be the Republican candidate for President in 1860. All the demoralized appliances known to political society, were put into full operation by his friends at Chicago, and so desperate were the exertions made in his behalf that up to the very day of the nomination, they bid well to be successful. No sooner, however was Mr. Lincoln nominated than it was decided that Mr. Seward should be his principal adviser. Immediately after the election, he obeyed a summons to Springfield, and no doubt his voice was potent, in the formation of Mr. Lincoln's Cabinet, and of the policy which was to govern the Administration.

It is now developed that while engaged in shaping the policy of the new Administration, Mr. Seward was the adviser of President Buchanan. He was consulted as to every step, every movement every measure; and gave his hearty indorsement to that timidity, cowardice, and want of action, which built up and strengthened the rebellion and brought upon the Administration the curses of the people. This statement has been put forth, and not denied by Mr. Seward. We are promised the development in full by an unquestionable authority.

With this knowledge, we can readily comprehend the failure of Mr. Lincoln's administration to conduct the war with vigor and success. Mr. Seward is the leading spirit of the administration. Long before the inauguration, he had ingratiated himself into the affections of Mr. Lincoln. At Springfield, before, as well as at Washington, after the inauguration, Father Abraham always swore by Seward, and to this day the wily New Yorker—to use a vulgar phrase—can wind the President around his thumb. He has been "the power behind the throne"—the mind that swayed the deliberations of the White House.

Exerting this power, he has drawn the Administration into the precise policy, that whirled Buchanan out of the Presidential chair amid the execrations of the country. He has simply kept the government on the defensive, and managed to so waste the resources of the country, as to enable the Rebels, after nearly two years of warlike, to strengthen their cause. The war policy of this administration is almost similar to that of Mr. Buchanan's. The long delay before Manassas was but a repetition of the failure to reinforce Sumpter. Buchanan hesitated to attack, and commence the war. Lincoln hesitates to attack, to end the war. If Seward suggested the one, he has compelled the other.

It is no secret that in the cabinet, Seward is McClellan's prop. The General's mode of conducting the war suits him. He moves slowly, and fights indecisive battles. He sacrifices life immensely, without accomplishing results. He misses his opportunities, and permits the enemy to take advantages of theirs. That suits Seward, and Seward will have no other general. The President has time and again, expressed his dissatisfaction of McClellan's very conservative tactics, but the moment the President commences to grumble, in pops Seward, and Seward controls the President. And thus, weeks, months, seasons, years pass away, and the war is still on the Potomac.

During his career as Secretary of State, Seward has been full of hopeful promises. At one time, we think it was about a year ago, he assured the public in a serenade speech that within sixty days the war would be at an end. He has frequently intimated that within ten days "a great movement," would take place that would decide the contest. In possession, as he was, of all the State secrets, these promises were accepted as realities, and were believed until the country lost all hope, not only in Seward, but the whole Administration. Was it Seward's purpose to dishearten the loyalty of the country? Or what could be his object.

Previous to the war, Seward was, to all appearance an inveterate hatred of slavery. He originated the "irrepressible conflict," and held that the time was near at hand when the final struggle between universal liberty and American slavery, must be fought. He was for aggressive measures on the question of slavery, and even sustained the "higher law." During the fearful congressional excitement of the winter of '60 and '61, he would not abate one jot or tittle of his aggressive warfare upon slavery.

After he became Prime Minister, however, when the civil war was really upon us, and the day of compromise was gone forever, then he suddenly grew "conservative." This has grown on him. He would spare the rod to the spoiled child recently christened Dixie. He would have treason treated with great leniency, and only so much of Southern soil occupied by loyal troops as can be occupied without serious bloodshed. He would not crush out the Rebellion, but coax it to an end. It is said that he became so exceedingly conservative that he opposed with might and main the Emancipation Proclamation, but by some mysterious intervention of Providence the President for once overruled Seward, and followed the dictates of his own conscience. Seward submitted, but sought revenge in the coming elections.

He would not sustain the Administration ticket, or gave it a very cold support. If he could have saved the State for the Administration he would not do it. He points to Seymour's 10,000 majority as a vindication of his policy.

Such has been Seward's inconsistent and strange career. Vindictively opposed to compromise when compromise was possible, and warmly espousing it when it is not possible. Throwing his whole influence toward producing civil war, and when the war comes opposing all measures calculated to speedily end it with a triumph of the Union.

An enemy of the South, until the South became an enemy of the Union, when his influence is thrown against the only policy that will conquer the Rebellion. He advised Buchanan into shame and disgrace; he has led Lincoln into a sacrifice of the National honor.

Now what can be his object or his purpose? Is he in favor of a dissolution of the Union? Or, having been largely instrumental in producing the war, does he covet the fame of Clay, and purpose to be the great compromiser who shall heal the National difficulties? But, no matter what be his purpose, the country may well want to be rid of him now and for all time to come. We have had enough of his statesmanship.

It is now denied that there still exists in Washington treason against the Union. Many of the plans for the successful prosecution of the war have been frustrated in consequence. The circumstances are such that it is positive that this treason exists in or near the very highest stations. We hope now that the letter of Mr. Buchanan has brought forth one startling development as to the head of the State Department, that the developements may continue, until the country shall know the precise status of all the members of the Cabinet. It one or more of them favor a dissolution of the Union, and purpose prolonging the war until an impoverished and exhausted people will consent to it, the earlier it is known the better. The people will find a way to punish that the worst, the meanest, the most wicked species of treason.

Beecher on the President, Seward and McClellan.

The editor of the New York Independent, in a leading article on Thursday, gives full length portraits of three conspicuous men:

The same fatal influence at the center paralyzed the Cabinet tied up the President, and laid a spell upon the army. What that influence was, and by whom wielded, it will be the business of the future to search out. Another chapter is to be added to the history of renowned folly and illustious weakness.

SECRETARY SEWARD.

Then it may be some Macaulay will leave to us such a portrait as this: Chief in latent influence was a man of Ideas which had no physical consequences. An optimist; not without sagacity in merely intellectual problems, but foolish in affairs. He had the very Conceit of Hope. So certain was he of the favorable tendencies of great natural causes, that he scarcely deemed it useful to exert special volitions under them. He was wise in ideas and foolish in things. Whatever could be settled by thinking he managed skilfully. But it was his infatuation to suppose that all things could be managed by thinking. He was an Idealist—rich in the top of his brain; lean and feeble in the bottom.

So all matters that lay upon the earth he treated as if they were shadows, that came and went, without human violation, by the movements of the sun. His realities began where common men's ended, in the realm of mere ideas. He was utterly devoid of the instinct of physical forces. He could hate but could not fight. Without wisdom in direction of practical affairs, he had such acuteness, ingenuity and mind force that his criticisms and judgments weighed much in the shaping of other men's practical politics. His inordinate hopefulness lit up the future with perpetual brightness, and led him to frequent prophecies. And, like all uninspired prophets, the failure of his predictions abated no jot of confidence in his precision, and he still covered old disappointments with new promises. He was at once the zealot and the coward of the Administration.

PRESIDENT LINCOLN.

By the side of such a mind was placed a man remarkable in not a few respects. Genial, kind to a fault, but, above all, with strong instincts of justice, with strong but homely sense, and with reasoning faculty unusual in its methods, slow and old, yet at length reaching broad results, and generally sound ones. Well versed in local politics, but untrained in national administration, he became the President of the United States, divided, at a time that required the utmost human sagacity joined to firmness and decision. He was both firm and facile, obstinate yet changeable. Resisting persuasion and reasonings with singular constancy, he was liable, in certain moods, to accept sudden and unripe advice, and to precipitate rash action. Mistakes arising from these causes, served not so much, through experience, to produce sagacity, as to render him fearful of other mistakes, and so, of following any counsel.

Upon such a mind the confident counsels of an optimist, whose future was all bright, who was insensible to physical reality, who found little difficulty in the administration of mere ideas, could not fail to be great. When, in perilous times, a President is slow from conscientious timidity, his worst councellor is one who, from excess of hope, tells him that there is no need of action, and the waiting is wisdom! While caution and conceit were maintaining feebleness at the center, there might have yet been much progress, had the armies of the Union been led by enterprising generals.

It is one of the extraordinary events of the times, that two generals, to whose hands chiefly the campaign year was committed, were by nature and sympathy fitted to command under an administration where irresolute honesty took counsel of indolent hopefulness.

GENERAL M'CLELLAN.

General McClellan has secured for himself a place in history. But it will be his accidental association with great events, rather than by any important influence which he has had in producing them. He is a man of large perceptive and moderate reflective intellect. He is without genius or even moderate intuition. He digs out his conclusions as laboriously as ore is dug from mines. He received a thorough military education. And whatever could be accomplished by studiousness and untiring industry no man could better accomplish than he. But he sees nothing nor knows nothing, till it is reduced to the level of his practical reason. Especially, he lacked sense and intuition of Human Forces. Too wise use of physical matters makes an engineer. The wise use of men makes the General. McClellan is only an engineer.

But, such a man was competent to great results had right dispositions and sagacious political faith come to his help. But he was possessed by an imperitive caution that worked sometimes toward obstinacy, but never toward daring enterprise.

His anxiety to be fully prepared was morbid. He was never yet ready. There was always something yet to be done before he deemed it wise to venture. He heaped up preparations. He had never enough men; never enough arms, or clothing, or munitions. The whole East drained toward his camp. And when, more than any general that ever commanded on the continent, he had at his command every resource of the nation, he was still unready. At length, when patience was worn out, and the President, the Cabinet, and the whole country clamored for activity, he felt the possible dangers before him ever more than all the pressures of Government and country behind him, and demanded more men and more means; complaining that he was hampered and thwarted.

A log of wood lying upon the spring grass is mightier, by its dead pressure against the hidden roots, than all the laws of growth! And as a respectable engineer, but inert general, lay upon the army like a spell of death, or of motionless enchantment. The same fate that gave to the army a McClellan on the east of the Alleghanies, raised up a Buell on the west. It is difficult to say which excelled in practical torpidity, Buell or McClellan. Whichsoever figure one contemplates, it seems impossible that another should excel him in lethargic uselessness. Both were insatiable in demands, and both wasted immense resources without any important advantage. If there is yet anything to be exhibited of military inefficiency, some new mark must be imagined; created expressly for it; for every conceivable part of insatiable demand and miserly retention of forces and means has been exhausted by the great Oriental Vis Inertiæ and the Occidental Vis Inertiæ.—Cincinnati Times.

Communications.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

SIR,—Mr. B. A. feels a little disturbed because of my remarks on his 'Bear Story,' and takes upon him to lecture me for using my Nom-de guerre, Scribo. Before, however, he takes upon him to instruct others, he should get instructed himself. When I require information the author of the 'Bear' tragedy will be the last individual to whom I shall apply, knowing that to whom little is given, from him little can be required.—Literary honors must be venal somewhere, or B. A. would be under the necessity of using instead thereof B. F., (Fungorum Bacalaureus,) which he may translate at his leisure, it will afford him another opportunity of displaying his classical lore. His suggestions on the use of a Foreign noun are in keeping with his English composition. Mr. B. A. condemns the use of a verb, yet gives me a verb as better, which differs only in time. Does B. A. not know that if Scripsi is better, Scribo is good, if comparison may be admitted. I think his classical preceptor was abroad or he would have given Scriptor, being so much attached to nouns. Either his reason or logic must be defective, when he condemns Scribo and recommends Scripsi. In his haste like a certain quadruped (the ass) in the fable, he shows his ears prominently. I recommend to Mr. B. A. the advice contained in the proverb, Aut pruneum tentes aut perfice, if he profits by it as he requires, he will refrain from bear hunting or begging bear's grease, and betake him to some more sacred profession. If I may be allowed to give my opinion, he, I fear, will never become a Nimrod. In regard to my quoting incorrectly let the reader compare, and I am sure he will find that truth with B. A. is like his lucubrations on "Bruin," a rare article. Were it not for wasting time and taking up your valuable space I would produce the whole of B. A.'s epistle that your readers might have a life picture of the cantharus vacuus, (empty jug,) whose composition is a standing disgrace to the title he assumes. In my last I expressed a hope that he would put himself in a position to obtain instruction. Since he has not, let me recommend to serious consideration a few pages of Lennie; also, Paul's description of Charity: "is not easily puffed up;" and on "the most appropriate return to be made to the Almighty for His blessings," the conclusion of the wise preacher "Fear God and keep his commandments:" and by reading, marking and inwardly digesting these, he may become learned, meek and sound in true faith, (read him again in the last Review) and thus save the exposure of his ignorance on these important but much neglected subjects. Hoping my advice may not be in vain, but may redound to his advantage I take this opportunity to say, Mr. Editor,

That I am your servant,
SCRIBO.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

MR. EDITOR,—You will perceive by the Review's notice of the proceedings in the School Board of this Town that what Dr. Ryerson failed to accomplish by convention and open debate he is now about to attempt by underhand means—to violate the most sacred rights of conscience, and compel parents to send their children to school. The salvation of the soul is far more precious than the mere cultivation of the mind, yet we all protest against the Popish Decree to compel us to attend Church, and that equally whether the Pope be a King or a Priest. Now I am as anxious as any one to have all the people educated properly, but I protest against all immoral compulsion. Governments have no authority from God to interfere with parents and none from nature. Parental authority is the highest on earth. Civil Government is merely a Scholastic Institution like the Common School, founded upon that authority, and can never interfere with it without the most fatal consequences—tyranny and popery. It is a tyrannical principle, and will lead to these results as it did always before and ever must.

Now I believe that the result desired can be accomplished, because it has been accomplished once before—and so far as I know only once—and that was in Scotland where, some twenty years ago, the majority of parishes could boast that not a child above seven years old could not read. In my own neighborhood for miles round there was only one family of vagabonds, who were regarded as a sort of monsters, that could not read. Here was the thing proposed done. Now how was it done?—Simply by each Teacher having a moral charge over a certain district, so that impelled at once by zeal for his own interests and zeal for the improvement of the young, he sought them out and compelled them by authority, by kindness and by moral suasion, to attend scho l willingly and cheerfully—in a way that no mere Police compulsion could do. The Church regarded the School as its companion, and hand in hand Minister and Teacher aided the parents both to know and do their duty to their children's souls and minds, and the Magistrates compelled them to perform their civil duties.

As for Reformatory Schools, they are utterly out of the question in a country like Canada: the infringement of liberty, the enormous expenditure, the iniquity of the appointments, the abuses of the system, will combine every religious, honest, earnest man against the attempt to pauperize the children of the poor. There is a Christian remedy. The Ladies' Relief Society by assisting the parents to live and keep their children clean, may also enable and persuade them to keep them at school, if that be all that is desired. But mere learning only makes infidels and rebels, as may be seen in every nation where it has been tried, and therefore until we have Bible Schools as in Scotland and England and Ireland among the Protestant population, we shall never make our people a Religious and moral people. Therefore I trust that every Christian in Canada will with all his might oppose all such attempts to bring us and our children into bondage.

I remain, Mr. Editor,
Yours very truly,
A LOVER OF LIBERTY.

We wish our readers would try Downs' Vegetable Balsamic Elixir for coughs, colds and all diseases of the throat, chest and lungs, for we are confident from the abundance of evidence that it is one of the oldest and most reliable cough medicines in use. It is sold by the Druggists and Merchants in this country for 25 cents per bottle and warranted. Henry's Vermont Liniment needs but a single trial to make it a household treasure in every family. 25 cts. per bottle. Try it.

THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION.

ANOTHER BATTLE IN ARKANSAS.

BATTLEFIELD, NEAR FAYETTEVILLE, ARK., Dec. 8.—Gen. Heron's forces, en route to reinforce Gen. Blunt, met the enemy yesterday on Crawford Prairie, ten miles south of Fayetteville, Ark. The fight resulted in a rencounter victory. The enemy was 24,000 strong, and was divided into four divisions under Generals Parsons, Marmaduke, Frost and Price, all under Gen. Hindman, and embraced the flower of the trans-Mississippi army, well supported by eighteen pieces of artillery. The enemy flanked Blunt's position at Cane Hill, and made a sudden attack on Gen. Heron to prevent him uniting with Gen. Blunt. Heron's force consisted of the 94th and 37th Illinois; the 19th and 20th Iowa; the 26th Indiana; the 20th Wisconsin and a battalion of two of cavalry—in all 5,500 to 7,000 men and twenty-four pieces of artillery. The battle raged from ten a. m. till dark, and was desperately fought throughout.

Our artillery drove the enemy from two strong positions, and kept their overwhelming numbers at bay.

The 26th Wisconsin regiment captured a Confederate battery of four heavy guns, but were forced to abandon them under a murderous fire.

The 19th Iowa also took the same battery and fought most desperately, but was also obliged to yield it. Almost every regiment distinguished itself.

About four o'clock Gen. Blunt arrived from Cane Hill with 5,000 men and a strong force of artillery, and attacked the enemy in the rear. The Confederates made a desperate effort to capture General Blunt's batteries, but were repulsed with terrible slaughter. We held the whole field at dark, and before nine o'clock that night the entire Confederate force was in full retreat over the Boston Mountains. Our loss in killed and wounded is 600; that of the Confederate 1,500, by their own admission. Several of the enemy's field officers were killed—among them Col. Stein, commanding a brigade. He was formerly a Brigadier-General in the Missouri State Guard. Only a few prisoners were taken. We captured four caissons filled with ammunition. Lieut-Colonel McFarlane, of the 19th Iowa, is the only field officer killed on our side. Major Hubbard, of the 1st Missouri cavalry, was taken prisoner.

HEADQUARTERS OF THE ARMY OF THE POTOMAC, Dec. 9.—The weather is milder and the snow has melted considerably.

The following general order has just been published:—

No person will be allowed to cross the lines in the direction of the enemy without a pass from these headquarters.

To all classes and all constitutions they are equally a blessing and a cure—none need despair, no matter how long the disease may have existed, or however severe it may be, provided the organic structure of the vital organs is not hopelessly decayed. Every one afflicted should give them an impartial trial.

To Vocalists and public Speakers, these Wafers are peculiarly valuable; they will in one day remove the most severe occasional hoarseness; and their regular use for a few days will, at all times, increase the power and flexibility of the voice, greatly improving its tone, compass and clearness, for which purpose they are regularly used by many professional vocalists.

FINKLE & LYON

SEWING MACHINE COMPANY.

538 Broadway, New York.

TO parties little acquainted with the Finkle & Lyon Sewing Machines the careful perusal of the Company's Circular is specially commended. This circular can be had on application. It is very specific, and will be found highly instructive, having been prepared with much care, and we will endorse all statements therein made.

The following brief quotation is characteristic of the entire Circular:

"This Machine is better adapted than any other Sewing Machine in machine to the frequent changes and almost endless variety of sewing required to satisfy; first will sew from one to twenty thicknesses of Marseilles without stopping, and make every stitch perfect. Will sew from the finest gauze to the heaviest cloth, and even the toughest harness leather without changing the feed or tension, making any adjustment of machine unnecessary. Thus we very successfully overcome the most difficult point in the Sewing Machine art. It was no ordinary triumph. Certainly can we now say, "No other Machine compares with it in this respect." Hence, have we uniformly—almost without exception—taken the highest premium, wherever the Machine has been properly exhibited in competition with other first class Sewing Machines. Hence it is that we are enabled to offer the following guarantee, viz.: "We warrant every Machine we sell to give better satisfaction than any other Sewing Machine in the market, or money refunded." We never sell a Machine on any other terms. The guarantee is as reliable as the note of any business man in the land. For more than five years have we called upon such facts for the reputation of our Machine; and without a single competing agent in the field, there is scarcely a locality hereabout in the country where the Machine is not favourably known. We prefer such a reputation to one based on mere "talking points," as they are technically called in the trade. Hence we make but one kind of stitch, viz., the lock stitch, alike on both sides, requiring tension adjustment the same as other kinds of stitches.

ANNUAL MEETING

INVESTIGATION REPORT - - - DECLARATION OF BONUS.

THE thirty-sixth annual Meeting of this Company was held within the Royal Hotel, Aberdeen Friday, the 18th April

Alexander Stronach, Esq., of Drumallan, Chairman of the Ordinary Directors, in the Chair. There were submitted to the meeting—

1.—Report by the Directors, which, on the motion of the Chairman, was cordially and unanimously approved of and adopted.

2.—The Balance Sheet for the past year, with detailed states relative thereto, duly certified as correct, in terms of the Act of Incorporation, by the Chairman and Manager, and also by the Auditor.

There was also laid on the Table the various Valuation States in connection with the Quinquennial Investigation into the state of the Company's affairs, as at 31st January, 1862.

The following particulars derived from the Balance Sheet and States before-mentioned, show the result of the operations of the Company for the past year:—

Amount proposed for Life Assurance during the year, contained in 1189 Proposal	£454,835 0 0
Amount of Proposals accepted, and for which 981 Policies were issued	350,080 0 0
ANNUAL PREMIUMS on said Policies	11,170 1 0
CLAIMS BY DEATH including BONUSES on PARTICIPAT ON POLICIES, and after deducting Sums recovered from other Offices under guarantees	22,999 1 0
TOTAL SUM Assured under 6,750 current LIFE POLICIES	1,955,95 0 0
TOTAL ACCUMULATED FUNDS	373,563 3 2
TOTAL ANNUAL REVENUE	98,756 4 4

With reference to the recent investigation into the state of the Company's affairs, as at 31st January last, the Report Stated that both the principles of valuation and the details thereof, had been submitted to James John Downes, Esq., Actuary to the Economic Life Office in London, a gentleman well known as one of the highest authorities on such subjects in the kingdom, and had received his entire approval, as having been made on just and sound principles, and accurately carried out as certified in his report to the Directors, which formed part of the Appendix to their Report. This step the Directors considered could not fail to give the utmost confidence—both to the shareholders and the Policyholders—in the soundness and correctness of the valuation.

During the Quinquennial period, the claims by death, including the bonus additions which had been paid, and which had been considerably under the number that might have been expected from the Mortality Tables on which the Office rates are based, amounting to £83,975 os 6d.

In valuing the Policies, each had been separately calculated, and nett premiums had only been used, thus leaving a surplus of annual revenue of £11,427 16s 7d, to meet future expenses and to form a source of profit for next investigation. The total amount of claims by death paid since the commencement of the Company, was £217,821 4s.

The Securities held by the Company were in a satisfactory position, and had been recently carefully scrutinized in detail by the Directors.

In conclusion, the Directors congratulated both the Proprietors and the Assured on the high position which the Company now occupied in the estimation of the public, and on the encouraging prospect of its business operations for the future.

DECLARATION OF BONUS.

From the profits realized on the Life business, a retrospective bonus of £1 7s 6d per cent per annum for the Quinquennial period was declared, on the sums originally assured under all Participating Policies, increased by the previous additions thereto; also a further prospective Bonus of £1 per cent per annum, on the amount of the Policies with said Bonuses, on all such of said Policies as may become claims by Death previously to the 31st January, 1867.

It will be observed, that this rate of bonus is equivalent in the case of our older Policies to £1 14s per cent per annum on the original sum assured; that the total additions to the sum assured, now vested, are equal to 32 per cent on the sum assured; and that the younger ages the additions amount to upwards of 75 per cent of the premiums paid.

Statement showing the Progress of the Company's Business during the Quinquennial Period ending 31st January, 1862:

Year ending 31st January.	Amounts proposed for Assurance.	Amount of New Policies Issued.	No. of Policies Issued.	New Annual Premiums.	Total Revenue in each year.	Accumulated Funds.

Votes of thanks were passed to the Directors and Office-bearers of the Company at Head-Offices and Branches, and after a very hearty vote of thanks to the Chairman for his conduct in the Chair, the meeting was dissolved.

FIRE INSURANCE.

THE following table compiled from the official returns, exhibits, at a glance, the increase of duty paid to the Government by the different Insurance Offices, metropolitan and provincial, during the year 1861.

THE "ROYAL."

It will be seen, stands as before, at the very head of the list, and maintains a rate of progress very far in advance of all its rivals and competitors. Twelve months ago, we had the gratification of recording the fact that its increase, in the year 1860, had been more than double that of any other company—had exceeded 30 per cent., of the entire increase of all the London offices combined—and had also exceeded 30 per cent, of the aggregate increase of the remaining twenty eight provincial offices. We have now the pleasure of inviting the attention of our readers to the testimony of these later returns, which show that in the year 1861, the increase of the "Royal" was very nearly sixty per cent. in excess of the increase of any other company—that there were but three offices which came even within 50 per cent of it, and the "R" was actually more than one-sixth of the entire increase of the remaining forty-four offices, London and Provincial put together. Comment upon such facts as these would be superfluous. They prove, conclusively, the continued advance of the "Royal" in the confidence and good opinion of the public. That advance has been, from the beginning, as remarkable as it has been rapid, and we cordially congratulate the directors and shareholders upon the cause we regard it as the just reward of prudent management, of liberal and honorable dealing, and of undoubted stability.

300 MEDICINAL PLANTS, HERBS AND VEGETABLE REMEDIES,

By JOHN C. GUNN, M. D.,

OF LOUISVILLE, KY.,

Author of the old work known as "GUNN'S DOMESTIC MEDICINE."

Also, AN APPENDIX containing a popular treatise on ANATOMY, PHYSIOLOGY and the LAWS OF HEALTH; the whole making a large octavo volume of

OVER ONE THOUSAND PAGES,

with numerous

VALUABLE ILLUSTRATIONS!

THIS is probably the best, as well as the most thorough and extensive book ever published, as a Domestic or Family Medical Work. its author is now an old man, and is probably more generally known as a popular medical author than any man living, owing to the great popularity and extensive use of his old work, which was one of great value, but in the present advanced state of medical science is altogether behind the times. Dr. G. is a graduate of several of the best Medical Colleges in the world, viz.: of Philadelphia, and of London and Paris. He has been a successful practising physician for nearly forty years—and it can be hardly supposed that any man can be better qualified to write such a work than he is. He has spent most of the time for several years in preparing this work—intending it, as he often remarked, as his last and greatest Legacy to Posterity.

The work contains a description of all the diseases known or common to this country—their causes, symptoms, and character—with plain and full directions for successfully treating them, telling what remedies to use; how to use them and when—the whole stated in plain and simple language; or whenever any technical or Medical terms are used, they are fully explained; so that the commonest mind can understand them. The remedies recommended are generally of the simplest kind, such as are harmless, yet efficient, and usually such as are easily to be obtained.

Besides the diseases common to both sexes, the work contains a department on the diseases of Females, and their treatment. Also a department on the diseases of Children, which alone is worth the price of the book to mothers and all who have the care of children.

An important item in the work is its Pharmacy, or valuable Family Receipts, there being more than forty pages of Medical Receipts and Compounds, many of which will be found very important and useful in a family.

☞ Remember that this book can only be had of the Agent, who is the really, and is not to be had either of us, direct, or through Booksellers.

Poetry.

The Watchers.

BY JOHN G. WHITTIER.

Beside a stricken field I stood;
On the torn turf, on grass and wood,
Hung heavily the dew of blood.

Still in their fresh wounds lay the slain,
But all the air was quick with pain
And gusty sighs and fearful rain.

Two angels, each with drooping head
And folded wings and noiseless tread,
Watched by that valley of the dead.

The one, with forehead calmly bland
Held Hope of blessing not command,
Leaned weeping, on her olive wand.

The other's brows were scared and knit,
His restless eyes were watch-fires lit,
His hands for battle-gauntlets fit.

"How long"—I knew the voice of Peace,
"Is there no respite?—no release?—
When shall the hopeless quarrel cease?

"Oh Lord, how long!—One human soul
Is more than any parchment scroll
Or any flags the winds unroll.

What price was Ellsworth's young and brave?
How weigh the gift that Lyon gave?
Or count the cost of Winthrop's grave?

"Oh, brother! if thine eye can see
Tell how and when the end shall be,
What hope remains for thee or me."

Then Freedom sternly said: "I shun
No strife nor pang beneath the sun
When human rights are staked and won.

"I knelt with Ziska's hunted flock,
I watched in Toussaint's cell or rock,
I walked with Sidney to the block.

"The Moore of Marston felt my tread,
Through Jersey snows the march I led,
My voice Magenta's charges spread.

"But now, through weary day and night,
I watch a vague and aimless fight,
For leave to strike one blow aright.

"On either side my foe they own;
One guards through love his ghastly throne,
And one through fear to reverence grown.

"Why wait we longer, mocked, betrayed
By open foes or those afraid
To speed thy coming through my aid?

Why watch to see who win or fall?
I shake the dust against them all,
I leave them to their senseless brawl."

"Nay," Peace implored: "Yet longer wait;
The doom is near, the stake is great;
God knoweth if it be too late.

"Still watch and wait; the way prepare
Where I with folded wings of prayer
May follow, weaponless and bare."

"Too late!" the stern, and voice replied,
"Too late!" its mournful echoe sighed,
In low lament the answer died,

A rustling as if winds in flight,
An upward gleam of incensing white,
Beyond the vision, sound and sight.

But round me, like a silver bell
Rung down the listening sky to tell
Of holy help, a sweet voice fell;

"Still hope and trust," it sang; "the rod
Must fall, the wrong-doer as must be trod,
But all is possible with God!"

Miscellaneous.

Official Dishonesty.

The Government is now piling up a debt of nearly-one hundered millions of dollars a month. If continued at that rate much longer, the interest will be a tremendous load to carry. It will be the more burthensome from the fact that the revenues of the nation are being constantly squandered by those whose duty it is to husband and guard it against extravagance. Two departments recently made in New York, tell us how it is that the immenses revenue of the nation are squandered.

First, as to military management. It has been discovered that in the subsistence Department, in the port of New York, the Government has been defrauded to an immense extent by fraudulent returns. That is, if one hundred men were subsisted, say for a week, the parties interested procured a certificate for one thousand men. The officer in command of the troops and the person who furnished the subsistence, were the guilty parties. The latest accounts say that some fifty persons have already been found guilty of frauds, and the number of fraudulent claims paid is said to be prodigious.

This sort of business is not confined to the subsistence department, nor to New York city. It can be found in all the supply departments all over the country. Rarely is it, indeed, that army contracts are given out on a reasonable margin for the contractors, and in all cases Uncle Sam pays very dear for his whistle. Take, for instance, horses. The farmer, seeing the quartermaster's advertisement, brings his horses to market. He takes them to the quartermaster, and the quartermaster refers him to his agent. Perhaps the agent refers him to a drover, and so on. The farmer sells his horses for, say $85 per head, but when the Government buys them, they cost Uncle Sam about $110 per head.

The Government could have purchased them from the farmer at $85 per head, but for obvious reasons speculators are allowed to intervene between the Government and the farmer. Somebody makes the difference, say of an average of $25 per head. In the purchase therefore of 10,000 horses, the Government, loses $2,500,000, of that much of the people's money goes wrong fully into the pockets of officials and individuals who collude with them. The McKinstry investigation presents fully some of the plans resorted to thus swindle the Government.

As it is with horses, so it is with everything connected with supplying the army. In the early part of the war, contractors were permitted to swindle most audaciously, being paid immense prices for furnishing inferior articles. To some extent that has been reformed, but still to keep a run of contractors in this stealing a gold mine. In Cincinnati, as well as in New York, in Boston as well as St. Louis, contractors, and, with very few exceptions, indeed, the class of military officials who deal with contractors get rich very rapidly. This of itself demonstrates that official and contractor deal unfairly with the people. And it is so nearly all through the army. The Quartermaster is considered "sharp" who can swindle either the soldier or the Government out of clothing, equippage or forage. This species of dishonesty is so prevalent that it excites neither alarm nor comment.

As to the civil government. It has been ascertained that several clerks in the Custom House, by making false entries and destroying part of the records, have cheated the Government out of one hundred thousand dollars. Now what is the character of these men, who would conspire to rob the Government which employed them out of one hundred thousand dollars?—Were they any better than the burglars who plan the robbery of a bank safe? Not a whit, yet how happens it that they were placed in positions of responsibility and trust? Look at the means by which nominations for office are made, and the character of the men who control and manage our partisan organizations. That will give you an answer. It is so in Cincinnati as well as in New York, in Boston as well as St. Louis.

The whole trouble, both military and civil, is corruption at the fountain head. Washington is impure, dishonest, and patriotic. The man who drinks immensely of whiskey, can swear like a turk in a session, and knows how to fight can figer, stands immeasurably a better opportunity of obtaining an appointment at Washington than a plain, straight-forward, upright and exemplary citizen. In fact the exemplary citizen will not stoop to the low resorts requisite for political success. The result is that political appointments are not overly honest, and as like begets like, the subordinates are of the same character.

An honest postmaster will not have suspicious deputies about him, nor will an upright collector of customs take the responsibility of employing clerks who spend twice and thrice their income. But where either postmaster or collector of customs is greedy or dishonest, he will not surround himself with clerks of unblemish character. That species of society does not suit him. Thus it is that dishonest men get office, and unmercifully fleece the Government. The amount of stealing is never known. Frauds are enacted and covered up in a thousand ways.

Again, the species of crime—for crime it really is, is not punished. Occasionally some poor devil of a postoffice clerk, detected in flinching money from letters, is sent to the penitentiary; or a quartermaster's clerk, following the example of his master, is pitched out of place for flinching a garment; but the high rogues, the immense thieves, are never punished. When two years ago, Floyd followed to Virginia $100,000 which he had saved while one of Mr. Buchanan's Cabinet, no one pretended to apprehend the thief. When a Congressional committee reported that Mr. Cameron had been guilty of awarding the most infamous contracts—contracts that bore the swindle on their face—Mr. Cameron was not sent to Fort Lafayette, but, on the contrary, was promoted the mission to Russia if he would resign and relieve the Cabinet of his head of sin.

When a Congressional Committee reported that Mr. Welles, at the country's darkest period, had authorized a near relative to make contracts out of which said relative realized, in a few weeks' time, one hundred thousand dollars, Mr. Welles was not removed from his high station. Nobody is their still. When a Congressional Committee reported that Senator Simmons had charged an enormous fee too obtain a contract for supplying a bleeding country with arms, Senator Simmons was not expelled, not even reprimanded by the Senate. When high officers of the Government are thus whitewashed, how can the lesser lights be punished for robbing the Government? There are laws to punish the dishonest quartermaster the thieving commissary and official villians of every kind.

The last Congress was especially careful to make enactments to suit these very cases, but the last Congress saw those laws violated under the very shades of the capitol, and smothered its virtuous indignation, if it ever had any.

We have made not an over-drawn picture of public life as it is. There is everywhere a want of plain, simple honesty. The business of the nation is at loose ends.

Any merchant, no matter what his wealth, transacting business upon the same principle, would be beggared in twelve months. Why is it, that the Government cannot be conducted with the same honesty, care and attention, that a prudent merchant conducts his business? Yes, why is it? It is time that the tax-payers and every citizen down to the humblest and poorest is a tax payer now—consider this question thoughtfully and well. Will we now, while the very life blood is being drawn from us through the war tax, continue to be patiently robbed without a murmur? Or will the people demand the enforcement of the laws against official vice, upon all, high or low, who are robbing the Government?—Cincinnati Times.

A coronet of hussars, who was not the most polished in his manners, having joined his regiment, was asked by his colonel what his father was? "A farmer," said the coronet. "Pity your father did not make you follow his trade." "Pray, sir," said the coronet, "what was your father?" "A gentleman." "Pity he did not make you one," replied the coronet.

FAULTS IN CONVERSATION.—Among the more prominent faults in conversation are, the folly of talking too much; of talking about ourselves; an impatience to interrupt others; the meanness of being interrupted ourselves; and attempting to be thought smart by interjecting a word while our neighbor is speaking, so as to make nonsense what he intended to say.

A Singular Husband.

Dr. Kane, in the following anecdote, He says that, in the early part of [illegible] well-disposed man, and married to a [illegible] and manners, and what, for [illegible] eight years of their marriage, made him an excellent wife.

Without any previous dispute or difference, he [illegible] early and told her that he was obliged to go to the Downs on transact some particular business; and the same day, about noon, she received a note from him, informing her that he [illegible] a necessity of going into Holland and should probably be absent three months or a month.

He remained absent, however, longer than the specified time, and for seventeen years and upward she never heard of or from him. About three years after his disappearance, Mrs. Howe was obliged to apply for an Act of Parliament to procure a proper settlement of her husbands estate, and a proper provision for herself and [illegible] children out of it, as it was uncertain whether he was alive or dead. The [illegible] when he first went away she and her friends feared that he might have contracted some large debt unknown to her, the difficulties of which he could not easily surmount. In fact, for some time after his departure, she had hired in constant dread of demands from creditors, of seizures, executions, &c. Nothing of this kind, however, took place; and on investigation it was found that he was only left in his estate free and unencumbered, but had punctually paid his bills of [illegible] tradesman with whom he had any dealings to the utmost exactness, receipts and proper vouchers for all bills being found, arranged in the most methodical manner, in his [illegible].

Shortly after this the children both died, when the supposed widow, in order to lessen her house-keeping expenses, discharged the greater part of her servants, left Jermyn Street, and took a small house on Brewer Street, Golden Square. This was about ten years after her husbands departure, when one evening, after she had resided in Brewer Street about seven years, while she was sitting at supper with a party of friends, among whom were her brother-in-law, Dr. Rose, and his sister, his wife, a note, without any signature, was delivered to her, in which the writer requested the favour of her giving him a meeting the next evening, in the Birdcage Walk, in the Park. She read the note with some surprise, and then tossed it to Dr. Rose saying—

"You see, brother, old as I am, I have a beau."

The doctor, who perused the note with more attention, instantly declared it to be Mr. Howe's Handwriting. Tom, of course, surprised all the company, and, indeed, so much affected Mrs. Howe, that she fainted away. On her recovery, it was agreed that the whole party should accompany her next evening to the Park; and they had not been there many minutes when the lost husband came to them, and after embracing his wife and saluting his friends, walked home with them, took possession of his house and wife, and lived with her in great harmony until his death.

It appeared that, instead of going to the Tower, as he said, he had actually gone no farther than to a little house in Westminster, where he took a room, for which he paid five or six shillings a week; and changed his name, and disguising himself by wearing a black wig, (for he was a fair man,) he had escaped detection, and remained in that lodging during the whole of his supposed absence. Even when the Act of Parliament was applied for, he had enjoyed the pleasure of reading the progress of it in the papers, at a little coffee house near his lodgings; and when his wife removed to Brewer Street, he contrived to get acquainted with a man of the name of Salt, a corn-chandler, who lived directly opposite to her residence. Salt supposed him to be a bachelor and became so fond of his company that he generally asked him to dinner twice a week, when Howe used to watch his wife's house with so much apparent curiosity, that Salt often recommended her to him as a very suitable wife. On Sunday's he regularly went to Salt's pew in St. James's Church, where he could see his wife without being seen by her—a practice which he assiduously adhered to until the avowal of his existence and return.

Though he cheerfully told all these circumstances, no persuasion of his wife or friends could prevail on him to assign any reason for his extraordinary conduct; but he owned that he had taken with him for subsistence between one and two thousand pounds, in gold and bank notes, which, after great economy was all expended. Discovery of course became necessary for a further supply; and indeed some of his friends surmised that if he could have raised the money without discovery, he would still have remained concealed in his obscurity.

A Sad Story.

The Hartford Press relates that between three and four weeks ago the wife of Mr. George L. Ford of Glastenbury, Ct., who has mourned unceasingly over the loss of two children three years ago, and had recently been troubled with church difficulties speculation, &c., and was in poor health because evidently insane. Her father and mother—Mr. Lucius Talcott and wife—came to assist her husband in taking care of her, and after four days and nights of incessant care, Mr. Ford and Mr. Talcott and wife also became insane—through a sort of mesmeric influence, Mr. Ford thinks—and all four were shouting and breaking all the furniture in the house. The neighbors removed Mr. Ford from the presence of his wife, when he became rational again and remained so. Mrs. Ford was removed to the Insane Retreat. Mr. Talcott and wife were taken there a few days later, and Mr. Talcott has since died. All the parties are of respectability and property. Mr. Talcott and wife were spiritualists.

THE WAR NEWS.

Since our last issue a great battle has been fought at Fredricksburg, a town situate half-way between Washington and Richmond, on the Rappahannock. Preparations have been making for some time by the Federals for a move upon the enemy. Last week, General Burnside, who has charge of that portion of the Federal army, led his men across the Rappahannock River and from the faint resistance he met with it was surmised that the Rebels had retreated before Richmond, whither he should have to follow them. It was soon discovered that they were in considerable force in their entrenchments outside of Fredricksburg. On Saturday last,one in the morning, the Federals opened fire upon them, and were determined to dislodge them, but the rain of grape and grapeal from the Rebels caused them to retire. They tried again and again, but were repulsed. The fighting on both sides was terrible, and the slaughter fearful, and five or six Generals killed or wounded. Altogether it is the greatest battle since that of Antietam.

THE PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE.

If ever the ruler of a nation had a difficult task in managing its affairs, it is President Lincoln. Called as he has been from his professional labours and but indifferently acquainted with the theory,—much less experienced in the practice of statesmanship, to the highest position of any individual on the Continent of America, it is no wonder that he finds himself at a loss in the present precarious and trying position of his country, to tender advice to the Legislative Assembly at Washington. It requires the tact and ability of the very first minds, to direct and manage the affairs of a nation of such size and intelligence as the States of North America, in the times of peace and prosperity. How much more are these required when the nation is rent in twain by internal convulsions? Mr. Lincoln has all along showed himself an uncomprising advocate of the Union—ready and willing to do any thing, to sacrifice every thing, for the preservation of the Union. A very large portion of his message to Congress is taken up on Slavery. Emancipation & Colonization—accepting the general received opinion that Slavery is the primary cause of the present struggle, he looks the matter fairly in the face, and submits his projects for getting rid of the war. His first and chief plan is by emancipating all slaves of insurgents by the first of January next. The second is recommending an amendment in the Constitution so that any State which shall adopt emancipation of its Slaves prior to the year 1900 shall receive compensation for its Slaves. He anticipates a large influx of the negroes in the North, and he then proposes to colonise them in South America. All negroes that have become free from the chances of war or in other words who are escaped from their masters, are for ever to be free.

There is no doubt but the President has hit upon the right cause of the Nation, being rent asunder, and proposes a very feasible way of correcting the evil, but it may be said that the discovery, and proposed amendment, are come too late. The fiat of a President whose authority is denied, is laughed at and nothing but the stern thetate of war is to settle the matter of freedom to the slave.

The proclamation of emancipation is looked upon as a national necessity tending it is thought to suppress the rebellion, and leading the insurgents to return to their allegiance. The general impression is that it will be followed by a servile insurrection, causing fearful sufferings to the white population more horrid than war itself. It is sometimes said that every thing is fair in war times—and so the President thinks now—though he thought differently when Colonel Freemont issued a similar proclamation nearly a year ago. At the commencement of hostilities, such care was shown to the rebels that their slaves who escaped to the Federal camps were carefully retained to their owners. We were always convinced that the present civil War in the States, commenced on account of Slavery, and that whatever turn the war may take or however it may be settled, this execrable institution is doomed—the slaves will be free. The present generation will not pass away until Slavery in North America will be known only among the things that were.

The question is often asked why did not President Lincoln at the commencement of the war sanction the confiscation of slave property of the rebels? Why was he so careful to meddle with the peculiar institution of the South, when it was so well known that to preserve that institution intact the South took up arms. It cannot be argued that it was ignorance, or the want of means at command to back up an order of the kind. No! the cause of the tender dealing with Slavery by the President was, that a large portion of the North while anxious to save the Union was desirous of saving it as it was. And the Democratic party of Slavery as it is. And [illegible] The President had adopted such a [illegible] now submits to [illegible] most of the [illegible] discussions against him. These Northern advocates of Southern Slavery argued that by this they had their wealth, and we cannot afford to let it go.

Like a doctor who would keep a person afflicted with a fatal disease alive by administering palliatives or partial remedies, finds it more profitable to do so than to restore his patient to sound health, so these State Physicians wish to retain the South with its deadly malady. But now that there is a danger of loosing the patient altogether, they submit to new and unsavoury being applied for his recovery. Possibly they may find they have trifled too long, and it may be he will slip through their fingers.

The President like his countrymen is high in expectations. He points a glowing future for his country. By figures he estimates the United States to contain a population of more than double its present number in 1900. All this, however, is on the supposition of the continuance of the Union.—The bare idea of a separation does not enter his head. The arm of States, vast as it is, is not sufficient to hold two nations or two peoples, in his estimation.

In this he is upheld by his countrymen who acknowledge his rule, and with them he is prepared to sacrifice everything for the integrity of the Union.

The "Grumbler."

This Spicy little sheet after a rest of 2 years, has again came before the public.

The cause of its reappearance is best told in its own terse and witty manner. When properly conducted such journals tend to soften the asperities of party politics, as well as to correct the vagaries and inconsistencies of public men. We welcome its resuscitation and appearance amongst us, and allow it to speak for itself:—

HERE WE ARE AGAIN.

A stern convic ion of duty constrains the Grumbler to dip his ear again into the troubled sea of human affairs. When we last laid down the censor's pen, after scolding, quizzing and lash ng the follies and errors of the time, we thought, in our simplicity, that we had brought society up to a decent sense of propriety. Everything seemed to be going on swimmingly, and we rested from our labours, as he rests who has vanquished an enemy or brought an argosy safely into port. Everything was put to rights except representation by population, which we were compelled to discharge from our infirmary as hopeless-ly incurable. But alas! no sooner was the lash removed, than publ c affairs relapsed into their pristine disorder, as if the Grumbler had never furnished it over the backs of the delinquents. And what a precious mess you have let matters get into, respect d public, since we last confabulated together.

The model Republic has come to grief, and where we left peace and plenty we return to find the fetter and the sword. We see war without generalship, democracy without freedom, m ney without value, emancipation without benevolence, and telegrams without truth. In our own Province we have beheld the anomaly of a Clear Grit Cabinet without George Brown, and horrible dictu, utterly oblivious of Rep. by Pop. The great Achilles of the Reform party wanders far from his native land; the war regys here unequally in his absence, whilst he, if report speaks correctly, in seeking elsewhere, that solace which he requires, now that his political goddess (the Premiership) has been wrested from his hands. Cartier's vision of "Vimy" and royalty has faded, Smith has retired from the republic of letters, John A. has gone into voluntary exile, while Foley fattens on the Post Office, McGee turns courtier and McDougall quietly browses in the public pasture. In short everything, at h me and abroad, civil and military, political and social, is in such a mess that we scarcely know where to begin. We are purposely merciful this week; for in good sooth, we scarcely can realise the herculean task before us; but next week and ever after we shall be as inexorably severe as Rhadamanthus himself. Within the limits of our little sheet, knavery and folly need expect no quarter.

If we appear to flourish the rod indiscriminately at first, the sufferers must remember that it has lain in pickle for an extraordinary period, and that our arms are spoiling from inaction. We shall endeavour to render the Grumbler as acceptable as our humble abilities and public favour will allow. The addition of 500 to our circulation would sharpen our wit and enliven our fancy immeasurably. Yield us a generous measure of your support, dear public, and you shall have no reason to complain of our efforts. To our brethern of the Press, we think we are entitled to look for more than an ordinary share of indulgence and attention, and we doubt not we shall receive it. We have but one desire, to present a paper which shall be satirical without rudeness, political without partiality and humorous without the least taint of coarseness or vulgarity. Shall we succeed?

THE LANCASHIRE OPERATIVE FUND IN THE STATES.—We are [illegible] Yankee paper offering [illegible] of Liverpool is devoted [illegible] honorable one. Its value is enhanced by the fact of the strain upon the entire commercial interests of the Country consequent upon this fratricidal war. Sometimes contributions in New York gave $20,000, a specimen of munificence that the English Cotton Lords would do well to imitate. We are grieved to learn that pestilence the fearful companion of famine is breaking out among the patient sufferers and decimating them.

GODEY FOR JANUARY.—this excellent Ladies Book is received. "The embellishments are "A New Year's Gift," "New Year," an emblimentical plate of the past and present season, a fashion plate with five excellent figures, and the "Old sewing Machine."

It also contains a large number of Dress, hood, braiding and embroidery patterns, besides a large amount of reading matter. This is a good time to send in sub-scriptions; the book can be had at T. Meanies Book Store, the only reliable place in Peterboro.

WE learn from the New Market Era, that a most destructive fire occurred in that Village on the 6th inst., consuming a large part of the business portion of the Village. weather cold and the wind high. Some 12 or 14 parties suffered considerably and it appears there was very little insurance, New Market tho' an old settled place seems to be built chiefly of wood.

Monday next is the day for the nomination of candidates for the Mayoralty. Two or three names have been mentioned in connection therewith, but 'at present we here of none save the present incumbent, who, notwithstanding certain charges of unfitness with the present and former Councils Railroad matters, seems to give general satisfaction.

WE would call attention of our readers to the excellent and cheap Maps published by J. J. Lloyd 164 Broadway, New York. He has issued two large colored Maps one of the Southern States, and the other of the State of Virginia. They are only 25 cents each and are invaluable in ascertaining the position of the opposing armies, while prosecuting the war.

AMERICAN AGRICULTURIST.—The December number of this paper is received. Every farmer ought to have such a paper in his house, as it gives all the information required about a farm or garden. Any person wishing to see it will please call at this office or T. Meanies Book Store, on George Street.

WE observe that the City of Toronto has no less than 4 candidates for the Mayoralty, in the field. The good town of St. Catharines has none: one of its papers advertises for one—good references are required, and he must belong to the Reformed faith!

UNION SCHOOL EXAMINATION.—The Examination takes place to-day and to-morrow, commencing each day at 9½ o'clock a. m.

On Monday evening next the pupils hold an exhibition in aid of the Lancashire Operative Fund. See advertisement.

☞ In consequence of Christmas and New Year falling upon Thursday, we shall issue and deliver our next and the following numbers on Wednesday evening.

—Last week a man named George Griffiths, living near Alba Craig, C. W., was gored to death by a ferocious bull.

—Diphtheria has made its appearance at Appleton, C. W.

One thousand vessels are wrecked on the English coast every year, on the average; and from these about three thousand persons are rescued by lifeboats, shoreboats, the rocket apparatus, and other means. It is a lamentable fact, nevertheless, that an average of eight hundred persons still perish every year from these disasters on the British coast.

PAPER RAGS.—When peddlers paid a cent and a half a pound, and that too, in tinware or paper rags, there was little inducement for the housekeeper to save her scraps of cloth. But the times have changed, and rags are now worth at least five times as much in cash. Every prudent housekeeper should now save her rags, and even old newspapers, which have heretofore been used for kindling.

THE ARMY WORM.—This pest is making sad havoc among the wheat and other crops, in various parts of the country, and we are unable to advise as to the best means of getting rid of them; but for the cure of colds, Rheumatism, Burns, Cramps, Pains, Neuralgia, and all pains of the body, the "Canadian Pain Destroyer" is decidedly the best. Sold by all Medicine Dealers, price 25 cts per bottle.

DO GOOD TO OTHERS.

Shall find the health that his spirit needs;
For every flower in others pathway thrown,
Confers its fragrant beauty on our own,
And if this be true, we doubt it not,
That the proprietors of Bryan's Pulmonic Wafers must be the recipients of blessings innumerable for the alleviation of the distressing coughs, etc, by this wonderful remedy. only 25 cents a box. Sold by all medicine dealers.

It is sold by the Druggists and Merchants in this country for 25 cents per bottle and warranted. Henry's Vermont Liniment needs but a single trial to make it a household treasure in every family. 25 cts. per bottle. Try it.

AN AWFUL WARNING.—In London, last week, a drunken and excited woman made expression, "God strike me down dead," when almost before she had got the words out of her mouth, she fell in the street, and on being picked up, life was found to be extinct.

THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION.

Washington, Dec. 11.

The following has been received at the Headquarters of the Army here:

St. Louis, Dec. 11.

To Major General Halleck, Gen. Curtis, Chief—Further details are received from Gens. Blunt and Herron, from the battle ground, Prairie Grove, near Fayetteville. One has been killed and wounded is now estimated at 1,000, and that of the enemy at 2,000. The Confederates left many of their dead and most of their wounded for us to care for. Extensive hospitals will be improvised in Fayetteville.

Persons returned from the battle-field represent that the enemy was 28,000 strong. Their artillery was much crippled. We took 4 cannons filled with ammunition and a large number of small arms. Gen. Blunt moves forward to-day on Cane Hill; Gen. Herron remains at Prairie Grove burying the dead and attending to the wounded.

Persons returned from the battle-ground represent that the enemy muffled the wheels of their guns, and moved off in the night, continuing their retreat to Van Buren probably crossing the Arkansas river. Col. McFarland, of the 19th Iowa, is killed. Col. Black, of the 37th Illinois, Major Thomas, of the 20th Iowa regiment, and a large number of subalterns are wounded. It was a hard fought fight and a complete victory.

S. R. CURTISS,
Major-General, Commanding.

Washington, Dec. 11.

At six o'clock this morning 143 guns opened on the devoted city at Fredericksburg, and up to the latest moment the firing continued without interruption. Its destruction appears certain. The enemy opened his fire at seven o'clock, but thus far have done no serious injury.

Gen. Franklin's grand division is crossing the river three miles below the city, having constructed bridges there with but slight opposition from the enemy. The gunboats are shelling the enemy 15 miles down the river.

HEADQUARTERS ARMY OF THE POTOMAC, Dec. 11, 9 a. m.—Everything last night was bustle and activity, as to-day was the time fixed for crossing the river.

During the night the pontoons were conveyed to the river and the artillery, 143 pieces, placed in position opposite the city.

At 5 o'clock this morning the Confederates fired two signal guns, and during the latter part of the night rockets were frequently seen to ascend within their lines.

At 5 o'clock the construction of three bridges in front of the city was commenced When the bridges were about half completed the enemy opened a murderous fire of intantry from the houses on the river bank. Up to this time not a shot had been fired from our side. The engineers were driven from the bridges and several killed and wounded.

At 6 o'clock Gen. Burnside ordered all the guns to be opened on the city.

The cannonade, which has continued up to the present time, is terrible.

The city is on fire, and its destruction appears to be certain.

The enemy, about 7 o'clock this morning, opened with their heavy guns from their works, but so far have done no serious injury.

General Franklin constructed his bridges about three miles below the city, meeting with but slight opposition. His troops are now crossing, and the gunboats are now shelling the enemy about fifteen miles down the river, where they have been concentrating their forces for the past few days. The concentrated fire of our batteries on the city has had the effect of driving back the enemy's infantry, and the work on the bridges has again been commenced.

The troops are all under arms near the river, prepared to rush over as soon as the bridges are completed.

HEADQUARTERS, ARMY OF THE POTOMAC, Thursday, noon.—An attempt being made to finish the bridges in front of the city, the Confederate infantry again opened their. The artillery in position again opened on it, the result being that it was again fired in several places.

The enemy has used very little artillery up to this time, as it would endanger their own men who are holding the river front.

Gen. Burnside has just issued an order to concentrate every available gun upon the city, under the cover of the fire of which it is believed that the bridge can be finished.

The killed and wounded do not amount to more than 50 men.

HEADQUARTERS ARMY OF THE POTOMAC, Dec. 11, evening.—But little firing took place between 1 and 3 o'clock, during which time all the available batteries were placed in position. They then numbered 176 guns. At a given signal all the batteries opened on the city. The fire was terrible but the Confederate sharpshooters could not be driven from their hiding places. The shot and shell went crashing through the houses, in many cases setting them on fire, causing a dense smoke, which, together with the explosion of powder, almost hid the city from view. It soon became evident that the bridges could not be built except by a bold dash. Volunteers were called for to cross in small boats. The order was no sooner given than hundreds of braves stepped forward but all could not go; about 100 were selected. They were soon on their way while the artillery threw a perfect storm of iron ball on the opposite bank. They reached the opposite shore, but not without loss; with fixed bayonets they rushed upon the enemy killing several and taking 101 prisoners who were safely landed on this side. At half-past four two bridges were finished opposite the city when the troops immediately began to cross over. The enemy were soon driven from the city back to their line of works. The two bridges in front of Gen. Franklin were successfully laid early in the day, but his troops did not cross until the two upper ones were ready. A sufficient force is now on the opposite side of the river, to resist any attack that is likely to be made. The Confederates fired but few guns in the morning and none in the afternoon, although their works were in easy range during the forenoon. The Confederates burnt three railroad bridges outside the city. Between 30 and 40 houses were burnt, mostly in the business part of the city. During the day between 8,000 and 9,000 rounds of ammunition were fired by our artillery. Everything is quiet to-night; the indications are that a battle will be fought to-morrow.

St. Louis, Dec. 11.

Gen. Blunt telegraphs Gen. Curtiss that the Confederates with whom he fought the battle of Prairie Grove, near Fayetteville, Ark, have probably crossed the Arkansas river. The enemy left all of his wounded and most of his dead on the field, uncared for. 100 of their wounded have died since the battle, and a large number of the remainder are wounded mortally. The total loss of the Confederates is estimated by Gen. Blunt at nearly 2,000. Our loss is about 200 killed and 500 wounded; most of the latter will recover. Gen. Herron puts the loss of the enemy at from 500 to 700 killed and 2,000 wounded; and estimates our own loss higher than Gen. Blunt does. The enemy lost five Colonels.

HEADQUARTERS ARMY OF THE POTOMAC, Dec. 12, 11 P. M.—The fog began to disappear early in the morning, affording an unobstructed view of our own and the Confederate positions. It being evident that the first ridge of hills in the rear of the city, on which the enemy had his guns posted, behind his works, could not be carried except by a charge of infantry, Gen. Sumner assigned that duty to General French's division, which was supported by General Howard's. The troops advanced to their work at ten minutes before 12, at a brisk run, the enemy's guns opening upon them a very rapid fire. When within musket range, at the base of the ridge, our troops were met by a terrible fire from the Confederate infantry, who were posted behind a stone-wall and some houses on the right of the line. This checked the advance of our men, and they all fell back to a small ravine, but not out of musket range. At this time another body of men moved to their assistance in splendid style, notwithstanding their large gaps were made in their ranks by the Confederate artillery. When our troops arrived at the first line of the Confederate defences, they double-quicked, and with fixed bayonets endeavored to dislodge the Confederates from their hiding places. The concentrated fire of the Confederate artillery and infantry, which our men were forced to face, was too much for them, and the centre gave way in disorder, but afterward they were rallied and brought back. From From that time the fire was spiritedly carried on, and never ceased until after dark. General Franklin, who commanded the attack on the left, met with better success. He succeeded, after a hard day's fight, in driving the Confederates about one mile.

At one time the Confederates advanced to attack him, but were handsomely repulsed with terrible slaughter and loss of between 400 and 500 prisoners belonging to Gen. A. H. Hill's division.

Gen. Franklin's movement was directed down the river, and his troops are encamped to-night not far from the Massaponax Creek.

Our troops slept to-night where they fought to-day. The dead and wounded are being carried from the field.

The following is a list of the officers killed and wounded as far as yet known:—Gen Jackson, of the Pennsylvania Reserves, killed; Gen. Bayard, struck in the thigh by a shell, and afterwards died; Gen. Vinton, wounded in the side, but not seriously; Gen. Gibbons, wounded in the hand; Gen. Kimball, wounded in the thigh; Gen. Caldwell, wounded in two places, but not seriously; Col. Sinlair of the Pennsylvania Reserves, wounded seriously; Capt. Hendrickson, commanding the 9th New York State militia, wounded seriously.

The firing of musketry ceased about six o'clock this evening, but the Confederates continued throwing shells into the city until eight o'clock.

The positions of the Confederates were as follows:—Gen. Longstreet was on the left and holding the main works; Gen. A. H. Hill and "Stonewall" Jackson were in front of Gen. Franklin, with Jacksons right resting on the Rappahannock, and Hill's forces acting as a reserve.

Gen. Burnside will renew the battle at day-light in the morning. The troops are in good spirits and not in the least disheartened.

MADSCO RIVER, SIX MILES NORTH OF DUMFRIES, Va., Dec. 12.—At about day break this morning between 1,000 and 1,500 of General Stuart's cavalry dashed into Dumfries, captured 10 sutlers and 25 packets as it is represented, and Mr. W Mclntosh, a telegraph repairer. They also cut down a telegraph pole and cut the wire, destroying several government and sutlers' wagons, and then hastily retreated. The wires were subsequently repaired. Brigadier-General Steinwecher has since occupied Dumfries.

New York, Dec. 13.

The total amount raised in this city, to this date, for the Lancashire operatives, is $162,0000.

The Custom House returns shows $900,000 worth of guns imported this week.

San Francisco, Dec. 12.

The Steamer from the Northern coast has arrived with $65,000 in treasure from Victoria, and $77,000 from Oregon.

Hong Kong dates of October 14 are received.

1,500 British troops, all Sepoys, had come in from India for special service at Shanghai.

The death of Gen. Ward was considered a great loss to the Imperial caste. The force he commanded was urged to consent to be organized as a British contingent.

Communications.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

SIR,—Mr. "Scribo," in his communication which appears in the last impression of the Examiner, (a communication which reminds one, here of the Epistles of Cicero, there of the letters of "Junius," save only for the spelling of the Latin words, which is not quite according to Ercciolati) intimates that I feel "a little disturbed because of" his "remarks on" my "Bear story."

I beg to assure Mr. Scribo that he was never more mistaken in his life. His effusions are not of a character calculated to produce the slightest feeling of disturbance.

In my letter of the 21st ultimo I accused Mr. Scribo' of being guilty of the contemptible meanness of quoting a mutilated passage from my communication to the Review of the 10th ultimo; and of quoting even that mutilated passage incorrectly.

Mr. "Scribo's" last chaste composition contains the following sentence: "In regard to my quoting incorrectly let the reader compare, and I am sure he will find that truth with B. A. strikes his lucubrations on "Bruin," a rare article"

I now repeat my accusation, and am prepared to submit our respective assertions to the following test. I will deposit $20 in one of the Banks, or in the hands of a private individual, if Mr. "Scribo" will do the same: I will name a friend, if Mr. "Scribo" will do the same: these two referees shall examine my letter of the 10th ultimo, and Mr. "Scribo's" of the 20th: if it is found that Mr. "Scribo" has not been guilty of the despicable trick with which I charge him, that of quoting me incorrectly my $20 shall be paid to the "Ladies' Relief Society;" if it is discovered that he, has, he $20 shall be added to their fund: the other $20 of course to be returned to their original owner.

I am, Sir, your obedient servant,

B. A.

Peterboro', December 12, 1862.

[It is due to "Scribo" to say that several orthographical errors have been made by the printer in arranging the type, and as he (Scribo) did not correct the proof sheet he cannot be held accountable for them.—ED. EX.]

To the Editor of the Examiner.

SIR,—In looking over my communication of 20th ult., in the [illegible] I find a comma has been [illegible] ting the type, as it is in my [illegible] instead of: "so large, as long that it is usually entered, to avoid a [illegible] quotation B. A. complains of, he has now the full benefit of it.

I am Yours &c.,

Lines on the Palmyra Massacre.

If true, heart-thrilling is the news,
Now men in power their rights abuse.
McNeils rush out has no excuse.
View every part
In peace or war, it plainly shows
A demon heart.
A Union man now disappears,
While for his safety, doubts and fears;
Mark the command, no stern, austere,
Ten days pass by,
Still unreturned. Ten rebels clear
For him must die.
Inhuman, cold, hard-hearted man,
No pity marked your cruel plan.
Their coffins view, those victims slain,
You doomed to die.
The bullets fly—low, lifeless, wan,
In death they lie!

Also, AN APPENDIX, containing a popular treatise on ANATOMY, PHYSIOLOGY, and the LAWS OF HEALTH; the whole making a large octavo volume of

OVER ONE THOUSAND PAGES,

with numerous

VALUABLE ILLUSTRATIONS!

THIS is probably the best, as well as the most thorough and extensive book ever published, as a Domestic or Family Medical Work. Its author is now an old man, and is probably more generally known as a popular medical author than any man living, owing to the great popularity and extensive use of his old work, which was one of great value, but in the present advanced state of medical science is altogether behind the times. Dr. G. is a graduate of several of the best Medical Colleges in the world, viz.: of Philadelphia, and of London and Paris. He has been a successful practicing physician for nearly forty years; and it can hardly supposed that any man can be better qualified to write such a work than he is. He has spent most of the time for several years in preparing this work—intending it, as he often remarked, as his last and greatest Legacy to Posterity.

The work contains a description of all the diseases known or common to this country—their causes, symptoms, and character—with plain and full directions for successfully treating them, telling what remedies to use; how to use them, and when; the whole stated in plain and simple language; or whenever any technical or Medical terms are used, they are fully explained; so that the commonest mind can understand them. The remedies recommended are generally of the simplest kind, such as are harmless, yet efficient, and usually such as are easily to be obtained.

Besides the diseases common to both sexes, the work contains a department on the diseases of Females, and their treatment. Also a department on the diseases of Children, which alone is worth the price of the book to mothers and all who have the care of children.

An important item in the work is its Pharmacy, or valuable Family Receipts, there being more than forty pages of Medical Receipts and Compounds, many of which will be found very important and useful in a family.

Alexander Stronach, Esq., of Drumaflan, Chairman of the Ordinary Directors, in the Chair. There were submitted to the meeting—

1.—Report by the Directors, which, on the motion of the Chairman, was cordially and unanimously approved of and adopted.

2.—The Balance Sheet for the past year, with detailed statements relative thereto, duly certified as correct, in terms of the Act of Incorporation, by the Chairman and Manager, and also by the Auditor.

There was also laid on the Table the various Valuation States in connection with the Quinquennial Investigation into the state of the Company's affairs, as at 31st January, 1862.

The following particulars derived from the Balance Sheet and States aforementioned, show the result of the operations of the Company for the past year:—

Amount proposed for Life Assurance during the year, contained in 1189 Proposal	£454,433 0 0
Amount of Proposals accepted, and for which 981 Policies were issued	359,680 0 0
ANNUAL PREMIUMS on said Policies	11,179 1 0
CLAIMS BY DEATH including BONUSES on PARTICIPATOR POLICIES, and after deducting Sums recovered from other Offices under guarantees	2,999 1 0
TOTAL SUM Assured under 4,755 current LIFE POLICIES	1,965,985 0 0
TOTAL ACCUMULATED FUNDS	353,503 3 2
TOTAL ANNUAL REVENUE	36,136 5 4

With reference to the recent investigation into the state of the Company's affairs, as at 31st January last, the Report States that both the principles of valuation and the details thereof, had been submitted to James John Downes, Esq., Actuary to the Economic Life Office in London, a gentleman well known as one of the highest authorities on such subjects in the kingdom, and had received his ent approval, as having been made on just and sound principles, and accurately carried out as certified in his report to the Directors, which formed part of the Appendix to their Report. This step the Directors considered useful and fit to give the utmost confidence—both to the shareholders and the Policyholders—in the soundness and correctness of the valuation

During the Quinquennial period, the claims by death, including the bonus additions which had been paid, and which had been considerably under the number that might have been expected from the Mortality Tables on which the Office rates are based, amounting to £93,975 6s 6d.

In valuing the Policies, each had been separately calculated, and not premiums had only been used, thus leaving a surplus of annual revenue of £11,427 18s 7d., to meet future expenses and to form a source of profit for next investigation. The total amount of claims by death paid since the commencement of the Company was £215,821 4s.

The Securities held by the Company were in a satisfactory position, and had been recently carefully scrutinized in detail by the Directors.

In conclusion, the Directors congratulated both the Proprietors and the Assured on the high position which the Company now occupied in the estimation of the public, and on the encouraging prospect of its business operations for the future

DECLARATION OF BONUS.

From the profits realized on the Life business, a retrospective Bonus of £1 7s 6d per cent per annum for the Quinquennial period was declared, on the sum originally assured under all Participating Policies, in terms of the previous additional Bonus; also a further prospective Bonus of £1 per cent per annum, on the amount of the Policies with said Bonuses, on all such of said Policies as may become claims by Death previously to the 31st January, 1867.

It will be observed, that this rate of Bonus is equivalent in the case of older Policies to £1 14s per cent per annum on the original sum assured; that the total additions to the sum assured, now vest d, are equal to 33 per cent on the sum assured; and that as the younger ages the additions amount to upwards of 75 per cent of the premiums paid.

Statement showing the Progress of the Company's Business during the Quinquennial Period, ending 31st January, 1862:

Year ending 31st January.	Amounts proposed for Assurance.	Amount of New Policies Issued.	Annual Premiums.	Total Income from year.	Accumulated Funds.

FIRE INSURANCE.

THE following table compiled from the official returns, exhibits, at a glance, the increase of duty paid to the Government by the different Insurance Offices, metropolitan and provincial, during the year 1861.

THE "ROYAL."

It will be seen, stands as before, at the very head of the list, and maintains a rate of progress very far in advance of all its rivals and competitors. Twelve months ago, we had the gratification of recording the fact that its increase, in the year 1860, had been greater than double that of any other company—had exceeded 80 per cent., of the entire increase of all the London offices combined—and had, also exceeded 30 per cent. of the aggregate increase of the remaining twenty eight provincial offices. We have now a pleasure of inviting the attention of our readers to the testimony of these later returns, which show that in the year 1861, the increase of the "Royal" was very nearly 40½ per cent. in excess of the increase of any other company—that there were but three offices which came even within fifty per cent. of it—and that it was actually more than one-sixth of the entire increase of the remaining forty-four offices, London and Provincial, put together.

Comment upon such facts as these would be superfluous. They speak significantly, the continued advance of the "Royal" in the confidence and good opinion of the public. That advance has been, from the begin ing, as remarkable as it has been rapid: and we cordially congratulate the directors and shareholders upon it, because we regard it as the just reward of prudent management, of liberal and honorable dealing, and of undoubted stability.

FINKLE & LYON

SEWING MACHINE COMPANY,

538 Broadway, New York.

TWO parts a little acquainted with the Finkle & Lyon Sewing Machines the Carefut purchaser of the Company's Circular is especially commended. This circular can be had on application. It is very specific, and will be found highly instructive, having been prepared with much care and as will shortly all statements therein made.

The following brief quotation is characteristic of the entire Circular

"This Machine is better adapted than any other Sewing Machine in market to the frequent changes and almost endless variety of sewing required in a family, for it will sew from one to twenty cords and fasten the stitch at either stopping, and make every stitch perfect. Will sew from the finest gauze to the heaviest cloth, and even the coarsest segmented bargee leather, without changing the feed needle or tension, or making any adjustment of machine whatever."

This have we successfully overcome the most difficult point in the Sewing Machine art. It was no ordinary triumph. Doubtly can we now say, "No other Machine compares with it in this respect." Hence, have no hesitancy in without exception—given the highest premium, "wherever the Machine has been properly exhibited in competition with other first class Sewing Machines." Hence it is that we are able to offer the following guarantee, viz.: "We warrant every Machine we sell to give better satisfaction than any other Sewing Machine in the market, or money refunded." We never sell a Machine on any other terms. The guarantee is as reliable as the note of any business man in the land. For more than five years have we relied upon such facts for the reputation of our Machine; and without a single travelling agent in the field, there is scarcely a neighborhood from the continent where the Machine is not favourably known. We prefer such a reputation to one based on mere "talking points," as they are technically called in the trade. Hence we make but one kind of stitch, viz. the lock-stitch, alike on both sides, requiring only one thread of the kind of other kinds of stitches.

N. B.—Local Agents wanted in every county throughout the West. ☞ Special inducements offered.

Poetry.

Scotch Emigrant's Song.

"Air, "Lochaber no more."

Farewell to the burnie, the meadow, an' brae,
Where often in childhood I blythely did play;
Likewise to the common wi' furze blooming fair,
Where wild-bees an' linties mak' vocal the air,
Oh! sweet were the hours where frae school thraldom free,
I scoured o'er that waste wi' a heart bounding glee,
And rambled bird-nesting, yet gathering the while,
Those memories o' light that thro' darkness now smile.

Farewell to the glen wi' its gay fairy powers,
Where love's richest music mak' glad the bright hours,
Where wildly the burnie its daffin' begins,
Wi' twining 'mang rocks, an' wi' forming o'er linns.
For never again, when the spring flowers abound,
When simmer waves richly, or autumn's fruit crown'd,
Will I wander its mazes, my heart throbbing praise,
As drinking delight frae its nature-clad braes.

Farewell, my companions o, pastime an' toil,
No more will your friendship my sorrows beguile;
Your songs, your keen jests, and your quaint auldfolk lore,
Shall ne'er cheer my heart in old Scotia more.
An thou, lovely Scotia, the tear dims my e'e,
Brave land o' my fathers, as parting wi' thee;
But pride in thy worth, a delight in thy fame,
Wherever I wander, my heart shall enflame!

Alas! that stern want, life's affections should mar.
By sending me thus o'ere the ocean afar,
To toil for his solace in lands wi, gold strewn,
Yet lacking the glories that hallow my own.
But a, whom the tyrant overtakes must obey,
Frae home, friends an' country, he drives me away.
Then, ho! for the land where his frown is unknown,
Where life is a blessing, an, toil gets its own!

Miscellaneous.

The Romance of Real Life or Misery Resulting from Sin.

Two years ago Hannah Brooks formed an unhappy connection with a lighterman's apprentice named Archer, with whom, during the last twelve months, she lived maritally. Three months ago she was observed by him taking a glass of ale with a young man and a girl in public-house; and this circumstance, "light as air," sufficed to possess him with a ferocious jealousy which made her after life intolerable. Shakespeare's Othello was not more under the influence of the passion. The bargeman glared at his young mistress through the window in a way to cause her, we are told, so dreadful an alarm that she ran away in terror, followed to her home by her young Bluebeard of a lighterman, who saying three times to her, "Is it you?" knocked her down and beat her cruelly. Has the stage itself a more dramatic scene? A course of brutal cruelties are said now to have continued to her death. She was told to go into service, or to the work-house—or seek her bread by a worse course. And though it was probable that her paramour had no notion of disevering the painful connection, she clearly laboured under the dread that no resources awaited her but the worst. She deliberately made up her mind to take refuge in suicide as the preferable alternative, and it was no doubt under the influence of this determination that she announced to her mother a few hours before the act was committed that she had procured continuous employment which would enable her to separate from Archer, and so end her misery. But she had already written her last letter for her paramour, in which she charged him with driving her to an early grave, in the shame she felt at being laughed at for her folly. "I would rather die like this," she says, "than do as you told me." Extending her sad reproaches to her own family, she tells them, "Mother, you cursed me when I was a girl, and your curse has clung to me." She adds that she had not a friend in the world to speak to her or to give her a kind word; that she might go on the streets before her mother would give her a bit of bread; that neither mother nor father, nor brothers nor sisters, "would grieve for her, as they had said that she had brought them to shame and disgrace," and expressing her hope that her mother will not curse her sisters, lest it might cling to them, as it had done to herself, exhales her utter wretchedness in the most piteous appeals to Heaven for the pardon of her crime. Towards midnight of that day she was seen coming down the pier at Paul's Wharf quarrelling with her lover, and heard bitterly upbraiding him for his ill-usage of her. The provocation seems to have been followed by fresh blows; on which, hastily separating herself, she clambed over the iron gates at the pier, and saying, "You shall see me no more," ran along the barge pier, stooped under the chain, and threw herself into the surging waters of the Thames. It is but justice to Archer to say that he plunged after her, and that he only relinquished the hold he had obtained as there occurred a danger of both being sucked under a barge. The cry raised that a man was overboard brought assistance, which availed for his rescue; but the body of the poor girl passed on, and was discovered some ten days later at Lower Shadwell, the jury, on the inquest, finding "That the deceased committed suicide while of unsound mind, and that the said suicide was caused by the cruelty and illusage of John Archer."—London Paper.

The Execution of Cleary.

This melancholy occurrence was consummated on Friday last at half past nine a. m., on the south side of the Goal-Yard, in the presence of about 300 persons, the greater part of whom were from the country and not a few from Port Huron. Since receiving his sentence in September last, the unfortunate man has been enduring in rather an extraordinary degree the miseries of his situation. At first he maintained a sullen and morose disposition, refusing to realise the solemnity of his position and appeared to cultivate the idea that he was an innocent and injured man, at many times he would refuse his daily food, and in consequence of this and the distressed state of his mind he had become very much emaciated, so much so that scarcely any one would have recognised in the feeble form of the convict, the hale and robust man that appeared before the Coroner's Jury on the 18th of March last.

Laterally, however, he became more settled in his mind and a consciousness of his real position produced the reasonable inquiry concerning a preparation for his change. He has been constantly attended by the Rev. Mr. Kirwan of this place, and occasionally by the Rev. Mr. Boubat of Corunna. The latter spent the whole of the night previous to the execution with the prisoner in his cell, admitting to him the consolations of the Church. In the morning he was found by Mr. Kirwan, and the sacraments were administered. At nine the cell was entered by the officers of justice, the prisoner was conducted into the hall, pinioned and led to the scaffold. The clergymen leading the prisoner while the Sheriff and staff with the reporters brought up the rear.

The prisoner ascended the scaffold with a firmer step than many expected, and taking his position on the drop-door, he engaged in prayer with great fervour. He made no public confession of his crime, but asked the forgiveness of all whom he had injured and declared his willingness to forgive all who had injured him, and after a few sentences uttered in calling on God for mercy, he appeared sensible that his last moment had arrived, and changing his prayer he said "Lord Jesus receive my spirit," as the last word was uttered the bolt was drawn, the body fell about nine feet, and a few struggles and heaves of the chest closed the days of Cleary on earth, and his spirit went to God who gave it." As to his future state it is not for us to judge, we read that there is hope in the death of the righteous, and we know that this a safe position to occupy; and we are also aware that there is a possibility through the mercy of God of a favorable answer at the last moment to the prayer, "Lord remember me." That Cleary called in earnest for mercy there is no doubt, and here we leave him to enquire for a moment the cause of his untimely end.

It is not our purpose to offend any or to place any one in the position of being an accessory to the crime for which he suffered; but we cannot dismiss the subject without saying tha strong drink, such as is used by many in respectable circles was the sole cause of the double tragedy. Cleary was a murderer, but strong drink made him mad, and he killed his comrade Burke. These facts are suggestive and would only be weakened by comment. The above narrative is the effect fa cause that still exists, and is sustained by—whom? Reader, answer.

Cleary was born in Ireland, lived eight years in New York, was a resident of this place only a few months. He was 25 years of age, about 5 feet 10 inches high, strongly built and of a light complexion, with large blue eyes, prominent cheeks, thin lips, short chin and more of a careless than vicious expression of countenance.

There was one feature in the execution that we noticed with pleasure, that was such a sight had but little interest for the people in this county, and further that our females nearly free from charge of such inhumane curiosity. They were almost without a representative at the horrid spectacle.

A new Saint in Montreal who performs Miracles.

(From the Montreal Witness.)

Amongst the twenty seven saints canonized by the Pope on the 8th June last, is one called St. Michel des Saints, a Spaniard from Barcelona, who died in 1625, aged only 33 years. His relics, it seems, have been obtained by the Roman Catholic Bishop of Montreal, during his recent visit to Rome, and arrived here a few weeks ago. They were temporarily deposited in the choir of the Hotel-Dieu nuns in this city, and on Sunday morning, at the close of the grand mass, they were transferred with great pomp and ceremony into the sanctuary of the church of the Hotel-Dieu. It is not easy to conceive what an excitement such an occurrence, taking place with the consent of the clergy, is certain to produce, amongst such a large and devout Roman Catholic population as our city contains. L'Ordre is going to publish a number of affidavits in relation to these recent miracles, from which we will probably give some extracts. In the meantime, a short sketch of the life of the saint has been published by the same paper, from which it appears that his name was Michel, and that the "des Saints" is a surname due to his having been called in his lifetime and regarded as "the flower of the saints." His piety since early childhood seems to have been of the most extravagant character, as will be shown from a single extract which we translate:—

"The fire of Divine love, which consumed him day and night, would sometimes burn with such vehemence in his heart, that his face was inflamed and all his body kindled up; to such an extent that to deaden this fire it was necessary for him, even during the greatest cold of winter, to go out into the garden, bare his breast and apply to it wet cloths and icicles. Having gone one day into a church in order to say mass, he was seen with a face so inflamed, that fire seemed to proceed from it. Having knelt down, he uttered two groans, forced from him by his love. Soon after, as he went into the vestry, the priest of the church perceived that the breast of the servant of God was like a volcano, spreading around a great glare. Having attempted to embrace him, he could not resist the darts of fire which proceeded from the volcano inclosed in that blessed breast, and he fell down in a swoon. Thus also he deserved and once obtained, while in a state of ecstasy, the Lord gave him his Divine heart and requested his in exchange."

"The Saint died on the very day which he had long in advance prophesied would be that of his death."

If we are to credit this account, the love of God must be a material substance, a fluid very much akin to electricity, occasioning the same phenomena of light, heat and sudden discharges, giving a shock to the nervous system. But we refrain from any comments, and will wait further developments of this case, which promises to emulate the miracles of La Salette, in France.

—A barn belonging to James Dickie, about four miles west of Galt, was accidentally burned to the ground on Saturday evening last, together with about 150 bushels of wheat and 100 bushels of oats.

Wonderful Copper Discovery.

(From the Lake Superior Journal.)

Some two years ago, a huge mass of float copper, weighing at least twenty tons, was discovered on the location of the Menard mine at Portage Lake. In size it was some sixteen feet long, four wide, and one and a-half thick, which is far the largest float mass ever before found on the Lake. Such being the prodigious weight, it was patent that it came from a vein near by, as it was impossible that any human agency known to exist in the past could have moved it a great distance. Beneath it charcoal was found, and also stone hammers, indicating plainly that the ancient miners, whose history is unwritten, and of whom nothing is known, except as traces of their working are thus found, had either taken it from its original bed and placed it in fire, in order to burn the rock from it, or finding it upon the spot where it was now discovered, placed it in the fire for the same purpose.

We find those who had been of the opinion that it never was put in the place where it was found by human agency, for the reason that a large amount of the float of copper in small masses, weighing from a half-pound to fifty, are found scattered immediately around it. Already some two tons have been gathered, whose existence in proximity with the large mass, would indicate that water and ice may have been the agencies they were thus moved and scattered from their original resting place. The agency, however, by which they were thus placed over the surface, it is not so important to know, as their existence, and the more important fact to which they point, viz. that they must have come from some vein near at hand. With this conviction simultaneously were the cutting up of the huge masses, and the collection of the smaller ones, the work of a most thorough exploration was begun in order to find the vein from which they came. What was thus reasonably manifest, seems to have been accomplished, for the work of a few days uncovered about forty feet distant from the huge float, a mass of still larger dimensions in the vein itself.

At last accounts this new wonder had been stripped some five feet in breadth for a length of twelve feet and three feet thick, with no indication of growing less at any point. It is opened sufficiently to indicate that it will far exceed the float mass. The vein in which it has been found was known for years. It runs through the Quincy, Pewabic, Franklin, Pontiac, Albany and Boston, &c., and they all, in the value of their stock, must at least feel the effect of this development. The vein is of the Epidote character, but from some cause seems to spread and soften at the spot of this discovery. Jacob Houghton, Esq., the able agent of this fortunate miner, is prosecuting the work of opening the vein with diligence, employing all the laborers he can obtain. The general impression among the oldest and ablest mining men is that a vein of extraordinary richness has been struck, which will add new interest to this heretofore wonderful district.

On the discovery of this mass of copper some shrewd operators made haste to Boston, hiring a tugboat and express trains, and bought in stock of the mining company, before the news of the discovery had reached the stockholders there. By this means they made a good thing for themselves.

Greater than the "Great Eastern."

The Messrs. Winans, of Baltimore, projectors of the cigar shaped steamers, are building in England a boat of the same species seven hundred feet long. The first boat, which was an experiment, lies at the dock in Baltimore. They propose to throw the "Great Eastern," with her scores of stockholders, into the shade, by a single effort of individual enterprise. The boat will be propelled by two screws, one forward and the other aft. The Messrs. Winans are secessionists, and very wealthy mechanics. One of them was arrested at the beginning of the war, in connection with a steam gun project he had on hand, and a writer in the Scientific American says they are spending their money in the English work-shops on account of the hostility they met with in the United States. It was rumored at one time that their experimental steamer was to be used as a ram for the rebel service. Perhaps the mammoth vessel is intended for that use.

SHOOTING A LYNX IN WATERLOO.—On Saturday morning last, Mr. Cyrus Green, and brother, of Waterloo, set out for a hunt some two miles above the village of Preston. After a run of half a mile, Mr. Green heard the dogs barking up a tree. Proceeding towards the spot he found them at the foot of a large tree in which a large lynx, crouching on one of the upper limbs. he had only a shot-gun. Although he determined to commence the attack. The first shot took effect in one of the legs, breaking it, but only causing Mr. Lynx to make a slight change in his position. He now stood looking directly at Mr. Green, as if about to spring upon him. The gun was again raised, and this time with deadly aim, the charge taking effect on the creature's head, putting out his eyes and bringing him tumbling to the ground. With some assistance from clubs, the animal was soon dispatched. It stood nearly two feet high, and measured five feet and a half in length. —Galt Reformer.

BENEFITS OF RELAXATION IN THE EDUCATION OF CHILDREN.—Sir Benjamin Brodie thus expresses his opinion on this subject: "It is only to a limited extent that the education of children can be advantageously combined with bodily labor. Even in the case of grown up persons, some intervals of leisure are necessary to keep the mind in a healthful and vigorous state. It is when thus relieved from the state of tension belonging to actual study that boys and girls, as well as men and women, acquire the habit of thought and reflection, and of forming their own conclusions, independently of what they are taught and the authority of others. In younger persons, it is not the mind only that suffers from too large a demand being made on it for the purposes of study. Relaxation and cheerful occupation are essential to the proper development of the corporeal structure and faculties: and the want of them operates like a unwholesome atmosphere, or defective nourishment, in producing the lasting evils of defective health and a stunted growth, with all the secondary evils to which they lead.

ARMIES IN THE FIELD.—The U. S. Secretary of War, in his report just issued, states that that portion of the United States which is now, or has been during the last year, the scene of military operations, is confined within ten military departments, that the armies operating in those departments, according to recent official returns, constitute a force of seven hundred and seventy-five thousand three hundred and thirty-six officers and privates, fully armed, and equipped; that since the date of the returns this number has been increased to over eight hundred thousand; that when the quotas are filled up it will number a million of men.

We wish our readers would try Downs' Vegetable Balsamic Elixir for coughs, colds and all diseases of the throat, chest and lungs, for we are confident from the abundance of evidence that it is one of the oldest and most reliable cough medicines in use. It is sold by the Druggists and Merchants in this country for 25 cents per bottle and warranted. Henry's Vermont Liniment needs but a single trial to make it a household treasure in every family. 25 cts. per bottle. Try it.

A PETRIFIED MAN.—According to the Territorial Enterprise, a petrified man was found in the mountains south of Gravelly Ford. Every limb and feature of the stony mummy was perfect, not even excepting the left leg which had evidently been a wooden one during the life-time of the owner, which lifetime, by the way, came to a close about a century ago, in the opinion of a savan who has examined the defunct. The Enterprise adds: The people of the neighborhood volunteered to bury the poor unfortunate, and were even anxious to do so, but it was discovered when they attempted to remove him that the water which had dropped upon him for ages from the crag above had coursed down his back and deposited a limestone sediment under him, which had glued him to the bedrock upon which he sat with a cement of adament, and Judge S. refused to allow the charitable citizens to blast him from his position.—[Alta Cal., 5th ult.

PARENTAL INFLUENCE.—Were all religious professors who are parents, real and eminent Christians; were they from the time they became parents to set their hearts upon being the instruments of their children's conversion; were they to do all that prayer, instruction discipline and example could do for the formation of the religious character of their offspring; and were they careful to abstain from every thing which would obstruct these ends, I feel confident that it would be within the hallowed precincts of such homes, and not in the sanctuary, that the children of the godly would usually become godly themselves.—Jonas Angell James.

EMIGRATION TO OTTAWA IN 1862.—From the commencement of the season to the 5th of December, the number of Emigrants who arrived at Ottawa was: English 146 men 74 women, 130 children; Scottish, 24 men, 13 women, 25 children; Irish, 184 men, 108 women, 116 children; Germans and Poles, 236 men, 172 women, 362 children; Norwegians, 16 men, 12 women, 12 children; making a total of 1633, who possessed capital to the amount of $84,639.

CHRISTMAS.

From time immemorial it has been customary to keep the 25th of December as a day of rejoicing and of mutual salutation, as well as of feasting and hilarity. We are easily elated or depressed, hence any occasions for the exercise of either of these opposite emotions we soon manifest in the impression that intelligence, good or otherwise, makes upon us.

The event intended to be commemorated by the observance of this day is one of the greatest that ever occurred in our world. The birth of Christ was announced by heavenly messengers in this manner: "Behold I bring you glad tidings of great joy which shall be to all people—for unto you is born this day in the city of David a Saviour who is Christ the Lord." The Shepherds of Bethlehem to whom these good news were communicated were anxious to see the object of this extraordinary notice, and they hurry in to the place indicated by the angel and find all, as it was told them. One thing, however, is certain that in appointing the observance of this feast a chronological error has occurred, as in the country where this glorious event transpired, Shepherds at this season of the year do not keep watch over their flocks by night. There, as here, it is now midwinter, and though not in so high a latitude as we are, frost and snow are common.

This, however, is a matter of small moment in the commemoration of the great event whether it took place on the 25th Dec. or the 25th March—we now keep the time honoured custom of the former day.—It is usual to meet our friends, to exchange expressions of good will, to feast and rejoice as well as to exchange gifts—all these exhibit a sensation of joy and gladness thrilling through our hearts, which we love to see kept up, and cherished. From our earliest childhood we remember the family and friendly gatherings, the bountiful supply of good cheer, the gifts of Santa Claus and all the accompaniants of the season. Christmas was then looked forward to with feelings of delight, and its realization as the height of mundane happiness. Nor in our mature years is the season devoid of pleasure—true we have parted with childish things, but the event which causes its observance is better understood by us, and should be more appreciated by us—the happy family and friendly union—the usual enjoyments which roas beef and plum pudding afford, still remain, and we as well as the young folks can and do enjoy the festive season of Christmas.

The remarkable event, while it is a source of gladness and joy, might also fill us with astonishment and wonder. The great Creator of the universe appears on the plains of Bethelhem as a helpless infant of the human family. Born of a woman, reared as we all have been, he appears as a man, has flesh and bones as we all have, spends a short life in alleviating human suffering, in guiding erring human nature in the paths of virtue and happiness, points the road to everlasting habitations, magnifies in our nature the law which we have all broken, offers up his life as a sacrifice for us—procures by his death forgiveness for our sins, and salvation from the curse that a broken law deserves.

"God so lored the world that he gave his only beg tten Son, that whosoever believeth on Him should not perish but have eternal life."

Well then, may we rejoice in the important and glorious events connected with the introduction into our world of our glorious Emmanuel. Let us rejoice and be glad, praise God for the gifts of his providence which we enjoy, but especially for the greater gift of His Son. May we each by faith call him our Saviour, and enjoy all the blessings he came to procure for our race.

We wish all our readers a happy, happy Christmas—the enjoyment of all the good the season is intended to confer, and whilst in the enjoyment of plenty of good things, let us remember the poor. We have many poor amongst us, and we have the hundreds of thousands in merry old England that would be glad of our leavings on Christmas day. It is in accordance with the example of Him who trught us how to live, that we should remember the poor.

THE MAYORALTY.

On Monday last Charles Perry, Esq., was re-elected as Mayor for the ensuing year. This is the second time he has been re-elected without opposition—a pretty good proof that his services as Mayor have been acceptable to the rate-payers. We at one time imagined—from the efforts made by a "Rate-payer," who published a long statement of the sins of the Mayor and Town Council—that there would have been opposition to Mr. Perry, but as the time drew on the less was heard of opposition.

If blame is chargable at all, we submit that it is with the Council, and not with the Mayor, as the latter has all along but carried out what the former inaugurated.

UNION SCHOOL EXHIBITION.

The exhibition held at the Union School on Monday night last was a great success. With praiseworthy determination the scholars were resolved to assist in doing something to relieve the sufferings of the British Operatives, and they devised the scheme of turning the annual season of the examination of the School to account. So all set themselves to work to learn pieces to recite, pieces to play and sing, to hear which a fee of four pence for admission was charged, and we were surprised to hear it announced by the Principal that $30 clear were realised from the affair. The large lecture room was completely filled. The recitations were good, the singing and music excellent; a company of boys under the able superintendence of Mr. Lince went through a lesson of Military drill, in a way that would have done credit to much older bands. In fact every one seemed delighted with the exercises of the evening. The only drawbacks that we noticed were want of ventilation, and the exercises though anything but wearisome or flagging, were kept up too long for the little folks. We suggest in future attention to the admission of fresh air, earlier commencement and earlier conclusion. It perhaps may be deemed invidious to notice any, where all did so well, but we can scarce refrain to notice the recital by Miss Rutherford of an original description on Canada, and Canada life in winter. In addition to the merit of the composition, it was rendered with so much self-possession, clearness and correctness of pronunciation, and correct, accent, as to lead us to think, that we have never heard it equalled by any one, within the School building. In the lack of good reading and correct delivery, it is refreshing to hear such a good specimen from a scholar in the Union School. Short addresses were delivered by the chairman, Messrs. White Douglass, and the Principal, and the company separated at 10 o'clock, all apparently highly pleased with what they had seen and heard.

THE WAR.

Intelligence from the seat of War up to recent dates gives the loss of the Federals by the battle at Fredericksburg at 12,311—a fearful loss truly. We have not come across any account of the Rebel loss; no doubt it is heavy, as the Federals fought desperately.

Gen. Burnside, after the battle of the 13th, crossed the River North in good order. In a despaten to Gen. Halleck he gives the number of his killed at 1,152, wounded 9,000, and prisoners 700. He is reported to have felt confident of beating the enemy had he been allowed to renew the battle next day.

In North Carolina the Federals after taking Kingston are said to have been repulsed at Goldsboro', with great slaughter.

The Confederates seem always aware of the movements of their enemies, and appear always at the right time and place to oppose them, while the latter get their intelligence of their foes' position and intentions too late to be of service, one of the disadvantages consequent upon prosecuting a war on an enemy's territory.

Sir David Bremster in the introductory address at the opening of the Edinburgh University, thus refers to one of the Characteristics of the age to which we direct the attention of our readers:—

Among the more remarkable characteristics of the age in which we live, is the predominance of the military spirit in every civilized nation, whether it be at peace or at war. . . . . This triumph of ambition or revenge over the holiest of man's affections, and the sternest of his obligations admits of but one explanation. Nations have no faith. War is their master-crime, for which no atonement has been provided; and its issue is in national disaster, and in those stern retributions which conquest, and pestilence, and famine, often reserve for the third and the fourth generation. But it is on its bearing upon civilized life, more than in its sanguinary phase, that I wish you to acquire just notions on the subject of war, the great duty of nations—the great duty of man—is to promote the moral and physical amelioration of his race. Humanity enjoins it, religion enjoins it, and even national policy, not always the safest of counsellors, adds her sternest injunctions. When war is in the ascendant, all the springs of society are shaken loose. On the property of the nation, whether fixed or moveable, war makes its first inroad. The financial pulse beats in feverish excitement. The plow ceases to travel over the heath and the morass; and the rich cargoes floating on the ocean become the prey of pirates of civilization. Art and science are summoned from their peaceful labours, to fabricate new weapons of destruction. The institution of charity and philantrophy are paralyzed in their labours of love; and the missionery and the schoolmaster carry on their blessed work with more limited means, and within a narrower range; and thrice happy is the nation that has weathered the storm of war without agrarian or political convulsions. If this be a true description of the civil consequences of war, how deep is the obligation upon each of us to teach the lessons of peace in our families, and to propogate them throughout the sphere over which our interest extends. On you who are to be the teachers of youth in the school or in the sanctuary, lies heavily the duty of enforcing the great Christian precept—"to live at peace with all men"—of checking that love of military adventure, and dispelling that ignis fuctuus of national glory, which has so often accelerated the fall of the mightiest of empires. In thus pleading for universal peace, you will not suppose that I disapprove, or am callous to, that great national movement in which many of you have taken so noble a part, and which cannot fail to avert from our beloved shores the very calamities I have been deploring. Before this centuary began, I have myself trodden the pavement of our old university in the garb of a volunteer; and could it, as it cannot avail, I would proffer in the same cause the feeble arm and the tottering limb that have been spared—London Record.

Life Assurance.—We direct the attention of our readers to the advertisement of the Canada Life Assurance Co., which will be found in another column. Mr. Geo. A. Cox, Express agent, has been appointed agent of the above Company.

The Municipal Elections commence on Monday, the 5th inst. Tuesday is a statutory holiday, and if the election extends over to the second day, it must be adjourned over till Wednesday, the 7th, to make the election legal.

The Statute requires the Returning Officer when a poll is demanded, to keep open the election until 4 o'clock of the afternoon of the first day, and then adjourn the same until 10 o'clock in the forenoon of the next day, not being a Sunday or a legal holiday. By referring to the Consolidated Statutes of Canada, chap. 25, page 28, a list of the days called holidays, and an ong ten others beside Sunday, there is "the Epiphany," the holiday which falls next year upon Tuesday, the 6th of January. We find another list of holidays in the act of Bills of Exchange and Promissary notes in which are three not mentioned, in the former list. There is surely some room for reform in our laws respecting holidays. Great inconvenience may arise from acts done upon those days by people who are not aware of their existence on the Statute book. It is ridiculous to force upon people the observance of holidays they know nothing of and care nothing about. Those who know about the Epiphany, St. Paul's, St. Peter's, Corpus Christie, All Saint's days, and the like, may desire to keep them—but those who do not ought not to be compelled to observe them. We speak in reference to Upper Canada, and trust some amendmendment will be made therein soon.

The Town Council met on Monday last. Present, the Mayor, Messrs. Toole, Stevenson, Cumming, Ryan, Bradfield, Lawson and Fry.

A communication from Mrs. Haultain, Secretary of the committee of the Ladies' Relief Society, soliciting a contribution from the Council, was read, and a motion passed for the payment of $20 to the committee.

Petitions from Messrs. McAuliffe and Burns asking a reduction in the price of Shop License were read, and a resolution adopted of granting them License at half price.

A petition from Wm. Wood, praying to have his taxes remitted as he is not of age, was referred to the committee on Finance.

Several accounts were referred to the committee on Finance.

A Report from the Fire committee recommending payment to Lionel York of $100 on account of his contract of the Cisterns, and the amount of the account of C. H. S. Sweeting for plastering the Engine House, was read, received and adopted.

A Resolution to pay Elias Thompson $18 on his account now before the Finance committee passed.

The Council then adjourned to Friday night the 2nd January, at 7 p. m.

☞See first page for continuation of County Council proceedings.

Concert.—A Concert in aid of the Lancashire Relief Fund, was held at Bobcaygeon on Monday Evening last, in the School House, the assemblage was very large, the House being filled to overflowing; the singing on the whole was very good. Prof. Hopkins entertained the audience with a bumpological burlesque on Phrenology. Mr. Crabtree's recitations were suitable for the occasion.

Theatre.—Mr. Kelley's Company are now giving some of their entertainments in this Town. As this is not the first time they have been in Peterboro', it is needless for us to say anything in their praise. They will be in Peterboro' for some time yet; the play for this evening is the "Lady of Lyons."

The Canadian Baptist in copying an article from our columns lately, neglected to add the affix at the end of it, which denotes that it was a Communication—not an Editorial. The omission may have been designed or otherwise; whichever way we trust it will not be repeated.

Mr. Crawford, who has had long experience in book-binding in the largest cities both in Canada and elsewhere, is now prepared to do binding of every description. Any order left at this office will be punctually attended to. See advertisement in another column.

Mr. McElroy has been re-elected Mayor of Hamilton.

Mr. Weller has been elected Mayor for our sister Town of Cobourg.

☞A daring robbery was committed on Tuesday evening last, at the Store of Mr. Lech, Furrier, on George Street, by taking a large and valuable Sleigh Robe from the door. Mr. Lech offers a reward for the apprehension of the audacious villain, and we sincerely hope he will be captured.

On the same night a thief visited the outbuildings of the Rev. Mr. Rogers, just outside of the Town, killed one of the best sheep, left the entrails inside of the building and coolly walked off with the carcas.

This is the second time a similar visit has been made to his sheep within a short time.

The "Scotia's" Mails.

The following letter from Mr. Gladstone Chancellor of the Exchequer, to Professor Newman, is published in the London Star:

"11 Carlton House Terrace,
December 1, 1862.

"My dear Sir: I am sure you will receive indulgently a comment I have to make on a statement in your recent letter on American affairs, published in the Star, touching a matter not of opinion but of fact.

"I have never to my knowledge expressed any sympathy with the Southern cause, in any speech at Newcastle or elsewhere, nor have I passed any eulogium on President Davis. In dealings, whether with South or North, I have thought it out of my province to touch in any way the complicated question of praise or blame.

"Perhaps I should end here; but I cannot avoid adding, that I think myself a much better friend to the Northern Americans, if it is not presumptuous to use the phrase, than those who have encouraged and are encouraging them to persevere in their hopeless and destructive enterprise. Among these I of course assign to you the prominent place, merited alike by your distinguished powers and your undoubted sincerity.

"Believe me, my dear sir, faithfully yours
"W. E. Gladstone.

The "Great Eastern."

(From the New York Times.)

How the Mammoth Ship was Repaired—Visit of the Board of Underwriters—Their Certificate of her Seaworthiness.

On the 27th of last August, when the "Great Eastern" was endeavoring to make this port by way of the Sound, off Montauk Point, she struck on a sunken rock not put down in any chart, and tore a fracture in her outer skin of such dimensions as to make it doubtful whether she could be trusted in that state on her voyage home. In all probability she could have made the voyage well enough, for her inner skin was untouched, and so long as that is sound the vessel remains perfectly seaworthy.

It will be remembered that the "Great Eastern" is in fact two perfectly distinct ships, one inside the other, with a space of two feet nine inches between the interior and exterior skins. This space is honeycombed crosswise and lengthwise into upwards of 400 cells. These cells are intended to be so many watertight compartments, adding to the buoyancy of the ship when uninjured, and acting as a series of floats in case any particular part should have a hole knocked in it. They would have acted in this way and have saved the ship from material damage when she struck the rock off Montauk Point, had it not been for an oversight on the part of her builders. It appears that, in putting up the walls of the cells, apertures had to be left for the workmen to pass through after they had rivetted the reverse side of the plates. Each apparatus should have been closed as the last workman finished his work. Somehow, they were all left open; consequently, when the outer shell was burst in, all the space between it and the inner shell filled with water, sinking the ship over five feet and rendering her apt to be loggy and unmanagable in anything like rough weather. Some idea of the effect which this sudden influx of East River might have upon the mighty craft, may be imagined when it is known that, since the stoppage of the leak, nearly four thousand tons of the intrusive element were pumped from her.

Rather than take the risk of sending her to sea in such a deplorable condition, the agents determined upon having her repaired here if possible. At a general consultation of engineers, the felicitious device which has since been found to work so admirably, was put forth by the Messrs. H. B. & E. S. Benwick, and it was resolved to let them try what they could do. Their plan and mood of carrying it out has already been detailed in these columns.

The board of underwriters conferred together yesterday, and took counsel with the Captain, and then drew up and presented to the agents of the "Great Eastern" Company, the following certificate:—

We, the unoersigned, having carefully examined the steamer "Great Eastern," and the repairs, which have been done in a scientific and workmanlike manner, are of opinion that she is in every way seaworthy and in a condition to carry passengers with safety and comfort, and a full cargo of any description, to any part of the world. The ancient and subsequent occurrences have fully demonstrated the great value and safety of a double bottom.

We further certify, having examined into the circumstances connected with the accident to the steamer, off Montauk Point, we are of opinion that no blame can be attatched to Captain Paton, who, from the cross bearings of the different lights, knew the exact position of the vessel when she struck on the submerged rock, not laid down in any chart, though in the fair-way channel.

Robert Mackie, Agent for Lloyd's.
Wm. H. Burleigh, President of the Board of Port Wardens.
E. B. Seaman, Port Warden.
Wm. P. Thompson, Vice President Neptune Insurance Company.
Erastus W. Smith, Engineer.
Benjamin Hutchinson, Port Warden.
John M. Weeks, United Stats Inspector of Hulls.
Charles H. Hazewell, Surveyor to the Board of Underwriters.

The company then sat down to dinner, after which toasts were drank and many telling little speeches were given.

The President's health was drunk, and Queen Victoria's, and Captain Paton's the Messrs. Benwicks', Mr. Aspinwall's, and plenty more. Between six and seven o'clock the company broke up, and underwriters, reporters, and promiscuous guests returned to the steamer "Naushon" sailed around the great ship, and those aboard exchanged exhilerating good-byes with the officers and men whose hospitality they had been enjoying. The band played "Hail Columbia" and "Yankee Doodle," the British tars rang out three cheers for the Union, and then as much haste was made home as possible.

A Heart-rending Scene.

On Thursday last the Comet put into the harbor of Garlieston, and took the ground on a sandbank at a short distance from the quay. Next day, as the tide was flowing, five men were engaged in docking the vessel, when a person on the quay observed that she was about keeling over. He forthwith gave an alarm, and four out of the five succeeded in keeping clear; the fifth, a man named Wm. Loch, was caught by the hull of the vessel as it went over, the bulwarks resting on his loins, leaving his head, arms, and the upper part of his body free. The tide was coming in rapidly, and it was known that the prostrate body would be submerged in the course of an hour if the weight of the vessel could not be shifted. In the course of a few minutes all the seamen, carpenters, and able-bodied men in Garlieston were upon the spot, and every effort was made to lift the vessel a few inches, but in vain; and by the time the water had reached the prostrate prisoner it was evident that his fate was sealed. The scene which ensued was truly paltable and most heartrending. It was witnessed by a large number of spectators, among whom was hardly a dry eye. The Rev. Thomas Young walked into the water beside the drowning man, engaged in prayer, and drew his attention to thoughts benefiting the sudden and inevitable scene awaiting him. His last words to his companions were: "Oh! take off my vest and cover my head, so that I may not see the water." An effort was made to do this, but the garment could not be removed, and his face was covered with a napkin, just as the tide was rising around him. A few minutes after this the cold green waves covered the body, and the sorrowing people dispersed.—Scottish paper.

Municipal Elections.

Important to Returning Officers.

By Section 97, sub-Section 7, of Chapter 54 of the Consolidated Statutes for Upper Canada, it is provided that if the second, or next day after the first Monday in January, shall be a legal Holiday, the Municipal Election shall be adjourned to the next day, not being a legal Holiday, Tuesday, January 6th, is the Epiphany, and by Chap. 5, Sec. 3, sub-Sec. 12 of the Consolidated Statutes for Canada, that day is made a Holiday. In order, therefore, to ensure an election that cannot be objected to, it will be necessary for every Returning Officer to adjourn the poll from Monday, January 5th, 1863, to Wednesday, January 7th, at 10 o'clock, A. M.—Merrickville Chronicle.

Desultory Reading.

It must be obvious at once that mere desultory reading cannot be the best thing. Whether it be liable to all the objections that have been urged against it, we need not inquire. Probably it is not. There have been those who have found in desultory reading a mental stimulus which has not only proved a high culture for themselves, but has carried them to heights of intellectual fame. Sir Walter Scott is a notable example. He indulged, when a youth, in the most indiscriminate and desultory course of reading. Whatever came to hand in the shape of tale, romance, history, poetry, he devoured with a large and unregulated appetite. But nothing can be made of such rare instances for general guidance. An intellect of such a capacity as Scott's was, in a measure, independent of common discipline. The strength of craving itself may be truly said in his case to have more than "compensated the absence of an outward rule. It fastened instinctively on that which was suited to its tastes. It converted everything it touched into the nourishment it required. Nothing was wasted—all was digested and assimilated, and passed into the life-blood of his intellect as Scott's, might prove the hurt, and even the poison of a common mind. Assuredly it can no more be the best thing to read in a desultory manner. No more than our industrial life could prosper if we merely did what came to hand, can our intellectual life prosper if we merely read what comes to hand. The very idea of intellectual discipline implies the application of some rule to our studies.—Principal Tulloch.

Prayer of a Fugitive Slave.

Henry C. Wright, in a letter to the Liberator, dated Wyalusing, Pa., Nov. 13, says:—

"The following is the prayer of a slave, escaped from Virginia some six months ago, leaving a wife and two children in the clutches of a rebel. He knew all about the proclamation. He fully comprehended the bearing of the rebellion on the destiny of his wife and children, and that if it was crushed before New Year's, they would not be free. He had been some time employed about a railroad station, and had many phrases familiar to managers of railroads. He was praying for his wife and children. In the fullness of his heart, he cried out with great energy in his own dialect, which I wish I could give—it would give more meaning to it, but I cannot, and must put it in simple English. He said—"Oh God Almighty! keep the engine of rebellion going till New Year's; Good Lord! pray don't let off steam; Lord, Don't reverse the engine, don't back up, Lord! Don't put on the brakes! But, pray! good Lord! put on more steam; make it go a mile a minute. Yes, Lord! pray make it go sixty miles an hour! ("Amen!" "Do, good Lord!" responded the brethern and sisters.) Lord, don't let the express train of the rebellion smash up till first of January! Don't let the rebels back down; put harden their hearts hard as Pharaoh's, and keep all hands going till the train reaches the Depot of Emancipation!"

"That was a natural prayer—straight from a loving, longing heart—inspired by a love which is of God—by conjugal and paternal love. Is there a man in all the North, who, under like circumstances, would not have uttered the same sentiment? Not one. Even Horatio Seymour, Fernando Wood and George Lunt, fierce as they are against liberty and for slavery, would pray that good engine of rebellion would be kept going till New Year's—if their wives and daughters were the chattles of some rebel."

It is not disheartening to think that so many Englishmen, not only fail to join in the prayer of this poor negro, but absolutely desire that Britain should step in with her strong arm and frustrate his hopes? It seems as if the new generation which has grown up since the days of West India emancipation has forgotten the ideas of its immediate predecessors.—Toronto Globe.

Extraordinary Story.

Amputation of a Lady's Leg.

The London Lancet vouches for the truth of the following statement:—"Late one evening a person came into our office and asked to see the editor. On being introduced to our sanctum, he placed a bundle upon the table, from which he proceeded to extract a very fair and symmetrical lower extremity, which had evidently belonged to a woman. 'There,' said he, 'is there anything the matter with that leg? What ought to be done with the man who cut it off?' On having the meaning of these interrogatories put before us, we found that it was the leg and foot, of the perfection of which she was, it appears, fully conscious. A few days before he had excited her anger, and they had quarrelled violently, upon which she left the house, declaring she would revenged on him, and that he should never see the object of his admiration again. The next thing he heard of her was a patient in——Hospital, and had had her leg amputated. She had declared to the surgeons that she suffered intolerable pain at the knee, and begged to have the limb removed—a petition the surgeons complied with, and thus became the instrument of her absurd and self-torturing revenge upon her husband!"

The Prince of Wales and his Future Bride.

The Earl of Caithness, who is one of the lords in waiting, presided at a banquet given at Wick, in celebration of the coming of age of the Prince of Wales. In proposing the toast of the day, Lord Caithness said:—"When I saw that the Queen in Council had sanctioned the Prince's marriage with the Princess Alexandria of Denmark, I wrote to him a congratulator letter. He immediately wrote me an answer by return of post; and though it is not right to make public the contents of a private letter, I may, without any breach of confidence, I think, repeat to you a single sentence from that letter. His Royal Highness says—'I beg to return my most sincere thanks to Lady Caithness and yourself for your good wishes, and I assure you that I feel now what it is to be really happy.' His Royal Highness says further—'If I can make the future life and home of the Princess a happy one, I shall be content. I feel doubly happy in the thought that my approaching marriage is one which has the approval of nation, and I only trust that I may not disappoint the expectations that have been formed of me.'"

Discovery of a Forest of Nutmegs.—Intelligence has been received by the Dutch Government that Dr. Burnstein, while undertaking a scientific expedition for the Colonial Government of the Netherlands to the Molucca Islands and New Guinea, had made a discovery in the Island of Batjan which may lead to important results in the spice trade. In his ascent of the Sabella range, he discovered, at an elevation of from 2,600 to 2,800 feet above the level of the sea, a very extensive forest of nutmeg trees, laden with fruit of an unusual size and excellent quality. Dr. Burnstein's official communication reports that this nutmeg-tree forest extends over a very large tract of country.

Communications.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

SIR,—The simultaneous appearance, in your last issue, of Mr. 'Scribo's" letter and my own gives rise to a feeling of suspicion: it savors somewhat of—well, I abstain from saying what: "let it slide" as the Yankees say.

Mr. "Scribo" must entertain a singular partiality for his own effusions when he preserves his "copy" for occasional reference. Pity, however, he allowed at least three weeks to elapse after my charge of mutilation and incorrectness before he re-read his treasured "copy"! Pity that he neglected to examine that precious M. S. before he ventured to assert in print that "truth" is "a rare article" with me! He now finds "that a comma has been omitted," and adds, in an off-hand manner, 'the change thus effected will not in the least weaken the force of my remarks on his composition." Mr. "Scribo" has a soul above stops: lawyers use no stops: what's the use of stops and 'such"!—to employ Mr. "Scribo's" very classical termination to one of his own sentences.

Mr. "Scribo" does me the favor to insert my comma, and, as it were by a side wind, slips in my hyphen also, without, however mentioning it: stops and hyphens and "such" cannot we ken the terrific "force" of such remarks as only Mr. "Scribo" can effume. This hyphen, though, in combination with another hyphen, still omitted, in the same passage, only makes all the difference in the meaning of the entire sentence. Truly an honest critic is Mr. "Scribo!"

Mr. "Scribo," however, has yet another difficulty to surmount. I accused him of printing a mutilated passage, and by that mutilation wilfully altering my meaning. Let him once more—it will afford him an additional gratification—re-read his boarded "copy," and compare it with my printed letter, (I really don't think my copy worth preserving) and then let him explain his twaddle about "dry land" being "a very uncommon kind of bay," &c.

Perhaps the poor devil (the printer's devil I mean) is again to blame! I hope that we cried imp has broad shoulders, or, if you have many correspondents of Mr. "Scribo's" heavy calibre, his back will be sorely tried.

Mr. "Scribo" says "it is but fair that" I should have the benefit of every comma, as well as of every letter." Condescending, candid Mr. "I write!" I thank him—for nothing.

That "copy" of Mr. "Scribo's" may prove a fortune to his (very) remote heirs. The M. S. S. of the illustrious dead have been sold for fabulous sums: what may not the "copy" of Mr. "I write" realize at an auction sale, say a thousand years hence! His posterity, in honor of their gifted progenitor, may even alter their already distinguished crest, and substitute for it a pen, or perhaps cross pens, with "I write" for their motto.

Let fancy the Auctioneer exclaiming, "This, my classically appreciative hearers, is the celebrated 'copy" of the letter published by that world-renowned critic of antiquity, "I write," a letter with which he annihilated a miserable wretch who ventured to print an account of the slaughter of a bear, without his permission (not the bear's permission, Mr. devil—indulge me with a comma.) The "empty jug" in question used the letter B. A. or Ba as a subriquet, suggestive of a sheep slaughtered by Mr. "I write" Up go the bids immediately! and the "copy" is probably deposited in the British Museum of the day.

I am, Sir, your humble servant,
B. A.

Peterboro, December 18, 1862.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

SIR,—Esteeming it the duty of all to further the military instruction and organization of the Province, I take this means of notifying my desire to raise more volunteers in connection with this Town. I am anxious to enrol those most likely to remain permanently amongst us. As soon as I have obtained fifty names, and have submitted them for the approval of the Governor, great coats, arms and accoutrements will be furnished.

I think Peterborough ought to have at least four companies of 50 men each, and I hope the Municipal authorities will further the movement by erecting a shed wherein we may drill at all times.

Your obd't serv't,
F. W. HAULTAIN.

British Operatives' Relief Fund.

Amount previously advertised, $2249 92

A meeting of the central Committee, convened by previous notice, was held on Wednesday the 7th instant, at 11 o'clock A. M., at Col. Haultains office, Sheriff Hall in the chair, when it was unanimously resolved that $2000 be transmitted to the Right Hon. the Lord Mayor of London, as a first instalment from the County of Peterboro in behalf of the British Operatives. That sum has this day been forwarded to his Lordship in compliance with the Resolution.

The Treasurer's and Secretary's books still remain open, nor will they be closed until the end of the Winter; so that subscriptions may yet be paid to the former, and names be forwarded to the latter who will, from time to time, publish them in the local papers.

Mr. Robert Nicholls has kindly offered to receive and store any articles of produce that may be consigned to him in aid of the object in view.

It is earnestly hoped that if any one has not been personally canvassed for a contribution to the Fund he will regard the neglect as an oversight, be good enough to pardon the omission, and by handing his subscription to the Treasurer prevent any loss accruing to the poor Operatives.

It is confidently expected that the sum of at least £500 sterling will be placed at the disposal of the Lord Mayor for the use of the Operatives, by the County of Peterboro: to secure which amount it will be necessary to raise $2466.67. The unavoidable expenses attendant upon the collection will not exceed, say $15, making a required total of $2481.67, of which the Secretary's list gives $2249.92, not all of which has, however, been yet paid in. The Treasurer has $2037.61 in hand.

Vincent Clementi,
Secretary.

A Christmas Carol.

Hark! the merry pealing bells,
From the tall spire tell
Of Christmas Day returning,
And hearts are beating high,
While friends are gath'ring nigh
To the hearth-fire brightly burning.

Oh! I love the happy day,
When the year has rolled away,
That brings back that blessed season
Of greetings and delights,
And the cheering smile invites
To feasts of joy and reason.

Sad morn'ries let's forget
For a time, and cease to fret,
Or think of care and sorrow,
Full soon shall come again
On us, in gloomy train,
No need have we to borrow.

Let us while we enjoy
Life's pleasures, but employ
The gifts, and store of blessings,
Sent to us from Heaven above,
Through the fullness of His love,
In aiding sad distressings.

Then joyous let us be,
Assured that fully we
Are filling Life's high station.
If so, we need not fear
To enter a new year
With bright anticipation.

On behalf of the Teachers.

Galway, Dec. 20th, 1862.

Count Them.—Count what? Why, count the mercies which have been quietly falling in your path through every period of your history. Down they come every morning and evening, angel messengers from the Father of lights, to tell you of your best friend in heaven. Have you lived these years, wasting mercies, treading them beneath your feet, and consuming them every day, and never yet realized from whence they came? You complain under your afflictions; but who has heard you rejoice over your blessings? Do you ask what are these mercies? Ask the sun-beam, the rain-drop, the star, or the queen of night. What is life but mercy?

THE HON. MR. JUSTICE HALIBURTON, CHAIRMAN, offer for sale

250,000 Acres

OF LAND IN THE

COUNTIES OF PETERBORO & VICTORIA

consisting of parts of the

Townships of DYSART, DUDLEY, LONGFORD, GUILFORD, HARCOURT, HARBURN, BRUTON, HAVELOCK, &c., &c.

The following are some, among many other inducements held out to parties who may choose to take up lands in the above Townships:

Ten per cent of the purchase money paid to Government by the Company for the lands will be expended in constructing really good roads: these roads will intersect the Government Roads; namely, the Bobcaygeon, Victoria Burleigh and Peterson Roads, at convenient points, and will converge to various Town plots which the Company have in view to lay out in very carefully selected sites. The Town Plots will, it is anticipated,—the whole of them being connected by good roads (for the construction of which the country affords excellent facilities)—become each the centre of a new and flourishing settlement; private enterprise in establishing Stores, Mills, &c., will here soon find its seward, and the several towns and townships being as it were knit together by good roads, will derive from that fact great advantages and mutual support.

In addition, the watchful supervision of the Company over every part of their lands will greatly tend to advance the interests of this district, which, being in the middle of Upper Canada, possessing a fertile soil, and a climate unsurpassed in its healthful effects upon the human frame, offers superior attractions, and all the elements of rapid progress and permanent prosperity

EMPLOYMENT.

THE Undersigned has, for several years past, been engaged in a business, which has yielded him at the rate of three thousand dollars per annum, and is now willing to teach it to others. The business is of a highly useful and general character, adapted both to cities and villages, and one that any person of ordinary capacity, young or old, male or female, can acquire with a few hours' practice, and by which they can secure a very handsome income. Several young ladies who have received instructions from me, both in New York State and Pennsylvania, are earning upwards of $15 per week by it, and there is no reason why any one else cannot do the same. Invalids, even, can do well by it, as it is no peddling affair, but a business that is perfectly respectable. Gentleman and ladies of leisure who would like to learn the business for their own amusement or pleasure, will find the practice of it a pleasant pastime, and one that they will take great interest in. On receipt of $1, I will send printed instructions by which any person can readily acquire the art, and these instructions will also contain every particular relative to the carrying it on so that it will be highly profitable. To purchaser of the "printed instructions" will also be authorized to teach it to others; and I have sometimes received as high as $200, for teaching it personally to a single individual. I would state further that $4.50 or $3 will buy everything that is necessary to commence the business with, and the articles can be got almost anywhere, in city or country, or if preferred, I can furnish them. Also, AN APPENDIX, containg a popular treatise on ANATOMY, PHYSIOLOGY, and the LAWS OF HEALTH; the whole making a large octavo volume of

OVER ONE THOUSAND PAGES,

with numerous

VALUABLE ILLUSTRATIONS!

THIS is probably the best, as well as the most thorough and extensive book ever published, as a Domestic or Family Medical Work. Its author is now an old man, and is probably more generally known as a popular medical author than any man living, owing to the great popularity and extensive use of his old work, which was one of great value, but in the present advanced state of medical science is altogether behind the times. Dr G. is a graduate of several of the best Medical Colleges in the world, viz.: of Philadelphia, and of London and Paris. He has been a successful practicing physician for nearly forty years; and it can be hardly supposed that any man can be better qualified to write such a work than he is. He has spent most of the time for several years in preparing this work—intending it, as he often remarked, as his last and greatest Legacy to Posterity.

The work contains a description of all the diseases known or common to this country—their causes, symptoms, and character—with plain and full directions for successfully treating them, telling what remedies to use; how to use them, and when; the whole stated in plain and simple language; or whenever any technical or Medical terms are used, they are fully explained; so that the commonest mind can understand them. The remedies recommended are generally of the simplest kind, such as are harmless, yet efficient, and usually such as are easily to be obtained.

Besides the diseases common to both sexes, the work contains a department on the diseases of Females, and their treatment. Also a department on the diseases of Children, which alone is worth the price of the book to mothers and all who have the care of children.

An important item in the work is its Pharmacy, or valuable Family Receipts, there being more than forty pages of Medical Receipts and Compounds, many of which will be found very important and useful in a family.

☞ Remember that this Book can only be had of the Agent, when he calls, and is not to be had either of us, direct, or through Booksellers.

Moore, Wilstach, Keys & Co.,

☞ This book will be delivered to subscribers during the Christmas holidays and the succeeding week. They will therefore please avoid causing any delay, by being prepared to take it immediately on its presentation. The price of the book is five dollars and fifty cents

SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN!

The Best Mechanical Paper in the World.

EIGHTEENTH YEAR.

VOLUME VIII—NEW SERIES.

A NEW VOLUME of this popular Journal commences on the first of January. It is published weekly, and every number contains sixteen pages of useful information, and from five to ten original engravings of new inventions and discoveries, all of which are prepared expressly for its columns.

TO THE MECHANIC & MANUFACTURER.

No person engaged in any of the manufacturing pursuits should think of "doing without" the Scientific American. It costs but six cents per week; every number contains from six to ten engravings of new machines and inventions, which cannot be found in any other publication.

TO THE INVENTOR.

The Scientific American is indispensable to every inventor, as it not only contains illustrated descriptions of nearly all the best inventions as they come out, but each number contains an Official List of the Claims of all the Patents issued from the United States Patent Office during the week previous; thus giving a correct history of the progress of inventions in this country. We are also receiving, every week, the best scientific journals of Great Britain, France and Germany; thus placing in our possession all that is transpiring in mechanical science and art in these old countries. We continue to transfer to our columns copious extracts from these journals whatever we may deem of interest to our readers.

A pamphlet of instruction as to the best mode of obtaining Letters Patent on new inventions is furnished free on application.

Messrs. Munn & Co. have acted as Patent Solicitors for more than seventeen years, in connection with the publication of the Scientific American, and they refer to 20,000 patentees for whom they have done business.

No charge is made for examining sketches and models of new inventions and for advising Inventors as to their patentability.

CHEMISTS, ARCHITECTS, MILLWRIGHTS & FARMERS.

The Scientific American will be found a most useful journal to them. All the new discoveries in the science of chemistry are given in its columns, and the interest of the architect and carpenter are not overlooked; all the new inventions and discoveries appertaining to these pursuits being published from week to week. Useful and practical information pertaining to the interests of millwrights and mill-owners will be found in the Scientific American, which information they can not possibly obtain from any other source. Subjects in which farmers are interested will be found discussed in the Scientific American; most of the improvements in agricultural implements being illustrated in its columns.

TERMS.—To mail subscribers: Three Dollars a year, or One Dollar for four months.—The volumes commence on the first of January and July. Specimen copies will be sent gratis to any part of the country.

Western and Canadian money or Post-office stamps taken at par for subscriptions. Canadian subscribers will please to remit twenty-five cents extra on each year's subscription to prepay postage.

Homœopathic Broth.

Take a Robin's leg,
Mind, the drumstick merely;
Put it in a tub,
Filled with water nearly.

Set it out of doors,
In a place that's shady;
Let it stand a week.
(There for a lady.)

Dip a spoonful in
To a five-pail kettle;
It should be of tin,
Or perhaps bell-metal.

Fill the kettle up,
Put it on a-boiling;
Skim the liquor well,
To prevent its oiling.

For thickening and salt,
Take of rice one kernel;
Use, to light the fire,
The Cold Water Journal.

Let the liquor boil
Half an hour—no longer—
(If 'tis for a man,
You may make it stronger.)

Should you now desire
That the soup be flavoury,
Stir it once around
With a stalk of savory.

When the broth is done,
Set it up to "jell" it;
Then, three times a day,
Let the patient smell it!

If he chances to die,
Say 'twas Nature did it,
But if he should get well,
Give the broth the credit.

Miscellaneous.

Tom the Donkey Driver.

Our beloved Queen's coronation was a very important event to a certain ragged little boy then twelve years old. He was the child of indigent parents—belonging to the very sub-stratum of the social pyramid, as my tutor would say—and was glad to be employed as a donkey-driver in Hyde Park, when all the world was holiday-making and rejoicing. Such a run was there for donkey-riding among the little short-frocked and small-trousered people of that day, that young Tom Williams earned between three and four pounds in the course of that festive week. With this sum he purchased a donkey, and started in life on his own account. Tom has had his ups and downs—his "losses," like other people of consideration; but at present, I am happy to say, he is well to do—has savings for a rainy day and a wife and two children whom, in a neat little house, he supports with comfort. In fact, though only a "donkey-driver" in a suburban neighborhood, his occupation is on rather a superior scale.

One of the bright and noticeable points in Tom Williams' character is the humanity he shows to his animals. There is no mistake on this subject; you can judge for yourself by the evident love they bear him. In fact, you must be acquainted with his donkeys to know the docility and capabilities of these much-abused creatures. His donkeys, instead of being exposed to the severities by which hundreds of these poor brutes perish every winter, are stabled and groomed by Williams' own hands. No matter how tired he may be—and he often walks twenty miles a day—he attends to their needs before resting himself. Every morning he washes out the well-paved stable, and has it rubbed dry; every night the poor beasts are indulged with a clean straw bed "up to their knees."

Lately an elderly lady ordered a donkey-chair to take her home at the midnight hour: It was a bleak November night; but Tom being prudent and thrifty, and always ready to earn an honest penny, roused himself from heavy slumber about half-past eleven o'clock, and prepared to get his carriage in order to fetch the lady. Lantern in hand he proceeded to the stable, where reclined in peaceful slumber a donkey and a mule. The straw that had been "up to their knees" now rose sheltering above their heads, and Tom Williams paused from indecision which beast to arouse. Each had done his fair day's work, and received his fair days wage of food and shelter; and both were seasoning so comfy and comfortable, that they were not aroused by their master's presence. Donkey had, perhaps, done a little the more work that day; but mule was arranged on his couch in a peculiar and favorite attitude, of the comic order, that always made Tom laugh to contemplate. Could it be that the cunning creatures knew the softness of his heart, and feigned deep sleep in this pathetic manner? If it was a pretence it answered perfectly, for Williams had not the heart to disturb them; and, treading gently, he left the two creatures to darkness and repose.

But did he disappoint the dissipated patroness? By no means.

Once Tom Williams had been distressed by a case of conscience, which I must describe. He loves, as I have said, to earn an honest penny; but he loves still more his sacred Sabbath, and its devotional services—joining in the psalm-singing with such loud earnestness that he once received a hint from the clerical authorities to be more gently musical. The case of conscience was this:—An infirm lady wished to be taken to church every Sunday in the donkey chair. The temptation to earn the honest penny was considerable, but Tom resisted it on the plea that it was a sin to make his animals toil on that day. The lady argued—surely it was a work of necessity? Tom pondered the question, and hit upon an expedient that satisfied both parties. He bought a bundle for his donkey-chair, and made the shafts to be removable; so, every Sunday, he drags the old lady to church himself, and when she has alighted he enters the sacred edifice, and performs his morning devotions, leaving the chair at the church porch. Now, on the cold winter evening when he had not the heart to disturb a sleeping mule or donkey—in his own words, "couldn't bear to do it"—he put the handle to the chair, and making of himself a draught animal, drew the lady to her home, a distance of a mile and a half, up and down hill.

Now Tom Williams never was and never will be a gentleman, and yet I maintain that there is a beautiful vein of "gentleness" in his heart, which purifies and ennobles his whole nature. There is not an inch of meanness or a particle of polish about the man, but the native wood—is not that fine!—Just remember the poor donkey-boy and donkey-man, who has never hugged or owned what he could not pay; whose devotions were, till checked, too boisterous; to whom, I should add, music is the dream of heaven, and who could not "shear" to awaken for fresh labour a tired donkey.—And then contrast the fine dandy, with "Honourable before his name, who rode his noble horse to a cruel death. I see—I cannot help seeing—something hideous beneath the showy veneer and French polish; something black and rotten that has an evil odour about it, and that is dangerous to touch or see.

I often think of such things and get puzzled about the use of words; for the more my tutor explains to me the derivation and right meaning of them, the more I perceive how words have got twisted out of their true sense. I think if people tried to twist them right again there would be some good done.—English paper.

A Love Letter in 1661.

To the most choice Gentlewomen and ornament of her sex, Mrs. Elizabeth Gode, daughter of Sebastian Gode, Esquire, at Malden:

MRS. ELIZABETH: I have long been an earnest suitor to your honour and deserts, that I might be admitted an humble suitor to your sweet self, now after many sad evenings and wrestlings I have almost prevailed. My next suit is, that your dearest selfe would comply with your dearest parents' desires and mine; they are also ready to part with a great part of their estate for your sake, and I most willing to place all my joys and delights in you alone. Now it is, or will sodainly be, in your sole power to dash and frustrate, or crowne all my endeavours; hereby you will make a most happy man, and your selfe (I hope) a no less happy spouse.

"Well, sweet Mrs. Elizabeth, be not afraid to venture on me; as you have a tender father, and a most indulgent mother, so lett me, that I think Providence kept for you, furnish you with a very—very loving husband. Could you read my inmost thoughts, you would soon answer love with love. I have promised against (when that happy day comes) on bold ground, that I will love and honour you. "Knowe, this is my virgin request, the first request in earnest that ever came from my lippes or pen; my eyes have seene many young gallants and virgins, but Mrs. Elizabeth is the delight of my eyes. Others of your sexe have been acceptable, and some precious in my eyes, but you, and you only, have been, and still are the pearle in my eyes.

"Amongst all the works of God I delight most in beholding (the sun excepted) a amiable countenance; and such is yours, or none in these parts of England. Your face is a mappe of beauties, your gentle breast a cabinet of vertues, and your whole selfe a cluster of all the choicest delicacies; but in plaine English, not your pleasinge aspecte, nor well featured person, nor admired excellencies, nor weighty portion, fastened my affections on you, but your love (of this I have beene long persuaded) to a man (myself I mean) so undeserving of it.

"As for myselfe, I am thought worthy of a good wife, though unworthy of you. These pretty toyes, called husbands, are such rare commodities in this age, that can woe and winne wives by the dozens.—I know not any gentlewoman in these parts, but would kiss a letter from my hands, reade it with joye, and then laye it up next her heart as a treasure; but I will not trye their courtecies, except I find you discourteous.

"My last request is this,—take a turne in private, then read this letter againe, and imagine the penman at your elbow. Next laye your hand upon your heart, and resolve to say Amen to my desires. If so, I shall accept your portion with the left hand, but your lovely person with the right. Portions I can have enough to my minde in any place of the wide world but at Malden. I hope, therefore, no place shall furnish you with a husband but Kingstone, where lives in hope.

"Your most hearty friend and servant,
THOMAS BOUMAN.

"From my Chamber, Dec. 22, 1661."

A man's good fortune often turns his head; his bad fortune as often averts the heads of his friends.

Real glory springs from the silent conquest of ourselves; and without that the conqueror is naught but the first slave.

A man comes to church and falls fast asleep, as though he had been brought in for a corpse, and the preacher were preaching at his funeral.

ADVERTISING for a wife is as absurd as getting measured for an umbrella. 'Take up' to the dear creatures if you'd marry them. One-half the world was born to marry the other half.

'One might have heard a pin fall,' is a proverbial expression of silence; but it has been eclipsed by the French phrase—'You might have heard the unfolding of a lady's pocket handkerchief.

Whenever you see a lady and a gentleman alone in a cab, each looking out of a different window, be convinced that they are perfectly harmless, for they have been married some months at least.

AN EXACT MAN.—"Is that the second bell?" inquired a gentleman of a table porter, at a country boarding-house, the other day. "No, sar!" exclaimed the darky; "dat am the secon' ringing of the fust bell; we have but one bell in dis house!"

Interesting Conversation between a Yankee and a Widow.

A few days ago, in a car on the Grand Trunk Railroad, between Quebec and Montreal, on the Express Train going East, sat an interesting and rather pretty widow, dressed in deep mourning. Her looks betrayed, even to the casual glance, her great grief.

A tall, lank Yankee, passing through the car, observed the widow, and constrained, sat down on the seat next to her, which happened to be turned facing the one on which the lady sat. With astounding assurance he at once commenced a conversation—speaking in a strong nasal twang, and stopping frequently in his talk to squirt tobacco juice.—So strongly were his remarks illustrative of the American characteristics of inquisitiveness and self-independence, that we took a jotting of them on the spot. Here they are:

Yankee.—(say very naturally) "Affliction marm?"

Lady—melancholy nod of assent.

Y—"Father dead,—mother,—perhaps both?"

L—Sorrowful shake of the head.

Y—"Husband, mayb?"

L—(Softly,) "Yes."

Y—"Trading man?"

L—"No—sailor.

Y—"Sailer, eh!—Save his chest?"

L—"Yes."

Y—"Pious man?"

L—"O, yes."

Y—"Well, now, ain't yer glad? Pious man, and saved his chest."

No notice taken by lady, who seems tired of the Yankee's intrusion.

Y—(Not to be put off) "Calculate on gettin' married again, marm?"

L—(Thoroughly roused, and forgetting her grief in her anger,) "Sir, you are becoming impertinent."

Y—"Well, mean, yer needn't be gettin' yer dander up and pettin' on airs—Stranger, [suddenly facing round and speaking to a gentlemen passenger] what did that there nabteller cost yer?"

The stranger answered not, and the Yankee, baffled on all hands, subsided.

To Cure Hams.

John C. Bishop, Food de Lac, Wis., writes to the American Agriculturist: "I have never failed of having most excellent hams by using the following recipe—the shoulders are equally good, only fatter: Rub the hams thoroughly around the bone with salt, using the best quality. To 6 pails water add one quart molasses, six quarts salt, and one tablespoonful of saltpetre: they should remain in this pickle covered five weeks. Cobs are preferable to any other article to smoke with; rock and whitewash, and you will have first quality hams the year round. In packing my pork last Fall, it occurred to me to ascertain how much is lost in weight by smoking hams. I cut out a ham which weighed 24½ lbs. After taking from the pickle in which it had remained some 5 weeks, it weighed 23½ lbs. To-day one month after smoking it weighs 22 lbs. having lost over 3 pounds. A barrell of side pork weighing 200 lbs., that I packed freed from bone and most of the lean meat, on being re-weighed, had gained 8 pounds.

THE LARGEST HOTEL IN THE WORLD.—The Lindell Hotel at St. Louis is finished, and is the largest hotel in the world. It is equivalent to eight stories high; contains five hundred and fifteen rooms, twenty-one parlors, twenty-seven acres of plastering, seven acres of flooring, thirty-two miles of bell wire, nine and one-half miles of base boards, twelve miles of gas, steam and water pipe, one and one-eighth miles, or 1,980 yards, of hall, 310 windows, and 14,000 feet of painted imitation of cornice. The quantity of bricks used in the building is 8,000,000. In the basement there is a railway running the entire length for the transportation of heavy articles, and above are two steam elevators for lifting fuel and baggage from the ground to the floors above.

ADVANTAGES OF WOMEN.—A woman says what she chooses without being mocked down for it. She can take a mouse off her dinner, while her husband goes to work. She can go into the streets without being asked to "stand treat" at every saloon. She can paint her face if it be too pale, and powder it if too red. She can stay at home in time of war, and get married again if her husband be killed. She can wear corsets if too thick—other forms if too thin. She can get divorced from her husband whenever she sees one she likes better. She can get her husband in debt all over until he warns the public not to trust her on his account. But all these advantages are balanced by the great fact that she cannot pay the question

SINGULAR CUSTOM.—At munich there prevails a singular custom: Every child found begging in the streets is arrested and carried to a charitable establishment. The moment he enters the hospital, and before he is cleaned and gets the new clothes intended for him, his portrait is painted in his ragged dress, and precisely as he was found begging. When his education is finished in the hospital, this portrait is given to him, and he promises by an oath to keep it all his life, in order that he may be reminded of the abjected condition from which he had been rescued, and of the obligations he owes to the institution which saved him from misery and gave him the means by which he was enabled to avoid it in future.

STORMS AT NAPLES.—A Naples letter of the 16th says—"For several days we have had the worst of weather. Storms and whirlwinds have rooted up trees, and blown down the heavy scaffolding of the new port arches. Many boats have been picked up on the sea shore this morning, and a large vessel (American) laden with merchandize, was literally broken in two and thrown on shore; four of the crew were killed. The night was fearful. The weather has continued [illegible]ated, and we hope the worst is over."

Why is a flirt like a Southern [illegible]ave. Because she's fond of Beauregard [illegible]ocket.

THURSDAY, JANUARY 1st, 1863.

THE NEW YEAR.

The number of our paper introduces us to 1863, to one of the mile stones on our journey through life. We are thus reminded that we have advanced one of the few years allotted us in this life towards eternity. It is well for us at such seasons to pause and mark the lessons which the knell of the departed and the peal of the incoming year are fitted to give. It is but a comparatively short season since 1862 was ushered in with hilarity and glee—we gave and received expressions of good will to neighbours and friends, we rejoiced at its birth, we watched carefully its career, and now we live to celebrate its obsequies.—1862 is now gone, for ever gone, as far removed from us as one of the years before the flood. Its joys, its griefs and sorrows are gone, but it has not passed without having made a mark in our individual history, as well as that of our country and the world. No year can pass without some great events transpiring, and the year just closed has made deep niches in the cyles of time—affecting the history of the individual as well as of Society at large. As we have before observed, every individual is so much nearer his long home; every year we live makes the number to come less. "When a few years are come," says Job, "I shall go the way whence I shall not return." A year forms a considerable period in the space usually allotted to man, and it should be well employed while enjoyed. The past year is gone, and will live but in history; it is too late to improve any opportunities it afforded; we have but to improve for the future from the history of the past. At its commencement in the midst of our exchanging of compliments we could not refrain from expressions of deep sorrow and regret when the mind would turn to the sad event made known a week before, we refer to the demise of Prince Albert, the Consort of our Queen. The event cast a gloom over every countenance, and certainly since 1818 never did the British people mourn so generally, so deeply, as when Albert the Good was numbered with the dead.

Individually he was a sterling man, a lover of his species, a friend to science and art, an unassuming, persevering individual, a model husband and father, in fact a good man in every sense of the term, and as such he deserved as he received the commendation and esteem of the nation. But the fact of his being the worthy husband of our beloved Queen intensified greatly the regret and grief at his removal.

On the first of May last was opened the Great Exhibition of all nations, wherein the products of all climes and people were to be seen, as well as the specimens of skill and industry of the world exhibited. The world was indebted for the establishment of this, as well as the previous one in 1851, to Prince Albert. Apart from the benefits which art and science derive from the collection of the skill of the world into one place, there is a greater benefit in the tendency of such vast gatherings of people to generate feelings of good will towards each other, to fuse into one the various efforts to benefit the human family, wherever situated, by the various inventions of each. The immense throngs which visited the Exhibition is a proof of its success. Canada was largely represented, by articles on exhibition, as well as by visitors.

During the eventful month of May in our Legislature we had the gratification to chronicle the fall of the Coalition Ministry—a Ministry, with slight changes of eight years standing—whatever credit it may deserve for wise and useful legislation during that period, it stands unrivalled for its extravagance and recklessness in squandering the resources of the country. In its place we have the McDonald-Cicotte Government, of which we may speak by-and-by. In the mean time we merely notice that being a party Government, and the party which has all along claimed credit for effecting measures at once beneficial and just to the country, they have now a fine opportunity to carry out the measures they have so long insisted upon, and we trust they will do so.

Another important event in the Royal Family of England deserves notice, and that is that in the past year the Prince of Wales arrived at his majority. The event caused great rejoicing all over the land.

We must not forget also the marriage of the Queen's second daughter—a union which we hope will prove as happy as it was auspicious.

The most momentous event of the year 1862 to us, in the continuance of the American Civil War. By this War we experience a stagnation of trade, a scarcity of money, high prices for articles of import, and low prices for articles of export. A general dullness prevails, and we feel anxious for the termination of the War. A much greater anxiety prevails in England, where thousands of willing hands are thrown idle by it, and as a consequence hunger and want are felt. The sufferings there are frightful, and the immense sums sent from all parts go but a small way to alleviate that suffering. Our sufferings are but inconvenience, theirs agony. Not only United France and the Continent of [illegible] 10 mile[illegible] more or less from the de[illegible]ase owing to this War, [illegible] Charities engaged are Peterborough, Dec[illegible] horrors of War are felt without mitigation, there the whole land is a Bochs, scarcely a house but has lost a member, thousands, yea hundreds of thousands of the hope of this country have been cut down, the hope and stay of the land. Parents, wives, sisters, children mourn for the loved ones shot down in battle, or killed by the miasmata of swamps or the exposure of camps. Millions upon millions have been piled upon the public debt. The face of the country where hostilities have occurred is defaced and made desolate, and worse than all the end of this unnatural struggle appears as far off as ever. It is as likely to continue another year as it was this time last year. True, many think that the Emancipation Proclamation of President Lincoln which comes in force to-day will tend to shorten it. Time will tell meanwhile the angry elements are embracing every opportunity to injure and destroy each other.

We sincerely pray that this war may soon come to an end. Surely there is blood and treasure enough poured out to satisfy the most insatiate. The fearful immolations of human life causes the heart to bleed, and we cry "O Lord how long is this cruel war to continue. Scatter the people that delight in war. O Lord send peace in our day."

We have extended our remarks too far, yet we must make a brief allusion to ourselves. Beginning under rather disadvantageous circumstances, we have assiduously toiled along, until we have established the Examiner upon, we trust, a sound basis. Our advertising patronage has exceeded our most sanguine expectations. Our subscription list shows a gratifying increase of paying subscribers, and we hope by a strict attendance to business and a stern adherence to the principles of Reform upon which the paper was established, to secure a continuance of the favors now enjoyed. We have cause of gratitude for the past, we have hope for the future. We therefore every reason to prompt us to wish our patrons and readers a Happy New Year.

THE SUIT AGAINST THE TOWN.

We are happy to have to announce that the suit of Woodruff, et al against the Corporation of the Town of Peterborough, for £26,000, has been decided in favor of the Town. The Judges were unanimous in their decision.

This suit proceeded upon the ground that the Town of Peterborough in paying the stock subscribed for the Millbrook Branch, had paid it to the contractor without the order of the Company, and the action was brought to compel the Town to pay the amount over again to the judgment creditor of the Company, the Zimmerman estate. Not long after the suit was entered, the Port Hope vultures, Smith and Fraser, discovered a prize in the shape of £4,000, which the Zimmerman jackalls had left, and out comes a writ, James Smith versus the Town of Peterborough, for this nice tid bit. We guess he'll be glad to sneak away now, and leave this expected booty behind. By the way, the suits that were not settled of these rapacious birds of prey for old stock have all been withdrawn. We were always of opinion that if the unhappy victims of their avarice had stood out they would have defeated them. Smith and Fraser go snacks in the large prizes. They have racked and crushed many a poor man around here. The curse of many will follow them and their children after them. Never was money exacted from any one with a more pungent sense of injustice than the amount they have wrongfully wrenched from the innocent subscribers to the Port Hope Railway Company in 1846.

Curling Club.

At a regular meeting of the Peterboro' Curling Club held on the 29th day of Dec. at Hosken Hotel, the following Officers were chosen:—

D. Sutherland, President; Jas. Menzies, Vice do.; W. J. Robinson, Secretary; J. Johnston, Jr., Treasurer; Jas. Menzies, Skip.

COMMITTEE.—Geo. McDonald, Chairman; D. McDonald, Jr. Secretary; Peter Connel, R. Innis, Wm. Drape, Walter Ainslie, J. Johnston, and E. H. Robinson.

Weather permitting, a match will be played on the Rink in Ashburnham, on Thursday, 1st proximo; play to commence at 9 o'clock, a. m.

A meeting of the Club will be held at the Rink after the termination of the game, to arrange about the lighting up after night for the benefit of those who cannot practice during the day.

THE HONORABLE GEORGE BROWN arrived at Toronto with his bride on Friday last, the 26th inst. He was met at the Railway Station by a number of his friends an address of welcome was read to him by Hon. Mr. Mowat, to which Mr. Brown briefly responded. A procession was formed which accompanied the Hon. gentleman to his residence. The night was very wet and disagreeable, yet there were some 4000 or 5000 persons present. A torch light procession was also formed, and after arriving at his residence the crowd insisted upon his addressing them again, which he did. The demonstration must have been highly gratifying to Mr. Brown. The Leader describes the affair as a "lamentable failure." What else could be expected from so determined a foe. If the Globe deserves censure for alleged detraction and abuse of individuals, what does the Leader deserve for doing the very same?

THE WEATHER since noon on the 24th has been more like April than December weather. We could almost fancy that we had changed places with some place South of the Potomac. In all our recollection we cannot recall a period at this season of the year so long mild and open. As old folks say, "we shall pay for this yet." It froze slightly on Monday night, and more severe on Tuesday night, but the days have been fine. As we go to press the weather is delightful for the season.

Soiree.

A "Friendship" Temple, No. 146 of the International Order of Good Templars, intend holding their Sixth Anniversary Soiree on Tuesday, the 20th day of January next at 7 o'clock, p. m. After tea, addresses will be delivered by a number of our resident ministers and others.

WE have purposely refrained from interfering with our correspondents B. A. and Scribo, in the matter of their dispute. But on reading the communication of B. A. which appeared in our last, we intended to, have noticed the insinuation he so unfairly and gratuitously throws out. It is evidently intended to represent, that we have favored Scribo at the expense of B. A.—that which there is nothing more incorrect. Neither Publisher nor Editor saw Scribo in the office at any time while the communications were being set up, nor did either of them hold any conversation with him thereon. Our aim as well as our motto is fair play to all, and we shall studiously endeavour to carry this out. If any one has reason to complain it is Scribo—his communication last week was neither inserted nor noticed. We understood until too late that both communications were crowded out, hence our silence last week on the matter complained of above.

THE GENESEE FARMER.—The January number of the Farmer is promptly on our table. It is a capital number. All our agricultural and horticultural friends should take the Farmer, if they do not already do so. It costs only sixty cents a year, and for this small sum you get three hundred and eighty-four pages of matter, well illustrated, and abounding with information of the greatest value to all engaged in rural pursuits. Send the sixty cents by mail to the publisher, Joseph Harris, Rochester, N.Y., and you will receive the paper by return mail. Or, if you wish to examine it, you can get a copy free by writing to Mr. Harris for one. Subscriptions are received by Thomas Menzies, Peterboro.

THE GREAT EASTERN.—We observe from the papers that this unfortunate vessel is advertised to sail on Saturday next. At one time it was thought she would not be able to cross the Atlantic again or account of the injury done her in striking the rocks when coming into the New York harbour. The New Yorkers, however, have managed to repair her, and the surveyors have pronounced her seaworthy.

THE American Agriculturist for January is on our table; it is a complete, thorough-going, reliable and practical journal, devoted to the different departments of soil culture—such as growing field crops, orchard and garden fruits, garden vegetables and flowers, trees, plants, and flowers for the lawn or yard. It has also an interesting and instructive department for children and youth, alone, worth the cost of the paper.

THEATRE—Kelley's excelsior Company are still performing in this Town; as they will only be here for a few night's longer, every one should avail themselves of the opportunity of seeing them. The play entitled Camille on Monday night last was exceedingly well performed, and was received with great applause. The pieces for to-night are good ones.

☞ On Wednesday evening last, the newly organized Rifle Company, under the command of Col. Haultain, M. P. P., met for drill in their new armory, Hopkins' Block. There were, we are happy to say, 43 members of the Company present; the arms and clothing, we are informed, will be here in a short time.

SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN.—The January number of this useful journal is before us; no mechanic should be without it; a sample number can always be seen at the Examiner office, and subscriptions received.

WE call the attention of our readers, especially those interested in the subject of Education, to the notice in our columns to-day, calling a convention of teachers and others on the 10th of January next, in the School House. From what we have read about similar meetings elsewhere, we are convinced that they are attended with beneficial results to the cause of Education generally, and to teachers in particular.

Town Council.

The Town Council met on Tuesday last. Present, the Mayor, Messrs. Cumming, Fry, Lawson, Reid, Toole, Bradfield and Dickson.

A communication was read from Denis Godley, Esq., the Governor's Secretary, enclosing a copy of a despatch from the Duke of Newcastle, stating that the Address from the Corporation to the Prince of Wales has been laid before His Royal Highness.

A Report from the Finance Committee recommending payment of several accounts was received and adopted.

The Treasurer was instructed to pay the costs of the defendants in the suit of the Corporation vs. the Estate of the late Judge Hall.

The Mayor was authorised to direct Robt. Dennistoun, Esq., to take measures for the closure of the suit of E. Burnham, Esq., against the Corporation.

The time for the return of the Collector's Roll was extended to the 20th of January next.

The Council adjourned to the 13th January, at 9 a. m.

POLICE COURT.

At the Police Court, before his Worship the Mayor, Harvey Swale and John Drake, were brought up for drunkenness; the former, an old offender, was fined $1 and costs, the latter was discharged as it was his first appearance in Court.

Patrick Lane was brought up by Constable McDonald, on a charge of assaulting Samuel Detcher and William Elliot, on Wednesday night last, was fined $5 and costs.

James Welsh, William Fitzgibbon and John Barrey, for interfering with Constable when taking Lane to Lock up; each fined $10 and costs.

Martin McDonald, Constable, was brought up on Saturday last, on a charge of willfully disturbing public worship on Christmas day, in the Catholic Church, while in the search of prisoner Fitzgibbon, the case was dismissed.

James Crowley was brought up on a charge of fighting on the 15th Sept. last but absconded; on Saturday last he was apprehended and fined $5 and costs, which he promptly forked over.

David Mercier, was taken on Saturday night last, by Constable Arnott, from the store of John Campbell, where he was detected in stealing a pair of pants. In going to the Look-up Mercier made a bolt to get off but was caught, when Arnott put his "pig string" or "persuador" on his wrist, when he went like a lamb to Limbo, there he was confined until Monday morning when he was sent to Jail to stand his trial at the next Quarter Sessions.

Constable McDonald brought up John McClure for being drunk and disorderly; the case was dismissed with McClure promising to leave the Town by 12 o'clock.

The amount of fines collected for the week $48.20.

Communications.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

SIR,—Mr. B. A. is still endeavoring to vindicate the grammatical code of his "Bear Story," even at the expense of common sense, and while he thus essays to refute my remarks thereon, he does more to establish the truth of them than anything your humble servant, Scribo, can do. But by the way, what does he wish to insinuate in the following sentence from his nonsensical rigmarole in your last issue? "Sir,—The simultaneous appearance if your last issue, of Mr. Scribo's letter and my own gives rise to a feeling of suspicion; it savors somewhat of—well, I abstain from saying what: "let it slide" as the Yankees say. Does he wish thereby to insinuate to your readers, that while two of his letters have been published, only one of mine has been? the other having been suppressed without even a remark. Who, therefore, has cause to find fault, B. A. or Scribo? He, I ween, begins to feel a rising suspicion, that unless he can make it appear that something foul is being done, and thus by unjust and ungentlemanly insinuations gain sympathy his literary pretensions are blasted. Concerning the mutilation of his letter of which he complains, who ever heard of a whole communication being quoted in order to show the errors in construction, or bad taste in the style? unless indeed as in this case the whole were wrong,—for which he ought to be thankful, as well as that I had not time to waste over so much nonsense. The omission of a pause may darken the sense, but the use of it will never cause misplaced adjuncts and phrases to assume their proper place. Besides if any one, even of less understanding than B. A., after reading his "Bear story" will say that my construction of it is not the most natural one that it will convey, without racking his brain to find the intended meaning of its author—then I will confess that I have been in fault.

In regard to B. A.'s charitable gambling it only requires to be mentioned to expose the littleness of the proposer; let him follow the Christian Directory and do his alms in secret: the hypocritical method of blowing a trumpet beforehand is strongly reprobated by Him who only can give the reward. Such gambling propensities in B. A. or any one may claim our pity or provoke our risibility; never gain our admiration.

But the last peroration of B. A. completes the climax of nescience—to use a softer word for ignorance—for we can still assert that truth with B. A. is yet rare, since in this, his last effusion, he asserts what is not true, or his words must be, as usual, very ambiguous. For instance, the following is not after the perfect standard of truth: "This hyphen, though, in combination with another hyphen, still omitted, in the same passage, only makes all the difference in the meaning of the entire sentence."

Now I hereby court a comparison of the originals as given in the Review and Examiner, to prove that either his rival organs are not trustworthy, or his truthfulness is at fault, and I assert, regardless of a negation from B. A., that but one hyphen has been omitted. This recriminating is not very pleasant, and I fear, judging from antecedents, will not be profitable, for "though thou shouldest bray a fool in a mortar among wheat with a pestle, yet will not his foolishness depart from him," says the Wise Man, which I may be permitted to quote here without quotation, it being very applicable in the present case. There can be no doubt that B. A. has entirely mistaken his profession, be it what it may. I fear he has been a failure in all his past undertakings: but as he has commenced the honorable calling of Auctioneer I trust in it he will be more fortunate. The sage who could indit those admirable words, and arrange them so harmoniously, deserves a place among the schools of any country. Just hear him: "stooped for the purpose of ascertaining the cause of the unusual, at this season, concourse of untimely winged insects." What rank does such a coddy deserve? Fie! fie. B. A., you have tried your talents in literature, and at the Auction mart, at Bear hunting and at essays, in all of which you show yourself weighed and wanting. I simply advise you to gamble more, you are not fitted for it, lay aside your borrowed feathers and take your place among the jackdaws, you were never designed to be a peacock.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for the space occupied ere B. A. and Bruin, I will trouble you no longer concerning them, for Solomon says "Answer not a fool according to his folly, lest thou also be like him."

I remain yours, &c.,
SCRIBO.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

DEAR SIR.—Some time ago I handed to the Editor of the Review a Communication which he agreed to insert, but when it appeared it was whittled down to suit his wishes, without any regard for mine. After that he inserted Mr. Conger's attack on me, but now refuses to insert my answer except I agreed to have it whittled also. But, not willing to submit to all this chiseling, I ask you to insert it in your paper, and much oblige,

Yours, &c.,
W. TOOLE.

Peterboro', Dec. 30th, 1862.

To the Editor of the Peterboro' Review.

SIR,—I observed in your issue of the 19th inst. a letter from W. S. Conger, in which I think he would have done himself more credit to have kept silent. As it is I consider it a very clumsy attempt to justify his conduct in presuming to dictate to the Street and Bridge Committee, which are representatives of the Council, in the discharge of their duty. And when they refused to be guided by his dictates he then withholds what he considers the only proper authority in Town, namely, his consent. Just as if his consent had anything whatever to do in the matter more than that of any other rate-payer. He says I would have the public believe that I was urged to the commission of the act, as if it was a crime, by the voice of the people. I repeat again I was—for I have a little stock in Mr. Conger's interest, and would therefore be careful not to diminish its value. And he appears to think that I must have had a great deal of difficulty in getting over the numerously signed petition from the neighbourhood, but I say just what I said in my last communication in reference thereto, had you not changed it, viz: that the Committee took it without the authority of the Council, and even at that imagined that Stewart street was the street on which a good part of Mr. Conger's house was and is yet standing, and it was more out of sympathy to that little body than justice to the public that they agreed to change the appropriation at all, but never for a moment as a Committee agreed to abandon their first intention of opening the Street to the east of Mr. Conger's House. As to the integrity of Mr. Conger's two friends who circulated the petition I don't pretend to question, enough to say that neither of them had the consent of Thomas Fitzgerald for his signature thereto, and that it was represented to Edward Wilson and A. Rutherford as an application for an appropriation in another part of the Town, and I dare say there are many others whose names appear thereon that would tell the same story. But I am really at a loss to see the object of Mr. Conger's taking up the cudgels in this matter at all, as he admits my charge of having had the use of street enough to make nearly an acre of land, which he would value at one thousand two hundred dollars, for over twenty years, while the poor labouring men in the same neighborhood were hurled off without having where to lay their head, nor would they be allowed to put a cord of wood on the street, (he at one time a leading member of the Council) of having refused the use of this street to the Sabbath School children to hold their picnic-nic last year. Of this thing that he and you calls a street outrage, a disgraceful act &c., &c., having increased the value of his property, and then says of the acts on the natives of which inclosed no commission. We need not speak, as an examination of the work affords ample proof of both, whereby I suppose, accusing me of political animosity as one of his friends has done before he says it, also shows how very little the rate-payers get for £5. It is pity he had not always advocated economy and the interests of the rate-payers in that style, for I think a reference to his connection with Municipal matters, would show that the rate-payers had to pay pretty high for his services. But I am willing to let the whole matter go to the public, and abide their decision.

Yours, &c.,
W. TOOLE.

New Year's Hymn.

COMPOSED FOR THE PETERBOROUGH BAPTIST SABBATH SCHOOL.

Farewell, departed year, farewell,
Thy sunshine, storm and shade,
Thy hour's elope and anxious fear,
Thy joys all doom'd to fade.

Thanks for thy Spring and Summer time,
Their love and light;
And for thy Autumn's golden store,
Which filleth with delight.

And louder rise we sing for peace,
Which circled each golden vale;
Sweet token of that changeless love,
Whose praise cannot fail.

But O, departed year! what fills
Thy record borne away?
How shall the months, we ken, hours, appear
In the great judgment day?

We tremble, God, long-suffering God,
To view right the past;
Bruise from now this opening year,
To live where our last.

Lead us while day morning glows,
With Spirit-tides freshest bloom,
To touch the Sceptre, with the hope
Of life beyond the tomb.

Home of dreary! long'd for rest!
Where all unclouded bliss,
God grant we may in EARLY life,
Long to be those like this.

I. M. C.

Beamsville, C. W., January, 1863.

HAPPINESS.—True happiness, in our opinion consists of the following named articles:—A pretty little wife sitting on your knee, her loving smile filling your mind with happy thoughts, a neat little room tidily furnished, and a bottle of "Canadian Pain Destroyer" in the cupboard ready for instant use, nothing better for sudden colds, sores, burns, and all kinds of aches and pains. Price 25 cents per Bottle. Sold by all Medicine Dealers.

PAPER.—Congress should at once abolish all duties on printing paper. The Government has no revenue from it now, and it is paying enormous prices for the paper it uses at the Government printing office. Let the duty be off at once. Our paper makers are ruined for stock. Let us have Europe paper, which can be landed on our wharves at 5 cents a pound less than is now charged here—and a much better article. Off with the duty!—Hartford Times.

THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 27.—The proclamation which purports to be a Jeff. Davis proclamation of Jeff. Davis—it is over a column long. Gen. Butler and all his officers are to be hung if taken. All soldiers taken prisoners are to be paroled. Negroes found with arms in their hands are to be immediately hung. Federal officers found with slaves are also to be hung.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Dec. 26.—Jno. Morgan, with a force of about 3,000 cavalry, entered Glasgow on Wednesday. Three companies of the 2nd Michigan cavalry opposed his entrance, but fell back on Munfordsville, having lost one captain and two privates. The Confederates lost two captains, five privates and seven prisoners. The Confederates were then reinforced and remained in possession of Glasgow. On Thursday, Col. Gray and Shanks attacked the Confederates at Bear Wallow, Hart country, near Cave city. The Confederates had previously damaged the railroad near Glasgow Junction. At last accounts the Federals had driven off the Confederates, killing one and taking sixteen prisoners but sustaining no loss themselves.

NEW YORK, Dec. 27.—The following are extracts from President Davis' proclamation:—

Now, therefore, I, Jefferson Davis, President of the Confederate States of America, and in their name do pronounce and declare the said Benjamin F. Butler to be a felon, deserving of capital punishment. I do order that he shall no longer be considered or treated simply as a public enemy of the Confederate States of America, but as an outlaw and common enemy of mankind, and that in the event of his capture the officer in command of the capturing force do cause him to be immediately executed by hanging, and I do forthwith order that no commissioned officer of the United States taken captive shall be released on parole before exchange until the said Butler shall have met with due punishment for his crimes; and whereas the hostilities waged against this Confederacy by the forces of the U. S. under the command of the said Benj. F. Butler have borne no resemblance to such warfare as is alone permissable by the rules of International law or the usage of civilization, but have been characterized by repeated atrocities and outrages.—Peaceful and aged citizens, unarmed and non-combatants have been confined at hard labor, with chains attached to their limbs, and are still so held in dungeons and fortresses. Others have been subjected to a like degrading punishment, for acting medicine to the sick soldiers of the Confederacy. The soldiers of the United States have been invited and encouraged, in general orders, to insult and outrage the wives, the mothers and the sisters of our citizens. Helpless women have been torn from their homes and subjected to solitary confinement; some in fortresses and prisons, and one, especially on an island of barren sand, under a tropical sun; they have been fed with loathsome rations and are been exposed to the vilest insults. Prisoners of war, who surrendered to the naval forces of the United States, on agreement that they should be released on parol, have been seized and kept in close confinement. Repeated pretexts have been sought or invented for plundering the inhabitants of the captured city, by fines levied and collected under threat of imprisoning recusants at hard labor, with ball and chain. The entire population of New Orleans have been forced to select between starvation, by the confiscation of all their property, and taking an oath, against conscience, to bear allegiance to the invader of their country. Egress from the city has been refused to those whose fortitude withstood the test, and even to lone and aged women, and to helpless children, and after being ejected from their homes and robbed of their property, they have been left to starve in the streets or subsist on charity. The slaves have been driven from the plantations in the neighborhood of New Orleans until their owners would consent to share their crops with the commanding general, his brother (Andrew J. Butler) and other officers, and when such consent had been extorted, the slaves have been restored to the plantations, and their compelled to work under the bayonets of the guard of the United States soldiers; where that partnership was refused, armed expeditions have been sent to the plantations to rob them of everything that was susceptible of removal, and even slaves too aged or infirm for work, have, in spite of their entreaties, been forced from the homes provided by their owners, and driven to wander helpless on the highway. By a recent order (No. 91), the entire property in that part of Louisiana west of the Mississippi river has been sequestrated for confiscation, and officers have been assigned to duty with orders to gather up, collect the personal property, and turn over to the proper officers, upon their receipts, such of said property as may be required for the use of the United States army, to collect together all the personal property and bring the same to New Orleans, and cause it to be sold at public auction to the highest bidders, an order which, if executed, condemns to punishment, by starvation, at least a quarter of a million of all ages, sexes and conditions, and of which the execution, although forbidden to military officers by the orders of President Lincoln, is in accordance with the confiscation law of our enemy, which he has enforced through the agency of cruel officials. And, finally the African slaves have not only been incited to insurrection by even license and encouragement, but numbers of them have actually been armed for a servile war—a war in its nature far exceeding the horrors and most merciless atrocities of savages. The proclamation concludes as follows: And whereas the President of the United States has by public and official declarations signified not only his approval of the effort to excite servile war within the Confederacy, but his intention to give aid and encouragement thereto, if these independent States shall continue to refuse submission to a foreign power after the 1st day of January next, and has thus made known that all appeal to the law of nations, the dictates of reason, and the instincts of humanity, would be addressed in vain to our enemies, and that they can be deterred from the commission of these crimes only by the terrors of just retaliation. Now, therefore, I, Jefferson Davis, President of the Confederate States of America, and acting by their authority, appeal to the divine Judge in attestation that this conduct is not guided by the passion of revenge, but that reluctantly yielding to the solemn duty of redressing, by necessary severity, crimes of which their citizens are the victims, do issue this my proclamation, and by virtue of my authority as Commander-in-Chief of the armies of the Confederate States, do order

First—That all commissioned officer in the command of the said B. F. Butler, be declared not entitled to be considered as soldiers engaged in honorable warfare, but robbers and criminals, deserving death, and that they and each of them be, whenever captured, reserved for execution.

Second—That the private citizens and non-commissioned officers in the army of the said Butler be considered as guilty of the like offences, for the commission of which they are executed, and they therefore are treated, when captured, as prisoners of war, with humane and humanity, and that they will in no manner and or serve the United States in any capacity during the continuance of this war, unless duly exchanged.

Third—That all negroes captured in arms be at once delivered over to the executive authorities of the respective States to which they belong, to be dealt with according to the laws of the said States.

Fourth—That the like orders be executed in all cases with respect to all commissioned officers of the United States, when found serving in company with said slaves in insurrections against the authorities of the different States of this Confederacy.

In testimony whereof I have signed these presents and cause the seal of the Confederate States of America to be affixed thereto, at the city of Richmond, on this 23rd day of December, in the year of our Lord, 1862.

(Signed) JEFF. DAVIS.

By the President,
J. H. BENJAMIN,
Secretary of State.

Bad influence of Washington.

Upon Gen. Halleck's report the New York Express thus comments:

It is a curious fact in our history, that the nearer the army is to Washington the less it does—and the further off from Washington it is, the more it does. But curious as the fact is, it is easily explained: A General without brains, even in the west, or southwest, is too far from Washington to be interfered with by Generals Disorder, Distrust, Imbecility and Ignorance, that seem to command in Washington. Hence, the greater the distance from the Capital, the greater the success.

Farragut's victories in and over New Orleans, are due to his distance from Washington. Foote's victories on the Cumberland and Tennessee are due to his distance from Washington. We entered Nashville only because it was out of the direct reach of the War Department in Washington. Would not the Sioux, even, have taken Minnesota, if Minnesota had been alongside of the Capital? General Banks, it is said, is going to Texas. If this be so, success will be likely to attend him—but if he be only going to James River, Washington will ruin him.

Gen. McClellan achieved all anybody desired of him when left alone in Western Virginia. Even Gen. Pope was a good sort of a General on the Mississippi River. Gen. Banks has high reputation, but he was driven out of the Shenandoah Valley because of interference in Washington. Gen. Wool did very well at Fortress Monroe, and claims the honor of taking Norfolk; but, he, too, was ruined the moment he got as near as Baltimore is to Washington. Gen. Sigel, whose name was a great one in the West, is very likely to die in Washington. Poor Burnside—alas! for him—if Washington does not kill him, he will be the only survivor of Washington.

How to Live on 2s. a Week.

An event occurred on Monday, at the Knowsley Street Industrial School, a description of which our readers will peruse with some interest, as it illustrates the manner which the poor people are now living, and the methods they adopt to "make both ends meet." It had occurred to one of the Guardians, a gentleman who takes great interest in the welfare of the thousands who are now thrown upon the public benevolence, and who is devoting the whole of his time in co-operating in the alleviation of the present distress, to make some inquiries as to how the young women employed in the above-mentioned establishment expend the money they received; and he questioned about 20 of them on this point, having first offered a small reward to her who seemed to be making the best use of her allowance.

We give four of the answers he received:—1. Mary ——— 18 years old, an orphan, who in good times pays 1s 3d per week for lodgings, but is now allowed to pay less. Her expenditure of the 2s she receives weekly is—lodgings, 6d; seconds flour, 9d; treacle, 1½; coffee, 2½; barm, ½; salt, ½; sugar, 2d—total 2s. Jane ———, 17 years of age, an orphan, who lives in lodgings, and says she sometimes obtains a loaf from the charities, spends her 2s as follows:—Lodgings, 1s; seconds flour, 9d; treacle, 1½; coffee, 1½.—Mary ——— 19 years old, has a father who has married a second time:—Lodgings, 9d; seconds flour, 9d; treacle, 1½; coffee, 1½; sugar, 1d; bacon, 2;—total, 2s. Ellen ———, 20 years old; lives with her aunt; parents not living in Preston:—Lodgings, 9d; seconds flour, 8d; treacle, 2d; coffee, 2½; barm, ½d; salt, ½d; sugar, 2½d; bacon, 2d; total, 2s. The answers of the other young women were similar to those given above, but the prize was given to No. 1 in the above list, Mary ———. These statements must convince any one of the shifts these poor creatures are put to preserve life even. It is clear that in the above accounts, which prove an economy (though compulsory) verging upon starvation, there is no margin for clothes; and with every prospect of a severe, and to thousands a bitter winter, what will become of them if they are not cared for in that particular? After the above, no argument is surely needed to urge the most liberal dispensation of warm clothing that can be provided.—Preston Herald.

A Picket Scene.

The Falmouth correspondent of the New York Tribune writes:

"We have not yet thrown any troops over the Rappahannock. The Confederate pickets on the Fredericksburg side are posted down to the bank of the river, which, until swollen by this rain, was not more than a hundred yards wide; they keep a sharp look out but do not fire; our men ride down to water their horses, and converse freely with them. Yesterday I heard this dialogue:—

"Hallo, Secesh!"

"Hallo, Yank!"

"What was the matter with your battery, Tuesday night?"

You made it too hot. Your shots drove the cannoneers away, and they haven't stopped running yet. We infantry men had to come out and withdraw the guns."

"Your infantry men will run, too, one of these fine mornings."

"——hen are you coming over, blue coat?"

"When we get ready, butternut."

"What do you want?"

"Want Fredericksburg."

"Don't you wish you may get it?"

Here an officer came up and ordered our men away."

Better the child weep than the father.

WHOLESOME RULES.—Mr. Spurgeon in referring to evil reports writes:—The longer I live the more I feel the importance of adhering to the following rules:

1st. To hear as little as possible what is to the prejudice of others.

2nd. To believe nothing of the kind until I am absolutely forced to it.

3rd. Never to drink in the spirit of one who circulates an evil report.

4th. Always to be moderate as far as I can.

5th. Always to believe that if the other side were heard, a very different account would be given of the matter.

DEATH OF A JUDGE.—We regret to have to record the death of Judge Pelat, Judge of the Counties of Prescott and Russell, which took place at his residence, L'Original, on the night of the 15th inst.

$731,000,000 REQUIRED FOR THE U. S. ARMY.—The Army bill, reported from the Committee of Ways and Means, appropriates $731,000,000 for the year ending with June, 1864.

A wise man may be pinched by poverty, but only a fool will let himself be pinched by tight shoes.

Five hundred and forty-three vessels in all have been seized by the Federal blockading squadrons, worth, with their cargoes, forty millions of dollars.

He that is perfectly wise is perfectly happy: say, the very beginning of wisdom makes life easy to us. Neither is it enough to know this, unless we print it in our minds by daily meditation, and so bring a good will to a good habit.

Not long ago a youth, older in wit than in years, after being entertained concerning the power of Nature, replied, 'Now, I think there's one thing nature can't do.' 'What is it, my child?' 'She can't make Bell Jone's mouth any bigger without cutting his ears back.'

It has been said of the late celebrated Rothschild, that, though no man was less lavish of his money, no one was more ready to detect a love of it in others. It was one day while at a city feast, that a gentleman observed that for his part he thought venison was very good, but that he loved mutton better. 'Ah! ah! I knowsh sy! it is becausch he doesn't like to pay de prishe—it is becausch mutton's sheep, and venishon's deer."

THE NEW YORK TRIBUNE. 1863.

THE New-York Tribune, first issued in 1841, is now in its twenty-second year, has obtained but a larger and more widely diffused circulation than any other newspaper ever published in America. Though it has suffered, in common with other journals, from the volunteering and departure of tens of thousands of its patrons to serve in the War of the Union, its circulation on the 6th of December, 1862, is as follows:

DAILY	50,125
SEMI-WEEKLY	17,250
WEEKLY	148,000
Aggregate	215,375

Preeminently a journal of News and of Literature, The Tribune has political convictions, which are well characterized by the single word REPUBLICAN. It is Republican in its hearty adhesion to the great truth that "God has made of one blood all nations of men"—Republican in its assertion of the equal and inalienable rights of all men to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness"—Republican in its steadfast, earnest, defiant hostility to every scheme and effort of the Slave Power, from the Annexation of Texas to the great Rebellion, to grasp the empire of the New World and wield the resources of our country for its own aggrandizement—Republican in its antagonism to the aristocrats and despots of the Old World, who fondly hail in the perils and calamities suddenly thrust upon us by the American counterpart the verification and ruin of the Model republic—Republican in its hope and trust, its faith and effort, that no atrocious Rebellion must result in the signal overthrow of its plotters, and the firm establishment of equal rights and equal laws throughout the whole extent of our country, wherein Liberty and Union shall indeed be "one and inseparable" henceforth and forever.

The Tribune devotes attention in calmer times, and to some extent in these, to Education, Temperance, and Agriculture, Inventions, and whatever else may minister to the spiritual and material progress and well-being of mankind; but for the present its energies and its columns are mainly devoted to the success of the War for the Union. Its special correspondents accompany every considerable army and report every important incident of that great struggle which we trust is soon to result in the signal and conclusive triumph of the National arms, and in the restoration of Peace and Thrift to our bleeding country. We believe that no otherwise can a fuller or more accurate view of the progress and character of this momentous conflict be obtained than through the regular perusal of our columns. And we earnestly solicit the cooperation of all friends of the National cause, which we regard and uphold as that of Universal Humanity, to aid us in extending its circulation.

EMPLOYMENT.

THE Undersigned has, for several years past, been engaged in a business, which has yielded him at the rate of three thousand dollars per annum, and is now willing to teach it to others. The business is of a highly useful and general character, adapted both to cities and villages, and one that any person of ordinary capacity, young or old, male or female, can acquire with a few hours' practice, and by which they can secure a very handsome income. Several young ladies who have received instructions from me, both in New York State and Pennsylvania, are earning upwards of $15 per week by it, and there is no reason why any one else cannot do the same. Invalids, even, can do well by it, as it is no peddling affair, but a business that is perfectly respectable. Gentleman and ladies of leisure who would like to learn the business for their own amusement or pleasure, will find the practice of it a pleasant pastime, and one that they will take great interest in. On receipt of $1, I will send printed instructions by which any person can readily acquire the art, and these instructions will also contain every particular relative to the carrying it on so that it will be highly profitable. The purchaser of the "printed instructions" will also be authorized to teach it to others; and I have sometimes received as high as $200, for teaching it personally to a single individual. I would state further that $4.50 or $3 will buy everything that is necessary to commence the business with, and the articles can be got almost anywhere, in city or country, or if preferred, I can furnish them. Address ALVORDT PARSONS, No. 36 LIBERTY ST., NEW YORK.

FARMS IN UPPER CANADA.

THE CANADIAN

Land & Emigration Co'y, Limited,

OF LONDON, ENGLAND,

Capital, £250,000 Stg.

THE HON. MR. JUSTICE HALIBURTON, CHAIRMAN, offer for sale

250,000 Acres

OF LAND IN THE

consisting of parts of the

Townships of DYSART, DUDLEY, LONGFORD, GUILFORD, HARCOURT, HARBURN, BRUTON, HAVELOCK, &c., &c.

The following are some, among many other inducements held out to parties who may choose to take up lands in the above Townships:

Ten per cent of the purchase money paid to Government by the Company for the lands will be expended in constructing really good roads: these roads will intersect the Government Roads; namely, the Bobcaygeon, Victoria Burleigh and Peterson Roads, at convenient points and will converge to various Town plots which the Company have in view to lay out in very carefully selected sites. The Town Plots will, it is anticipated,—the whole of them being connected by good roads (for the construction of which the country affords excellent facilities)—become each the centre of a new and flourishing settlement; private enterprise in establishing Stores, Mills, &c., will here soon find its reward, and the several towns and townships being as it were knit together by good roads, will derive from that fact great advantages and mutual support

In addition, the watchful supervision of the Company over every part of their lands will greatly tend to advance the interests of this district, which, being in the middle of Upper Canada, possessing a fertile soil, and a climate unsurpassed in its healthful effects upon the human frame, offers superior attractions, and all the elements of rapid progress and permanent prosperity

ILLUSTRATED SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN!

The Best Mechanical Paper in the World.

VOLUME VIII—NEW SERIES.

A NEW VOLUME of this popular Journal commences on the first of January. It is published weekly, and every number contains sixteen pages of useful information, and from five to ten original engravings of new inventions and discoveries, all of which are prepared expressly for its columns.

TO THE MECHANIC & MANUFACTURER

No person engaged in any of the manufacturing pursuits should think of "doing without" the Scientific American. It costs but six cents per week; every number contains from six to ten engravings of new machines and inventions, which cannot be found in any other publication.

TO THE INVENTOR.

The Scientific American is indispensable to every inventor, as it not only contains illustrated descriptions of nearly all the best inventions as they come out, but each number contains an Official List of the Claims of all the Patents issued from the United States Patent Office during the week previous; thus giving a correct histor of the progress of invention in this country. We are also receiving, every week the best scientific journals of Great Britain France and Germany: thus placing in our possession all that is transpiring in mechanical science and art in these old countries. We continue to transfer to our columns copious extracts from these journals whatever we may deem of interest to our readers.

A pamphlet of instructions as to the best mode of obtaining Letters Patent on new inventions is furnished free on application.

Messrs. Munn & Co. have acted as Patent Solicitors for more than seventeen years, in connection with the publication of the Scientific American, and they receive 20,000 patentees for whom they have done business

No charge is made for examining sketches and models of new inventions and for advising inventors as to their patentability.

CHEMISTS, ARCHITECTS, MILLWRIGHTS & FARMERS.

The Scientific American will be found a most useful journal to them. All the new discoveries in the science of chemistry are given in its columns, and the interest of the architect and carpenter are not overlooked; all the new inventions and discoveries appertaining to these pursuits being published from week to week. Useful and practical information pertaining to the interests of millwrights and millowners will be found in the Scientific American, which information they can not possibly obtain from any other source. Subjects in which farmers are interested will be found discussed in the Scientific American; most of the improvements in agricultural implements being illustrated in its columns.

TERMS.—To mail subscribers: Three Dollars a year, or One Dollar for four months.—The volumes commence on the first of January and July. Specimen copies will be sent gratis to any part of the country.

Western and Canadian money or Post-office stamps taken at par for subscriptions. Canadian subscribers will please to remit twenty-five cents extra on each year's subscription to prepay postage.

ANNUAL MEETING

INVESTIGATION REPORT - - - DECLARATION OF BONUS.

THE eighteenth annual Meeting of the Company was held within the Royal Hotel, Aberdeen on Friday, the 18th April.

Alexander Stronach, Esq., of Drumallan, Chairman of the Ordinary Directors, in the Chair.

There were submitted to the meeting—

1.—Report by the Directors, which, on the motion of the Chairman, was cordially and unanimously approved of and ordered to be printed.

2d—The Balance Sheet for the past year, with detailed annual statutory returns, duly certified as correct, in terms of the Act of Incorporation, by the Chairman and Manager, and also by the Auditor.

There was also laid on the Table the various Valuation States in connection with the Quinquennial Investigation into the state of the Company's affairs, as at 31st January, 1862.

The following particulars extracted from the Balance Sheet and States before-mentioned, show the result of the operations of the Company for the past year:—

Amount required for Life Assurances during the year, contained in 1139 Proposal	£454,825 0 0
Amount of Proposals accepted, and for which 891 Policies were issued	320,620 0 0
ANNUAL PREMIUMS on said Policies	11,170 1 0
CLAIMS BY DEATH including BONUSES on PARTICIPATION POLICIES, and after deducting Sums reassured from other Offices under guarantee	21,980 1 0
TOTAL SUM Assured under 4,720 current LIFE POLICIES	1,955,95 0 0
TOTAL ACCUMULATED FUNDS	373,563 2 1
TOTAL ANNUAL REVENUE	34,756 4 4

With reference to the recent investigation into the state of the Company's affairs, as at 31st January last, the Report states that both the principles of valuation and the details thereof, had been submitted to James John Downes, Esq., Actuary to the Economic Life Office in London, a gentleman as well known as one of the highest authorities on such subjects in the kingdom, and had received his cordial approval, as having been made on just and sound principles, and accurately carried out as certified in his report to the Directors, which formed part of the Appendix to their Report. This step the Directors considered could not fail to give the utmost confidence—both to the shareholders and the Policyholders—in the soundness and correctness of the valuation.

During the Quinquennial period, the claims by death, including the bonus additions which had been paid, and which had been considerably under the amount that might have been expected from the Mortality Tables on which the Office rates are based, amounting to £39,975 6s 6d.

In valuing the Policies, each had been separately calculated, and nett premiums had only been used, thus leaving a surplus of annual revenue of £11,427 16s 7d., to meet future expenses and to form a source of profit for next investigation. The total amount of claims by death paid since the commencement of the Company, was £211,931 4s.

The Securities held by the Company were in a satisfactory position, and had been recently carefully scrutinised in detail by the Directors.

In conclusion, the Directors congratulated both the Proprietors and the Assured on the high position which the Company now occupied in the estimation of the public, and on the encouraging prospect of its business operations for the future.

DECLARATION OF BONUS.

From the profits realised on the Life business, a prospective Bonus of £1 7s 6d per cent per annum for the Quinquennial period was declared, on the sums originally assured under all Participating Policies, increased by the previous additions thereto; also a further prospective Bonus of £1 per cent per annum, on the amount of the Policies with said Bonuses, on all such of said Policies as may become claims by Death previously to the 31st January, 1867.

It will be observed, that this rate of Bonus is equivalent in the case of our older Policies to £1 14s per cent per annum on the original sum assured; that the total additions to the sum assured, now vest d, are equal to 32 per cent on the sum assured: and that as the younger ages the additions amount to upwards of 38 per cent of the premiums paid.

Statement shewing the Progress of the Company's Business during the Quinquennial Period, ending 31st January, 1862:

Year ending 31st January.	Amounts proposed for Assurance.	Amount of New Policies Issued.	No. of Policies	New Annual Premiums.	Total Revenue in each year.	Accumulated Funds.

DISEASES INCIDENT TO MEN, Women and Children:

TOGETHER WITH A GRAND TREATISE ON THE

SUCH AS

Love, Hope, Joy, Affection, Anger, Jealousy, Grief, Fear, Despair, Avarice, Charity, Cheerfulness, Religion, etc., showing the influence of the Mind on the Body as a Cause of Health and Disease.

ALSO:

A Complete Materia Medica,

or, list of all the principal remedies used in the treatment of disease, including nearly

300 MEDICAL PLANTS, HERBS AND VEGETABLE REMEDIES,

with descriptions of each, and directions for preparing and using them. (With an elegant and correct Likeness of the Author.)

By JOHN C. GUNN, M. D.,

OF LOUISVILLE KY.,

Author of the old work known as "GUNN'S DOMESTIC MEDICINE."

Also, AN APPENDIX, containing a popular treatise on ANATOMY, PHYSIOLOGY, and the LAWS OF HEALTH; the whole making a large octavo volume of

OVER ONE THOUSAND PAGES,

with numerous

VALUABLE ILLUSTRATIONS!

THIS is probably the best, as well as the most thorough and extensive book ever published, as a Domestic or Family Medical Work. Its author is now an old man, and is probably more generally known as a popular medical author than any man living, owing to the great popularity and extensive use of his old work, which was one of great value, but in the present advanced state of medical science is altogether behind the times. Dr G. is a graduate of several of the best Medical Colleges in the world, viz.: of Philadelphia, and of London and Paris. He has been a successful practicing physician for nearly forty years: and it can hardly supposed that any man can be better qualified to write such a work than he is. He has spent most of the time for several years in preparing this work—intending it, as he often remarked, as his last and greatest Legacy to Posterity.

The work contains a description of all the diseases known or common to this country—their causes, symptoms, and character—with plain and full directions for successfully treating them, telling what remedies to use; how to use them, and when; the whole stated in plain and simple language; or whenever any technical or Medical terms are used, they are fully explained; so that the commonest mind can understand them. The remedies recommended are generally of the simplest kind, such as are harmless, yet efficient, and usually such as are easily to be obtained.

Besides the diseases common to both sexes, the work contains a department on the diseases of Females, and their treatment. Also a department on the diseases of Children, which alone is worth the price of the book to mothers and all who have the care of children.

An important item in the work is its Pharmacy, or valuable Family Receipts, there being many than forty pages of Medical Receipts and Compounds, many of which will be found very important and useful in a family.

☞ Remember that this Book can only be had of the Agent, when he calls, and is not to be had either of us, direct, or through Booksellers.

☞ This book will be delivered to subscribers during the Christmas holidays and the succeeding week. They will therefore please avoid causing any delay, by being prepared to take it immediately on its presentation. The price of the book is five dollars and fifty cents

THE CELEBRATED

HOWE SEWING MACHINES.

Manufactured 1862—Patented '61.

RECENT and important improvements have been put to the Machine, to adapt it now the most perfect ever offered to the public, all persons at a distance can order a Machine with a guarantee of its prompt and safe delivery, and that they will be able to manage it to their entire satisfaction. No more breaking needles. No more missing stitches! No trouble in making any garment, however delicate or heavy, on the same Machine, either in cambric, cloth or leather; and for dress makers, shirt makers, tailors, hat binders, shoe binders, or gaiter binding, as well as every variety of family sewing they have no superior, and will be sold at a much less price than any other machine capable of doing the same range of work.

Send for Descriptive Catalogue of styles and prices. A few responsible Agents will be dealt with liberally.

☞ Address the HOWE Sewing Machines, 467 Broadway, New York. 26-12m.

FINKLE & LYON

SEWING MACHINE COMPANY.

830 Broadway, New York.

TO parties little acquainted with the Finkle & Lyon Sewing Machines the careful perusal of the Company's Circular is especially commended. This circular can be had on application. It is very specific, and will be found highly instructive, having been prepared without care and we will abide by all stated therein made.

The following brief quotation is characteristic of the entire Circular:

"This Machine is better adapted than any other Sewing Machine in market to the frequent changes and almost endless variety of sewing required in a family; for it will sew from one to twenty thicknesses of Marseilles without stopping, and make every stitch perfect. Will sew from the finest gauze to the heaviest cloth, and even the stoutest harness leather, without changing the feed needle or tension, or making any adjustment of machine whatever."

Thus have we successfully overcome the most difficult point in the Sewing Machine art. It was no ordinary triumph. Defiantly can we say, "No other Machine compares with it in this respect." Hence, have we uniformly—almost without exception—taken the highest premium, wherever the Machine has been properly exhibited in competition with other first class Sewing Machines. Hence it is that we are able to offer the following guarantee, viz.: "We warrant every Machine we sell to give perfect satisfaction than any other Sewing Machine in the market, or money refunded." We never sell a Machine on any other terms. The guarantee is as reliable as the note of any business man in the land. For more than five years we have relied upon such facts for the reputation of our Machine; and without a single travelling agent in the field, there is scarcely a neighborhood on the continent where the Machine is not favourably known. We prefer such a reputation to one based on mere "talking points," as they are technically called in the trade. Hence we make but one kind of stitch, viz. the lock-stitch, alike on both sides, requiring only one-third the thread of other kinds of stitches.

N. B.—Local Agents wanted in every county throught the West. ☞ Special inducements offered.

SICK PEOPLE THINK!

Herrick's Sugar Coated Pills.

CHILDREN CRY FOR THEM!

THIS remarkable American remedy is carrying the world by storm. Over five million boxes are sold annually. Composed entirely of Flowers, Roots, Balsams, and Extracts,—their effect on the human system is pleasant, satisfactory, and successful. Acting directly on the blood, glands, solids and fluids of the body, they remove all obstructions. In sudden attacks of diseases one or two doses almost always cures. In old standing cases of sickness, small doses repeated frequently—so cleanse this system that good health is the result. No change in employment or diet is necessary. They never cause sore mouth, swelled gums, sickness, pain or any other kinds. They are warranted to give satisfaction, or the money will be refunded. They are considered cheaper, safer, prettier and in all respects superior to any purgative pill in the world.

☞ The discovery of creating a pill with sugar combined with Dr. Herrick. All others are counterfeits and if used, will do harm, and disappoint the sick. Herrick's pills are elegantly put up, 20 in a box, with a large number of directions, and sell for 25 cents a box; 6 boxes for $1.

Herrick's Kid Strengthening Plaster.

THE GREAT STRENGTHENER AND PAIN DESTROYER. THE BEST AND CHEAPEST HOUSEHOLD REMEDY IN THE WORLD.

These renowned Plasters cure pains, weakness and distress in the back, sides and breast, as few know. Insured, as certain are they to do this, that the proprietor warrants them. Spread from rosins, balsams and gums, on beautiful kid leather, renders them peculiarly adapted to the wants of females and others. Their application is universal—equally to the strong man, the feeble woman, and the delicate infant. To each and all they will prove a balm and a blessing. Their one is agreeable, and without nauseous or terrible. Each Plaster will wear from one to four months, and in rheumatic complaints, sprains and bruises, frequently effect cures when all other remedies fail. Full directions will be found on the back of each. Public speakers, vocalists, ministers of the gospel, and others, will strengthen their lungs and improve their voices by wearing them on the breast. Price 25 cents.

The above articles are sold by all the dealers in Canada, and by druggists throughout the United States and South America, at wholesale by all large druggists in the principal cities.

Poetry.

Lines on a Skeleton.

Some forty years ago the following poem was found in the London Morning Chronicle.—Every effort was vainly made to discover the author, even to the offering of a reward of fifty guineas. All that ever transpired was, that the poem, in a fair clerkly hand, was found near a skeleton of remarkable symmetry of form in the Museum of the Royal College of Surgeons, Lincoln's Inn, London, and that the Curator of the Museum sent it to the Morning Chronicle.

Behold this ruin! 'Twas a skull
Once of the ethereal spirit full.
This narrow cell was Life's retreat,
This space was thought's mysterious seat,
What beauteous visions filled this spot,
What dreams of pleasure long forgot.
Nor hope nor joy, nor love, nor fear,
Have left one trace of record here.

Beneath this mouldering canopy
Once shone the bright and busy eye;
But start not at the dismal void—
If social love that eye employed,
If with no lawless fire it gleamed,
But through the dews of kindness beamed,
That eye shall be for ever bright
When stars and sun are sunk in night.

Within this hollow cavern hung
The ready, swift, and tuneful tongue,
If falsehood's honey it disdained,
And when it could not praise, was chained;
If bold in virtue's cause it spoke,
Yet gentle concord never broke!
This silent tongue shall plead for thee
When time unveils eternity.

Say, did these fingers delve the mine?
Or with the envied rubies shine?
To hew the rock or wear the gem
Can little now avail to them.
But if the page of truth they sought,
Or comfort to the mourner brought,
These hands a richer meed shall claim
Than all that wait on wealth or fame.

Avails it, whether bare or shod
These feet the paths of duty trod?
If from the bowers of ease they fled,
To seek Affliction's humble shed;
If Grandeur's guilty bribe they spurned,
And home to Virtue's cot returned,
These feet with angels' wings shall vie,
And tread the palace of the sky.

Miscellaneous.

A Comical Courtship.

As a gentleman was passing along one of the more retired streets of London, he stumbled over the body of an old man, whom, on examination, he found in a state of excessive inebriaton, and who had, in consequence, tumbled down and rolled into the kennel. He had not gone many yards further when he found an old woman very nearly in the same circumstances. It immediately struck Mr. L. that this was some poor old couple, who, overcome by the fatigues of the day, had indulged too freely in some restorative beverage, whether, Hodges or Deady's the historian does not say. Full of this idea, and animated by his own charitable disposition, Mr. L. soon made arrangements for the reception of the poor couple into a neighboring public house, where the landlord promised that the senseless pair should be undressed and placed in a warm, comfortable bed. To bed they were put. Mr. L. then left them lying side by side, snoring in concert, and likely to pass together a more harmonious night than perhaps would have been the case, had they possessed the full enjoyment of their senses. L. journeyed homewards, filled with the satisfaction arising from the performance of a kind deed, and never reflected that there was a possibility of his having joined a pair whom the laws of God had not made one. The fact was, that the old man and the old woman were perfect strangers to each other, and their being found in a similar situation was purely accidental. In London, however, extraordinary it may appear, many poor folks get drunk at night, especially Saturday night, and what is not less wonderful, they are often in this state unable to preserve their balance—the laws of gravity exert their influence and the patient rolls into the kennel. Very soundly did this late united couple sleep and snore till morning, when the light broke upon them and disclosed the secret. Imagine the consternation of the old lady when the fumes of intoxication were dissipated, and she opened her eyes upon her sleeping partner; where she was or how she had been put there, she knew not.

It was clear she was in bed with a man, and that was an event which had never happened to her before—so she set up a scream and roused the old gentleman, whose astonishment was not a jot less than the old lady's. She sat on one end in bed, staring at him; he moved himself into a similar situation, and riveted his eyes upon her, and so they remained for a few instants, both full of wonderment. At last it struck the poor lady that this was some monster of a man, who had succeeded in some horrible design upon her honor; the idea in a moment gave her the look and manner of a fury; she flung out of bed and roared aloud, to the admiration of all the inmates of the house, who, attracted by the screams were already peeping in at the door of the room. "Make me an honest woman, thou wretch!" she cried. "Villain that thou art! make me an honest woman of me, or I'll be the death of thee!" Down she sat upon the bed stocks, and she attempted to dress herself; she interlarded her occupation with calling for vengeance upon her horrible seducer, who sat trembling at the other side of the bed, vainly attempting in his fright to insinuate his legs into his old tattered breeches. The landlord at last interfered with the authority of his station; and on inquiry, found that no breach had been made which could not easily be repaired. The old gentleman was asked if he had any objection to take his fair bed-fellow for a helpmate during the remainder of his life; he stammered out his acquiescence as well as he could, and the enraged virgin consented to smooth down her anger on satisfaction being made of her injured honor. The bargain was soon struck; the happy pair were bundled off to church amidst the laughing shouts of the mob, where a parson waited to make good the match too precipitately formed by our charitable friend.

Wellington and Napoleon.

Napoleon and Wellington are not enemies, but contrasts. Never did God, who delights in antithesis, produce a more striking contrast or a more extraordinary confrontation. On the one side, precision, foresight, geometry, prudence, a retreat assured, reverses prepared, an obstinate coolness, an impenetrable method, strategy, profiting by the ground, tactics, balancing battalions, carnage measured by a ploughline, war regulated watch in hand, nothing left voluntarily to accident, old classic courage, and absolute correctness. On the other hand, we have intuition, divination, military strangeness, superhuman instinct, a flashing glance (something that gazes like the eagle and strikes like lightning), all the mysteries of a profound mind, association with destiny; the river, the plain, the forest and the hill, summoned and to some extent compelled to obey the despot going so far as to tyrannize over the battle field; faith in a star bleaded with strategic science heightening but troubling it. Wellington was the Barême of war; Napoleon was its Michael Angelo, and the true genius was conquered by calculation. On both sides so nobody was expected; and it was the exact calculator who succeeded. Napoleon waited for Grouchy, who did not come; Wellington waited for Blucher, and he came.—Les Miserables: by Victor Hugo.

The Cabinet Crisis.

The Tribune Washington correspondent gives the following inside view of the solution of the Cabinet troubles:

Those who had the return of Mr. Seward to the State Department as the salvation of the country, ascribe the merit of the work which brought it at out jointly to Secretary Chase and the President. Mr. Chase having sent in his resignation, is said to have firmly refused to withdraw it if Mr. Seward retired from the Cabinet. The President as firmly refused to accept the resignation of either. To Mr. Seward he said that, although his feelings and interests perhaps dictated his withdrawal from the Cabinet at his juncture, patriotism required him to stay and help him through his administration; and in as much as his persistence in leaving would deprive him of the services of a Secretary of the Treasury on whom he leaned, he was doubly bound to reconsider his determination. It is said that the President then, with pleasant imperiousness, ordered both of the Secretaries to return to their Departments and resume their portfolios, and they both pleasantly did so.

Wellington's Strategy.

On a certain occasion during Wellington's campaign in the Pyranees, that "Great Caprain" being displeased with the dispositions General Picton had made for receiving the assault of Marshal Soult, who menaced him in front, ordered the plan to be entirely changed. But the difficulty was to delay the attack of the French until the change could be effected. This the "Iron Duke" accomplished in person, in the following manner:—Doffing his cocked hat and waving it in the air, he rode furiously to the head of a regiment, as if about to order a charge. There upon arose a tremendous cheer from the men, which was taken up by corps after corps, until it reverberated along the whole extend of Picton's line. As the roar died away, Wellington was heard to remark, musingly, as if addressing himself,—"Soult is a skillful but cautious commander, and will not attack in force until he has ascertained the meaning of these cheers. This will give time for the 6th division to come up, and we shall beat him." It turned out as he anticipated. Soult, naturally enough, supposed these shouts announced the arrival of large reinforcements, and did not attack until too late. Had he struck at the right moment he would have won an easy victory; as it was he met with a bloody repulse. This was strategy. Not the strategy of genius, engendered and executed in the same moment.

A BLONDIN 200 YEARS SINCE. — A note in Evelyn's Diary, August 15th, 1657 shows an acrobat's performance of his day, which beat M. Blondin's most afflicting feats all to nothing. It is worth extracting:—"Going to London with some company, we stepped in to see a famous rope dancer called the Turk. I saw even to astonishment, the agility with which he performed; he walked barefooted, taking hold with his toes only, of a rope almost perpendicular, and without so much as touching it with his hands; he danced blindfolded on the high rope, and with a boy twelve years old tied to one of his feet about 20 feet beneath him, dangling as he danced, yet he moved as nimbly as if he had but a feather. Lastly, he stood on his head on the top of a very high mast, danced on a high rope that was very slack, and finally flew down the perpendicular on his breast, his head foremost, his legs and arms extended, with divers other activities."

NEGROES IN MISSISSIPPI. — The negroes in great numbers are coming into Gen. Grant's lines, bringing horses, mules, and wagons. They are set at work ginning and baling cotton. They receive wages for their labor, and, it is said, they do twice the work they performed as slaves. There is every indication that if the masters were well disposed, the transaction from the system of involuntary labor to paid labor would be much easier than many have supposed.

SINGULAR CASE OF DEATH FROM BLEEDING.—A son of Martin Bowers, of Salem, bled to death last week from the effects of a scratch or prick in the roof of his mouth. Dr. Paget was called in, but, notwithstanding all the means usually resorted to in such cases were used, he could only succeed in checking the flow of blood for 36 hours, when the hemorrhage again commenced, and death soon followed. Mr. Bowers says he lost a child some time ago in a similar manner, viz., from a prick near the nostrils.

SOUTHERN ITEMS.—Upwards of 2000 rebel wounded had arrived at Richmond previous to Wednesday last.

A dispatch from Port Hudson, Dec. 14th states that the Federal gunboat Essex sunk a wooden boat anchored below that place on the 12th, when Capt. McLane hired a negro to load the Essex, which he did. A boat was immediately sent ashore from the Essex, when the cavalry under McLane fired upon the occupants, killing and wounding two. A fight is reported to have subsequently taken place between a battery of light artillery and the gunboats, in which the latter were driven off.

Gen. Floyd claims to have gained a victory at Piketown on the Kentucky border routing 4000 Federals, killing 50, taking 6 prisoners and capturing 9 flat-boats with valuable stores.

☞ The public feeling in the West of Scotland, regarding the murder case, is still very strong. On Tuesday and on Thursday, Nov. 26th, old Mr. Fleming was mobbed at Greenock on his way from Dunoyn to Glasgow, and a scuffle took place between the most violent of the mob and police, whose interference was necessary to protect him.

Letter from an Officer in the American Army.

In our last issue we gave a few extracts of a letter received by the relatives of the writer, who is serving at present in the Federal army under Gen. Burnside. It will, no doubt, be remembered his remarks then made—with respect to an onward move of the Federal army this winter—how disastrous such an attempt would be. It is quite probable he had the attack on Fredericksburg in view. His prophesy turns out to be pretty near correct. The following letter, just received, was written after the great battle at Fredericksburg, and will certainly be read with interest:

Cam, ——Regt., N. Y. V.,
North Bank Rappahannock River,
DECEMBER 18, 1862.

DEAR ——, Before this reaches you, you will have heard of our grand demonstration in front of Fredericksburg, or rather the ground where the ancient city once stood. We bombarded the city on the 11th, crossed the Rappahannock on the 12th, skirmished our way across the flats, established our picket line on the railroad track. The enemy formed their line along the bottom of a ridge of mountains about 300 yards distant from us. Our brigade was on the extreme advance; we were so close to one another that it was folly to try to hide. We were very friendly. The rebels invited us over to take dinner; they said they had "pies" for sale at ten cents a-piece. One of our Lieutenants told them to pick up and be ready to move at a moment's notice. They said they were ready for us at any time. One of them shot a pig that was roving about between the two lines, it was nearer us than them, and neither party dare go after it. One of the rebels proposed to send one man from each side and let them skin the pig where it lay, and divide fair; but the Captain of Company A was in command of that part of line, and he refused to do it; when our Colonel heard of it, he said the Captain was very foolish. They also offered us a Richmond Dispatch for a New York Herald. We had strict orders not to exchange papers; but I had a Herald in my pocket, and would have exchanged with them but our Captain knew I had it and borrowed it, for fear, I suppose, that I would give "aid and comfort" to the enemy. We have so many orders read to us about "aid and comfort" to the enemy, that we don't pay the slightest attention to them.

We formed the right of the left grand division (Franklin's) during the four days and nights that we stopped on the other side of the river. There was hard fighting on the right and left, and the estimate of our loss varies from 18,000 to 20,000 in killed, wounded and missing. The Pennsylvania reserves were formed on our left, and they alone lost 2,650; our loss was light,—our regiment only lost 3 men, and that was the fault of the Jersey brigade, who came to the front to give us a chance to sleep a little, when they saw the rebel pickets they fired on them, and of course they returned it, when the Jersey's charged on them, and the rebels fell back till they got the Jersey's within grape and canister range of a brass battery they had in rear, they opened the battery on the Jersey's and raked them to pieces. The whole brigade broke and ran towards us, the rebels followed. We advanced in line of battle, and when the rebels saw us advancing they retired. We regained our line, and all again was quiet. While advancing we lost 3 men. But I am writing what you will see in the papers, at least if you don't you ought to.

The whole thing was a failure, and can be summed up in a few words. We destroyed the city, crossed the river, stayed 4 days and nights, lost in all, I suppose, about 25,000 men, and retreated in the dead of night—without gaining a single "peg." Yesterday our men crossed with a flag of truce to bury the dead. I am in first rate health, and I breathe a good deal easier since I put the stream between me and the Confederacy.

Yours, &c.,

We wish our readers would try Downs' Vegetable Balsamic Elixir for coughs, colds and all diseases of the throat, chest and lungs, for we are confident from the abundance of evidence that it is one of the oldest and most reliable cough medicines in use. It is sold by the Druggists and Merchants in this country for 25 cents per bottle, and warranted. Henry's Vermont Liniment needs but a single trial to make it a household treasure in every family. Try it.

MILITARY DRILL IN THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

A short time ago the Hamilton Times under the above caption urged the duty of the legislature to enforce the exercise of drill in the Common Schools by enactments. Our contemporary points out the advantages that would accrue to the country by adopting the course recommended. We must say, notwithstanding our disapprobation of exciting a martial spirit in our midst—especially of teaching or fostering it in children—the subject is worthy of serious consideration. If on mature deliberation and reflection it is considered unwise or injudicious, by all means abandon it; if on the other hand, it appears prudent and beneficial, let it be adopted

By being anything but a combatant or a warrior, but on the contrary a friend and advocate for peace, and instinctively averse to a martial spirit, we cannot be charged in advocating the measure, with urging cherished views or opinions on the subject. So far from this, the views we advance are opposed to our cherished predilections, and are drawn from us as the result of honest conviction, in looking the matter fairly in the face.

In the present state of our world, we must admit that even among the civilized nations of the world, the art of war is considered one of the very first magnitude, and importance, and the nation that falls behind in the art or material for war, is sure to be the vassal of its more powerful assailant. The history of Europe for the last 200 years, goes to prove, that it is the aim of the strong to oppress the weak—that a system of aggression for the purpose of acquisition and conquest, has been steadily pursued by every nation therein. Our own nation for instance has had to fight for its preservation—has fought for conquest—has fought for plunder, has fought to keep hold of its colonies—has fought for honor. To accomplish these ends Britain has poured out her blood and treasure ad infinitum, and is as ready now as ever to repeat, what she has before done. Our neighbors the Americans, during their short history, up to the present time, have been happily almost exempt from the honors of war, with its hydra evils. But now they are engaged in a strife with themselves—the like is yet unrecorded on the page of history, and each party is sacrificing cheerfully their material interests to succeed. In fact no sacrifice is too costly to make to the demon of war, and no injury too great to inflict upon the foe.

In times of war, a peaceful neighbor may be assailed, from very questionable pretexts. The question then arises, and it comes home to every bosom. Shall we allow the foe to burn our towns, to deface our country, to rob and injure us, or shall we meet him and defend ourselves from his aggressions? It would require the very strictest sect of the Quakers to answer the latter otherwise than in affirmative.

Placed as we were a year ago, in imminent peril of a War between England and the United States, growing out of the Trent affair, with the sober reality staring us in the face, that Canada, in the event of a rupture, would be the battle field, who then hesitated for a moment to say that it was the duty of every one eligible to drill, to prepare himself for the threatened struggle. Scarcely one! What has happened may happen again. If it was right, then to defend our hearths, our families and homes it is right now to be prepared for an emergency which may overtake us any moment. If right to have men learn military drill it cannot be wrong to learn boys, who will soon become men. We now come to notice the reasons assigned for advocating the exercise of military drill in Schools.—1st. It tends to inculcate a spirit of subordination among the scholars, than which nothing is more important. 2nd. It tends to promote system and order in the school. 3rd. It conduces to the health and appearance of the individual, by cultivating that erect position favorable to the development of both. 4th. It is a relaxation from study—is alike profitable and agreeable to youth. 5th. A knowledge of military exercise may be of incalculable benefit in after life, and save many a precious hour in endeavours to learn it. And besides, the advantage of early training, when time is not considered so valuable, the youthful learner will be the best: "he that learns young learns fair" says the old proverb. 6th. By introducing a system of military drill in the Schools, the country would be relieved of a burden, and the Government could in short time muster and enrol a militia force equal to any emergency. There are other advantages which could be mentioned which we refrain from noticing just now. We ask our readers if they witnessed the exercises of the company of boys in the Union School at the late examination, whether they were not pleased to observe the proficiency shown by them from only fifteen lessons.

In spite of our "peace principles" we were delighted to witness the drill, and feel disposed to advocate its continuance, and ... We do not see however how ... made universal over the coun... the wisdom of legislative enactments. The difficulty of obtaining suitable drill masters, and the scattered condition of the schools in country places—are difficulties in the way—though not insuperable ones. There is no such difficulties, however, in Towns and Cities where it may be introduced at once with advantage.

THE DISSENTIENT SCHOOLS IN LOWER CANADA.

In Canada we have one school system for Upper Canada and another for Lower Canada. The former was founded upon a non-sectarian basis, and it would be a happy thing for us to-day, if this wise measure had been carried out, in its integrity.

The Lower Canada system on the contrary, if founded upon a sectarian basis, and that sect is Roman Catholic.

The Protestants living among the Catholics, are obliged either to send their children to these sectarian schools, or establish one for themselves, a task not easy accomplished. They are taxed by law like their Catholic neighbors for the support of the existing system, and to save themselves from the evils their children are exposed to by contamination in the existing schools, they have to go through all the trouble and expense, which Catholics have to do in Upper Canada, when they establish a separate school, and like them they often suffer from the want of sufficient means to employ a competent teacher.

The difficulties are so serious that Lower Canada Protestants are beginning to speak out on their grievances. It is the duty of the press to notice matters connected with the interests of the people wherever situated, and to advocate justice and right to all classes, irrespective of their origin, color or creed. The Montreal Witness lately in a lengthy article reviews the subject of the Schools in Lower Canada, points out the difficulties and hardships of the Protestant minority, owing to the existence of the state system of education there—contrasts it with the unsectarian system of Upper Canada, and goes so far to remedy the evil in Lower Canada as to assent to the abolition of both school systems if necessary.—The True Witness has been always an unrelenting enemy to the Upper Canada school system, but favorable to the system in its own section of the Province. It seems however of late to have come to the conclusion that if Protestants do really suffer as they are represented to do, to advocate the severance of School and State in Lower Canada as well as in Upper Canada. To be consistent with the opinions so often put forward on school matters it could not do less.

The Montreal Witness is ready to join its neighbor, and now asks us in Upper Canada to agree to the entire separation of School and State in Canada. The request is easier made than granted. The Montreal Witness knows that the people of Upper Canada are attached to their School system, and it also knows that they will not readily agree to part with it.

We must correct our cotemporary when he says "that the schools in Upper Canada are strictly unsectarian, they are neither Protestant nor Catholic; the teaching of denominational views is not allowed in them," and that the School system here is "unsectarian."

He knows that the system was at first established on an unsectarian basis, and he must know that it was shortly after successfully assailed by the Roman Catholic Hierarchy, so that in 1850 the Upper Canada system was remodelled so as to allow Sectarian Schools for Catholics where "denominational views" are allowed to be taught. These Schools are established, upheld and supported exactly as the Common Schools, are in fact part and parcel of the system. We say most distinctly that the School system in this part of the Province is not unsectarian, but the reverse—and is as sure to fail sooner or later as that it exists. When the Episcopal applicants for Separate Schools become earnest in their demands, away goes our boasted semi-sectarian school system. To retrieve the error of granting Separate Schools is impossible—nothing remains but the destruction of our system, which will be produced by itself, and is but a question of time.

The difference said to be between the Common School of Upper Canada and those of Lower Canada, consists in the former being unsectarian, while the latter are sectarian. The Catholics in Upper Canada want sectarian schools; the Protestants in Lower Canada want non-sectarian ones. To the former the privilege is granted of obtaining their desire—the school system of Upper Canada provides how they may be obtained, and embraces them when so obtained, and in this sense we repeat that it is sectarian.

In Lower Canada, Protestants are allowed to have their separate or dissentient schools, as they are called, but they are equally dissatisfied with them as the Catholics are with their separate schools.

The systems of both Provinces we believe are doomed to fall.

While carried on as they are with so much manifest injustice, we care not how soon they fall. We are ready to join, however, to uphold a national system of Education, if strictly non-sectarian, not otherwise. So long as the present systems last may we expect the heart burnings, bickerings, and troubles to exist. No amount of writing or tinkering will avail or cause to make the malcontents satisfied with what they so heartily hate.

Board of School Trustees.

The regular monthly meeting of the Board was held on Tuesday night last, and the most important matter before it was the resolution of Mr. White's intended as the reply of the Board to the Circular of the Chief Superintendent, addressed to Boards of School Trustees in Cities and Towns. We regret to say that the resolution passed the Board by a majority of one. Had there been a full meeting we do not think it would have carried. The reason why we regret the passage of the resolution is, we are satisfied, that it does not gain the opinions of the majority of the Board, nor of their constituents.

It is to be regretted when such an important measure was to come up, that members were not there. As it is, in the meantime, we must submit to be misrepresented.

If the measure approved of by the Board becomes law, of which we have not the most distant idea, we should be in favour of appointing those members who voted for it to carry out the law. We should like to see them making a complaint before the Mayor that A. B. neglects to send his children to the school, and praying that he be fined for such neglect. The whole affair is too preposterous to talk seriously about. The people may as well know who voted for this absurd measure the other night. They are Messrs. White, Stevenson, Ford, Coulter and Kingan!! We hope these gentlemen may live to repent of their act in voting for such a measure.—The last named gentleman was led to vote for the resolution only because it condemned denominational schools—not that he was in favor of the coercive measure—like an unsuspecting fly he was caught by the sugar on the poison. We trust most of the others voted somewhat as did Mr. Kingan, for we are convinced that no sane man with common sense can view the matter fairly, following it to its issue, and still advocate its adoption. It is all very well to say that a compulsory tax for school purposes should be supplemented by compulsory measures to make those requiring education to go to School; but it cannot be done in Canada. It is simply absurd to entertain such an idea, and its advocates will be considered, and justly so we think, as enemies to civil liberty—as men wanting but the power to become the rerierest tyrants. Under a Theocracy, it was not made a condition that the State was to educate the child, or if it did, that the parents should be subjected to punishment for neglecting to send his child to receive State tuition.—The great lawgiver thus commands parents: "The words which I command thee thou shalt teach them diligently to thy children, and shalt talk of them when thou walkest in the way." &c. Would that some of our wiseacres would learn that it is the duty of the parent to educate his child—not the State—that in accepting State aid he must do so voluntarily—not compulsory.

THE TOWN ELECTIONS.

MAYOR—Charles Perry, Esq.

COUNCILLORS.

NORTH WARD. { Wm. Toole, H. Lawson, D. Carlyle.

SOUTH WARD. { J. Ryan, E. Burnham, W. Lundy.

EAST WARD. { S. Dickson, E. Fry, Dr. Ormond.

CENTRE WARD. { W. Cluxton, R. Nichols, J. Dixon.

The Elections passed off very quietly, and the best of good feeling prevailed; not a solitary vote was challenged in the East Ward. We congratulate the Town on their choice of Councillors.

RUSSELL'S CELEBRATED PANORAMA of the North and South which has been exhibiting so successfully in the different large cities and towns of Canada, will open here in the Town Hall, for the first time, this evening (Thursday.)

This entertainment so highly spoken of by our cotemporaries, enjoys a high reputation, and one which places it as a first-class affair before the public. It consists of some 46 magnificently painted artistic scenes, representing the principal events of interest in the great struggle now raging between the North and South, which, together with some excellent songs, descriptions and music, renders the whole entertainment amusing and interesting. We have no doubt Mr. Russell will draw crowded houses during his stay here.

FIRES.—The Barns of Mr. Wm. Boate, in the Township of Emily, were destroyed by fire on the night of Tuesday, the 30th of December. They contained five tons of hay, three horses, harness, waggon, farming utensils, &c. Loss about $1,000; insured for $400; supposed to be set on fire by parties stealing fowls.

Mr. John Carlow, Township of Dummer, had his barns destroyed by fire on New Year's night, by incendiarism. His loss is about $600; insured for $100.

Mr. John Whittington, of the Township of South Monaghan, had his barns, crop, horses and carriages destroyed a few evenings ago by fire. No insurance.

THE WEATHER which we noticed before as being so mild and open for the season continued until Tuesday night, when a light fall of snow and a hard frost reminded us of the sway of John Frost. We had two weeks of such open weather that the oldest inhabitant "could not call up a parallel." There was not a particle of snow but plenty of mud. We hope now to have snow and good sleighing, as they are much needed. Little produce has yet found its way to market. The demand for Wheat, Oats and Peas is good, and we hope to hear soon of better times.

FRANK LESLIE'S LADIES MAGAZINE for January, is received; in commencing another year, Leslie is determined to be ahead of anything yet published in the shape of a lady's Magazine.

Great prominence is given to fashions, needlework, patterns, and everything interesting to the ladies, while renewed efforts are made to make the literature and illustrations still more acceptable to all classes. With the present number a new tale is commenced, called "John Marchmont's Legacy," by the author of "Lady Audley's secret," &c.

Subscriptions received at Thos. Menzies' Book store, on George Street, Peterboro'.

SKATING in Peterboro', as elsewhere, is now all the go. The Little Lake last week was alive with a large number of all ages, sexes and conditions. The most novel sight to us was the lady skaters, and such a lot of them. We saw girls of some seven years, and old men of fifty-seven on skates. Skating as a charming recreation, and it seemed to be equally enjoyed by the lookers on as by the skaters. We hope to see this useful and rational sport kept up.

It is our painful duty to record the fate of another of our fellows under the demon influence of spirituous liquors. On the 5th instant, James Divine of Ashburnham, after recording his vote at the Municipal Election there, received some of that poisonous whiskey, he afterwards obtained so much of it that he was not able to return the whole way home, but had to be carried, was put to bed in that state of intoxication, and on the morning was found dead. An inquest was held on the body by Coroner Harvey, and a verdict returned that the deceased's death was caused by spirituous liquors, or by a fit induced by their use.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

MR. EDITOR,—Doubtless through the past year you have had many editorial trials and difficulties to contend with, but of course it is impossible for any one to do more than to sympathize with you in them. We cannot alleviate them at all—gladly would we if we could,—but it is to be hoped that you will have no objection in receiving the sympathies of your friends.—Your cares, anxieties and toils have been great through the past year, and that too for the benefit of the public, which deserves the highest eulogium that can be placed or bestowed.

And, as far as your poor devils are concerned, they too deserve praise for their task and labors through the year, and it is the prayer of your very humble servant that you and them may have many years to come, and succeed with your printing enterprise, and that with profit too.

During the year you have had much to do with a corresponding public, and some of it has been of great benefit to your readers, but during the last months of the year which has filed there has been many valuable and profitable effusions through the medium of your journal. But, at the same time, some of them has led to very unprofitable wrangling among your town-men, in particular one which occupied a great deal of space and precious time, and talent too, which has proved as yet of no particular value or interest to your readers, I have reference to the jargons of P. A. and Scribe. I believe had those two men taken their pens to a more useful subject it would have been better for all concerned, and I am of opinion that the success of your paper in a great measure depends upon the value of the articles inserted therein.

Now, sir, as a new year has dawned upon us it would be well for some of your able and willing talented correspondents to get up some question of use, or something of note, that to discuss in your paper would improve your readers and writers too. Let all be done in good nature and what would be the result? Why good friends with all parties. This, I believe, would be of more importance than all the "Brum hunts," or any such thing. I hope you will take this as only an opinion in the matter, hoping some abler pen will look at the subject and give their opinion. In the mean time I trust something will be done, and none will be better pleased than

New Year's Day at Lakefield.

SIR,—The Volunteer Company, under the command of Capt. Vizard, turned out for the first time since they received their arms, &c. After marching to the School House grounds, where they performed several evolutions under the instruction of Color Sergeant Soult, they were formed as an advance guard and marched back to their drill room.

The inhabitants of North Douro should feel proud of so fine a body of men, and no doubt will give them the encouragement such an organization should receive.

After the Company were dismissed and their arms deposited in the armory a Shooting Match was got up, at which there were some excellent hits. Everything passed off very pleasantly.

A VISITOR.

Lakefield, January 2, 1863.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

SIR,—you will oblidge by inseting the following:

FRIEND THOMAS,—I want a word with you. You say in the last Review that Mr. Burnhams objects to an Act legalizing the Railway Mortgage. Here friend Thomas you are in error. Mr. B. refuses an act which deprives the Town of some £18,000 under the flimsy pretence of securing the Mortgage, and which moreover he believes will have the effect of destroying the Mortgage altogether. Legalise the Mortgage by legislation if you will, but stop there.

Friend Thomas, you are mistaken when you say that "the Mortgage is not worth the paper it is written upon." Before you make such a bold assertion as this, and expect people to believe you, you will first need to study law a little while longer. Although "our Tom will make a very clever lawyer" and although he boasts of the advice which the Review gives to the rate-payers as to the value of the lease and Mortgage, yet friend Thomas recollect that you are only a man after all, and that all men, even our Tom, may be mistaken sometimes. And friend Thomas, don't forget that when a man is thought to be acting under the inspiration of interested parties his conduct is liable to suspicion. And let me just ask, (you need not answer unless you like) how does it come that after resisting, as you say, all you could the creation of the Mortgage, you now turn round and do all you can to disparage and throw away not only the security but the money as well. Would I be wrong if I insinuated that you may be influenced by the same reason, now that you was then, when you likewise did your best to prevent the construction of the road altogether. But we have got the road and no thanks to you, and we have got the Mortgage and we will enforce it, even if our Town stands in the way. Mr. B. assisted in making a good bargain for the Town, and he wants that bargain heartily carried out. And he don't particularly care to pay taxes all his life time for the purpose of absolving the railway of its obligations and to enrich the lessee at the expense of himself and the hardworking ratepayers of the town, even though our Tom says it must be done. The fact is, friend Thomas, though you may not yet have found it out, the people have not quite made up their minds to allow you to dictate to them what they are to do and what they are not to do. And they are not going to throw away some £300,000 even if our Tom says they must.

Friend Thomas, don't you know that it is not the part of a good Christian to abuse and vilify his neighbor. If I were to judge by the last Review, I am afraid if a man were to strike you on one cheek you would hardly turn to him the other. Solomon says that grievous words stir up anger, and I don't believe you can find justification in the Bible for calling people liars and other bad names and for trying to do them an injury. Such conduct is not becoming to a good Methodist, and one too who professes to have got the grace of God in his heart. The man who does such things will in vain stand up and promote charity and forgiveness, and the doing as we would like to be done by. His list of converts, I am afraid, would be small. Henceforth, friend Thomas, try to inculcate and to practice more the duty of human kindness. This is the advice of

THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION.

New York, Jan. 2,

Gen. Butler with his staff, and also Mrs. Butler, stopped in this city yesterday. He leaves for Washington to-morrow, it is rumored, at the request of the President.

PROCLAMATION.

Washington 1st Jan., 1863.

I, the President of the United States of America. A proclamation:

Whereas, on the 22nd of September, in the year of our Lord, 1862, a proclamation was issued by the President of the United States containing, among other things, the following, to wit, That on the first day of January, in the year of our Lord, one thousand eight hundred and sixty three, all persons held as slaves within any State, or designated part of a State, where the people thereof shall there be in rebellion against the United States, shall be then, henceforth and forever free, and the Executive Government of the United States, including the military and naval authority thereof, will recognize and maintain the freedom of such persons, and will do no act or acts to repress such person, or any of them, in any effort they may make for their actual freedom; that the Executive will, on the 1st of January aforesaid, issue a proclamation designating the States and parts of States if any, in which the people therein respectively shall then be in rebellion against the United States, and the fact that any State or the people thereof shall on that day be in good faith, represented in the Congress of the United States by members chosen thereto at elections wherein a majority of the qualified voters of such State shall have participated, shall, in the absence of strong counter-balancing testimony, be deemed conclusive evidence that such state and the people thereof, are not in rebellion against the United States. Now therefore, I, Abraham Lincoln, President of the United States, by virtue of the power in me vested as Commander-in-Chief of the Army and Navy in time of actual armed rebellion against the authority and government of the United States, and as a fit and necessary war measure for supporting said rebellion do, on this first day of January, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and sixty-three, and in accordance with my purpose so to do, publicly proclaimed, for the full period of 100 days, from the date of the first above-mentioned order, and designate as the States and parts of States therein, the people whereof respectively are this day in rebellion against the United States, the following to wit:—Arkansas, Texas, Louisiana (except the parishes of St. Bernard Plaquemines, Jefferson, St. John, St. Charles, St. James, Ascension, Assumption, Terrebonne, Lafourche St. Mary, St. Martin, and Orleans, including the city of New Orleans,) Mississippi, Alabama, Florida, Georgia, South Carolina, North Carolina, and Virginia (except the 48 counties designated as West Virginia, and also the counties of Berkley, Accomac, Northampton, Elizabeth City, York, Princess Anne, and Norfolk including the city of Norfolk, and Portsmouth, and which excepted parts, are for the present left precisely as if this proclamation were not issued and by virtue of the power, and for the purpose aforesaid, I do order and declare that all persons held as slaves within the designated States and parts of States are and henceforth shall be free, and that the Executive Government of the United States including the military and naval authorities thereof, will recognize and maintain the freedom of said persons, and I hereby enjoin upon the people so declared to be free to abstain from all violence unless in necessary self-defence, and I recommend them that in all cases where allowed they labour faithfully for reasonable wages; and I further declare and make known that such persons of suitable condition will be recived into the armed service of the United States, to garrison forts, positions, stations, and other places; to man vessels of all sorts in said service, and upon this, sincerely supposed to be an act of justice, warranted by the constitution upon military necessity, I invoke the considerate judgment of mankind and the Gracious favour of Almighty God, in witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

Done at the city of Washington this first day of January, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and sixty-three, and of the independence of the United States of America the 87th.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN,
By the President.
W. H. SEWARD,
Secretary of State.

ALBANY, Jan. 2.

CAIRO, Jan. 3.

Despatches from Gen. Sherman, on the battlefield before Vicksburg, have been received at Helena on Saturday the 27th ult. Sherman disembarked his force on the left bank of the Yazoo river, ten miles above its mouth, and forming line of battle, advanced toward Vicksburg. After passing beyond the reach of the fire of the gunboats he encountered the enemy in force and a terrific conflict of five hours ensued. The enemy was driven back beyond the two bayous that grit the rear of Vicksburg, and from their entrenched works on the hill by our shells. Saturday night the two armies lay on their arms, with the two bayous intervening. During the night pontoons were constructed, notwithstanding a terrific fire from the enemy. At day-light on Sunday a concerted advance was made by Sherman's whole force. General Steel held the left, Generals Morgan and Blair the centre, and Generals A. L. and M. L. Smith the right. General Steele turned the enemy's right, so as to communicate with Morgan's division, it having been seperated by swamps running at right angles to the main front. By sunrise the whole force was engaged, and up to ten o'clock the musketry and artillery fighting was severe. The Confederates in front of Morgan's and Smith's divisions were intrenched on high and rising ground. The position was finally carried by storm. The gunboats did not co-operate, but the Benton engaged the fortifications at Haine's Bluff during the action and had several of her men killed. Capt. Gwynne, her Commander, was mortally wounded.

The 58th Ohio, 8th Missouri, and 2nd Kentucky regiments sustained considerable loss in the Saturday's fight

Louisville, Ky, January 3.

Telegraphic communication has been resorted between here and Nashville.

It is reported that Gen. Bragg was killed to-day. There has been fighting all day, but no particulars are given. Our forces are advancing, and the Confederates falling back across Stone River. It has been raining heavily all day in the vicinity of the battle field.

Second Despatch,

There was heavy cannonading to-day, until noon, when the Confederates attacked our left wing and were terribly repulsed.

There was very little fighting yesterday. Our forces do not yet occupy Murfreesboro. The Confederates attacked and destroyed our Hospital buildings on Thursday, they being strongly reinforced from the Confederate Army at Richmond.

Third Despatch.

There was a spirited engagement at Lavergne to-day between the Mounted Rifles and Engineers under Col. Innis and General Wheaton's Confederate cavalry. The latter were rowed with loss of 33 killed.

All contrabands captured by the Confederates on the Federate wagon trains are immediately shot. Twenty thus killed are lying on the Murfreesboro pike.

Major Stenmer and Captain King who were being conveyed away wounded from the battlefield in an ambulance were captured by the Confederates, taken four miles away and then paroled, and then thrown out on the road. Gen. Willieck is not killed, but is wounded and a prisoner.

Yesterday Gen. Rosecrans personally took command of the 4th U. S. cavalry and attacked Gen. Wheeler's Confederate cavalry who were cut to pieces and utterly routed.

Capt. Mark, Chief of Artillery on Gen. Thomas's staff, is mortally wounded.

The despatch from Col. Anderson to Headquarters here, says, we have whipped the enemy decidedly and are at Christiana, nine miles south of Murfreesboro on the railroad.

Fourth Despatch.

Nashville Jan. 3.

Col. McKee is reported killed. Our loss of officers is heartrending. The fighting today was light. It ceased last night with a terrible slaughter of the enemy.

Fifth Despatch.

Nashville Jan. 3, 5 p. m.

First days fighting was all our own way, but the right wing of our army fought itself into a bad position. The third day we repulsed the enemy with terrible slaughter, ourselves sustaining but slight loss.

Washington, Jan. 4.

The following has been received at the Navy Department.

Hampton, Roads Jan. 3, p. m.

To Hon. Gideon Welles. The Monitor, in tow of the Rhode Island, passed Hatteras Shoals Tuesday p. m. The weather was fine and promising. About nine p. m. squally weather commenced, and about 10 o'clock it blew hard. At half past one a. m. on Wednesday 31st, the monitor, having sprung a leak, went down Commander Bankhead and the officers and crew of the Monitor behaved nobly and made every effort to save the vessel Commander Frenchard, the officers and crew of the Rhode Island, did everything in their power to rescue the officers and crew of the Monitor.

The Rhode Island has just arrived. She passed the Montank at 3 30 this morning, fifteen to twenty miles to the northward of Hatteras, doing well. Weather fine.

S. P. LEE.
Acting Rear Admiral.

New York, Jan. 4.

A special despatch from Murfreesboro on Friday evening states that the Confederates were twice repulsed on Thursday in fierce attacks on our Centre and right.

On Thursday night Rosecrans ordered Beatty's brigade across the Stone river, on our left, which was accomplished.

On Friday evening the Confederates made a tremendous attack on our centre, but were handsomely repulsed. At the same time they threw immense masses of infantry against Beatty's brigade, driving it across the river, when Negley's and Davis' divisions went to their aid. A most desperate struggle ensued, and all the artillery on both armies was brought to bear. At last Negley ordered a change, when the Confederates gave way. The 78th pennsylvania charged home on the 27th Tennessee, capturing its colors. Another regiment charged and seized a whole Confederate battery. A grand shout of victory arose along his whole line. The left established itself on the east bank of the river, the centre holding the enemy's former position and the right holding its original position of Wednesday. The advantage is with us. The battle will be resume on Saturday, and all feel confident of victory.

Nassau dates of the 24th ult state that the Schooner Emma Tuttle, captured by the steamer Cambridge, while trying to run the blockade of Wilmington, had put into Rum Bay, Bahamas. There the British authorities refused to allow the vessel to go to sea again without a permit from the authorities of Nassau.

HEADQUARTERS ARMY OF THE POTOMAC, Dec. 4.—Everything is quiet along the Rappahannock.

Richmond papers of the 3rd inst. contain despatches from Murfreesboro of the 1st.

Gen. Bragg says the expedition under Gen. Forrest fully accomplished its object. The railroads are broken up in several places. A large amount of stores has been destroyed, many armies captured and 1,200 prisoners paroled.

General Morgan has done his work, but the full effect is not known.

The enemy in Tennessee and Mississippi is without telegraph or railroad communication with the rear.

Bragg's second despatch of the same day says the enemy has yielded his strong point and is falling back. We occupy the whole field, and shall follow.

Gen. Wheeler made a complete circuit of their army on the 30th and 31st. He destroyed 300 wagons loaded with baggage and commissary stores, and paroled 700 prisoners. He is again behind them and has captured an ordnance train. Today he secured several thousand stand of small arms. God has granted us a happy New Year.

Lynchburg papers of the 1st, contain the protestations of a serious breach made in the east Tennessee railroad, made by a body of Yankee troops who penetrated Tennessee, 90 miles through Pound Gap, burning the bridge at Zollicoffer, near Bristol, and that at Watson, nine miles beyond the bridge at Zollicoffer. It will require considerable time to repair them.

Murfreesboro, Dec. 31.

The bloodiest day of the war has closed. McCown's division attacked the enemy's right, driving them back with great slaughter.

By 3, p. m., the enemy had been driven back six miles from our left and centre. Our loss is heavy. Gen. Rains, Col. McNair, and Col. Anthony, of the 67th Mississippi, are killed. Col. Black, 8th Georgia, C. L. Fisk 25th Louisiana, mortally wounded. Whitney's cavalry captured 200 prisoners, a large supply of wagons, and 400 beeves.

Richard Yeardon, of Charleston, offers $10,000 for the capture of Gen Butler.

The Confederate Congress meets on the the 12th instant.

Nashville, Jan. 5.

The New York Herald has the following despatch:—The wounded officers who have arrived from the front say that Murfreesboro is certainly evacuated. The Confederates retire to Tullahoma. Gen. Stanley is pursuing the Confederate rear guard. The Confederates attacked us on Saturday night and got whipped and driven back. We lost 1,000 in killed and wounded and 4,000 prisoners. The Confederate loss is very large!

Johnson Landing, 17 miles up Yazoo River Dec. 27, via Cairo, Jan. 5.—The expedition reached this point yesterday, and the troops debarked last under cover of the gunboats in safety, and marched inland to get in the rear of the enemy. A force has been occupied to-day building bridges to get to the position.

Gen. Sherman issued orders to move into the bluffs, commanding Vicksburg, tomorrow at four p. m. There is every prospect of success.

The gunboats shelled the batteries at Haines' bluff to-day for an hour and a quarter with indifferent success. The enemy have seven batteries of heavy rifled guns on each of these bluffs. The bulk of their army is reported to comprise 14,000 men.

SINGULAR COINCIDENCE.—A singular coincidence occurred in Toronto last week. Two Sheriff's officers died on the night of the 16th inst., one named Mr. James Edwards, aged 33 years, the other named Mr. Charles Roddy, aged 62 years. They had been fellow-officers for many years together, and have been often heard to crack jokes as to which would live the longest, as they had been complaining of late. Singular to say, they died on the same day, the same hour, and some say the same minute; and still further, although there was no prearrangement, the two funerals met on Parliament street and joined in one. They were put in the same vault, and the one funeral service was made to serve them both.—Mirror.

A French sportsman, in the neighborhood of the wood of Chatmarais, recently hunting, shot an unusually large raven, which had round one of his legs a small iron ring, on which were engraved the words—"Born at Courtrai, in 1772." This fact goes to confirm the tradition that ravens live a century and upwards—though, to be sure, the present raven deceased a little under a century by accident.

WHO IS RESPONSIBLE FOR BURNSIDES' FAILURE.—The Washington Star has an article pointing out the mismanagement in regard to the pontoon bridges and repairs of the Aquia Creek railroad, and asks for an investigation by Congress, to ascertain who was to blame for the delay, which has rendered abortive the plans of Burnside's command.

THE NEW YORK TRIBUNE. 1863.

THE NEW-YORK TRIBUNE, first issued in 1841, now in its twenty-second year, has obtained both a larger and more widely diffused circulation than any other newspaper ever published in America. Though it has suffered, in common with other Journals, from the volunteering and departure of tens of thousands of its patrons to serve in the War of the Union, its circulation on the 6th of December, 1862, is as follows:

DAILY	50,125
SEMI-WEEKLY	17,250
WEEKLY	148,000
Aggregate	215,375

Preeminently a Journal of News and of Literature The Tribune has political convictions, which are well characterized by the single word REPUBLICAN. It is Republican in its hearty adhesion to the great truth that "God has made of one blood all nations of men"—Republican in its assertion of the equal and inalienable rights of all men to "life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness"—Republican in its attachment, earnest, defiant, hostility to every scheme and effort of the Slave Power, from the Annexation of Texas to the great Rebellion, to grasp the empire of the New World and wield the resources of our country for its own aggrandizement—Republican in its antagonism to the aristocrats and despots of the Old World, who fondly hail in the perils and calamities suddenly thrust upon us by the American counterpart the verdict and ruin of the Model Republic—Republican in its hope and trust, its faith and effort, that the atrocious Rebellion must result in the signal overthrow of its plotters, and the firm establishment of equal rights and equal laws throughout the whole extent of our country, wherein Liberty and Union shall indeed be "one and inseperable" henceforth and forever.

The Tribune devotes attention in calmer times, and to some extent in these, to Education, Temperance, and Agriculture, Invention, and whatever else may minister to the spiritual and material progress and well-being of mankind; but for the present its energies and its columns are mainly devoted to the success of the War for the Union. Its special correspondents accompany every considerable army and report every important incident of that great struggle which we trust is soon to result in the signal and conclusive triumph of the National arms and in the restoration of Peace and Thrift to our bleeding country. We believe that no otherwise can a fuller or more accurate view of the progress and character of this momentous conflict be obtained than through the regular perusal of our columns And we earnestly solicit the cooperation of all friends of the National cause, which we regard and uphold as that of Universal Humanity, to aid us in extending its circulation.

EMPLOYMENT.

THE Undersigned has, for several years past, been engaged in a business, which has yielded him at the rate of three thousand dollars per annum, and is now willing to teach it to others. The business is of a highly useful and general character, adapted both to cities and villages, and one that any person of ordinary capacity, young or old, male or female, can acquire with a few hours' practice, and by which they can secure a very handsome income. Several young ladies who have received instructions from me, both in New York State and Pennsylvania, are earning upwards of $15 per week by it, and there is no reason why any one else cannot do the same. Invalids, even, can do well by it, as it is no peddling affair, but a business that is perfectly respectable. Gentleman and ladies of leisure who would like to learn the business for their own amusement or pleasure, will find the practice of it a pleasant pastime, and all that they will take great interest in. On receipt of $1, I will send printed instructions by which any person can readily acquire the art, and these instructions will also contain every particular relative to the carrying it on so that it will be highly profitable. The purchaser of the "printed instructions" will also be authorized to teach it to others; and I have sometimes received as high as $200, for teaching it personally to a single individual. I would state further that $1.50 or $2 will buy everything that is necessary to commence the business with, and the articles can be got almost anywhere, in city or country, or if preferred, I can furnish them. ANNUAL MEETING

INVESTIGATION REPORT - - - DECLARATION OF BONUS.

THE sixty-sixth annual Meeting of this Company was held within the Royal Hotel, Aberdeen on Friday, the 10th April.

Alexander Swanson, Esq., of Dunmallas, Chairman of the Ordinary Directors, in the Chair.

There were submitted to the meeting—

1.—Report by the Directors, which, on the motion of the Chairman, was cordially and unanimously approved of and adopted.

2.—The Balance Sheet for the past year, with detailed states relative thereto, duly certified as correct, in terms of the Act of Incorporation, by the Chairman and Manager, and also by the Auditor.

There was also laid on the Table the various Valuation States in connection with the Quinquennial Investigation into the state of the Company's affairs, as at 31st January, 1863.

The following particulars derived from the Balance Sheet and States aforementioned, show the result of the operations of the Company for the past year:—

Amount proposed for Life Assurance during the year, contained in 1189 Proposal	£454,835 0 0
Amount of Proposals accepted, and for which 961 Policies were issued	359,680 0 0
ANNUAL PREMIUMS or said Polices	11,176 1 0
CLAIMS BY DEATH including BONUSES on PARTICIPAT ON POLICIES, and after deducting Sums recovered from other Offices under guarantees	2,999 1 0
TOTAL SUM Assured under 4,750 current LIFE POLICIES	1,955,95 0 0
TOTAL ACCUMULATED FUNDS	373,563 3 3
TOTAL ANNUAL REVENUE	96,756 4 4

With reference to the recent investigation into the state of the Company's affairs, as at 31st January last, the Report States that both the principles of valuation and the details thereof, had been submitted to James John Downes, Esq., Actuary to the Economic Life Office in London, a gentleman well known as one of the highest authorities on such subjects in the kingdom, and had received his entire approval, as having been made on just and sound principles, and accurately carried out as certified in his report to the Directors, which formed part of the Appendix to their Report. This step the Directors considered could not fail to give the utmost confidence—both to the shareholders and the Policyholders—in the soundness and correctness of the valuation.

During the Quinquennial period, the claims by death, including the bonus additions which had been paid, and which had been considerably under the number that might have been expected from the Mortality Tables on which the Office rates are based, amounting to £99,975 6s 6d.

In valuing the Policies, each had been separately calculated, and sent premiums had only been used, thus leaving a surplus of annual revenue of £11,427 16s 7d., to meet future expenses and to form a source of profit for next investigation. The total amount of claims by death paid since the commencement of the Company, was £217,231 4s.

The Securities held by the Company were in a satisfactory position, and had been recently carefully scrutinised in detail by the Directors.

In conclusion, the Directors congratulated both the Proprietors and the Assured on the high position which the Company now occupied in the estimation of the public, and on the encouraging prospect of its business operations for the future.

DECLARATION OF BONUS.

From the profits realised on the Life business, a retrospective Bonus of £1 7s 6d per cent per annum for the Quinquennial period was declared, on the sums originally assured under all Participating Policies, increased by the previous additions thereto; also a further prospective Bonus of £1 per cent per annum, on the amount of the Policies with said Bonuses, on all such of said Policies as may become claims by Death previously to the 31st January, 1867.

It will be observed, that this rate of Bonus is equivalent in the case of our older Policies to £1 14s per cent per annum on the original sum assured; and the total additions to the sum assured, now vest-d, are equal to 32 per cent on the sum assured; and that as the younger ages the additions amount to upwards of 75 per cent of the premiums paid.

Statement showing the Progress of the Company's Business during the Quinquennial Period, ending 31st January, 1863:

ALSO, AN APPENDIX, containing a popular treatise on ANATOMY, PHYSIOLOGY, and the LAWS OF HEALTH; the whole making a large octavo volume of

OVER ONE THOUSAND PAGES,
with numerous
VALUABLE ILLUSTRATIONS!

THIS is probably the best, as well as the most thorough and extensive book ever published, as a Domestic or Family Medical Work. The author is now in the prime, and is probably more generally known as a popular medical author than any man living, owing to the great popularity and extensive sales of his old work, which was one of great value, but in the present advanced state of medical science is altogether behind the times. Dr. G. is a graduate of several of the best Medical Colleges in the world, viz.: of Philadelphia, and of London and Paris. He has been a successful practicing physician for nearly forty years; and it can be hardly supposed that any man can be better qualified to write such a work than he is. He has spent most of the time for several years in preparing this work—intending it, as he often remarked, as his last and greatest Legacy to Posterity.

The work contains a description of all the diseases known or common to this country—their causes, symptoms, and character—with plain and full directions for successfully treating them, telling what remedies to use; how to use them, and when; the whole stated in plain and simple language; or whenever any technical or Medical terms are used, they are fully explained; so that the commonest mind can understand them. The remedies recommended are generally of the simplest kind, such as are harmless, yet efficient, and usually such as are easily to be obtained.

Besides the diseases common to both sexes, the work contains a department on the diseases of Females, and their treatment. Also a department on the diseases of Children, which alone is worth the price of the book to mothers and all who have the care of children.

An important item in the work is its Pharmacy, or valual le Family Receipts, there being more than forty pages of Medical Receipts and Compounds, many of which will be found very important and useful in a family.

FINKLE & LYON
SEWING MACHINE COMPANY,
538 Broadway, New York.

TO parties little acquainted with the Finkle & Lyon Sewing Machines the careful perusal of the Company's Circular is specially commended. This circular can be had on application. It is very specific, and will be found highly instructive, having been prepared without care and we will abide by all statements therein made.

The following brief quotation is characteristic of the entire Circular:

"This Machine is better adapted than any other Sewing Machine in market to the frequent changes and almost endless variety of sewing required in a family; for it will sew from one to twenty thicknesses of Marseilles without stopping, and make every stitch perfect. Will sew from the finest gauze to the heaviest cloth, and even the stoutest harness leather, without changing the feed needle or tension, or making any adjustment of machine whatever."

This have so successfully overcome the most difficult point in the Sewing Machine art. It was no ordinary triumph. Definitly can we now say, "No other Machine compares with it in this respect." Hence, have we uniformly—almost without exception—taken the highest premium, "wherever the Machine has been properly exhibited in competition with other first class Sewing Machines. Hence it is that we are able to offer the following guarantee, viz.:

"We warrant every Machine we sell to give better satisfaction than any other Sewing Machine in the market, or money refunded." We never sell a Machine on any other terms. The guarantee is as reliable as the note of any business man in the land. For more than five years have we relied upon such facts for the reputation of our Machine; and without a single travelling agent in the field, there is scarcely a neighborhood on the continent where the Machine is not favourably known. We prefer such a reputation to one based on mere "talking points," as they are technically called in the trade. Hence we make but one kind of stitch, viz. the lock-stitch, alike on both sides, requiring only one-third the thread of other kinds of stitches.
